Senate Limits Arms Talks to 20 Minutes to Vote Today

Isolationists Block Move to End Debate; Proposal Beaten to Ban Poison Gas Sale

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate last night, under threat of night sessions, clamped sharp limitations on neutrality bill speeches in a drive to pass the measure before recess this evening.

Failing in efforts to fix 5 p. m. today as the hour for a final vote, leaders obtained unanimous agreement to new restrictions on debate. They forecast this would force final action before nightfall.

A 2-to-1 Senate majority for repealing the arms embargo apparently was assured by three separate test votes yesterday on variations on the present embargo law. Ranging from a proposed ba anon sale of poison gas to a permanent embargo on arms sales abroad, all went down to overwhelming defeat.

House Would Act Tuesday

Passage today would send the bill to a waiting House, which plans to call the measure up for action on Tuesday under a rule permitting "reasonable" debate with an opportunity for a direct repeal vote.

House leaders last night claimed a "safe" majority in that chamber for repeal. Tentative plans call for sending the bill to a Senate-House conference by Thursday. Leaders said "sine die" adjournment of Congress next week was a "possibility," but that Monday or Tuesday of the following week was a more likely bet. All House members have been called back, and meetings of the House Rules Committee and the Democratic Steering Committee have been scheduled for Monday.

Senate debate, now in its fourth week, threatened to delay a vote indefinitely when Majority Leader Barkley yesterday moved for swift action. A 45-minute limitation on speeches approved early this week had failed to produce the expected speed.

Isolationists Block Move

Barkley was blocked by isolationist opponents when he attempted to set 5 p. m., today for a final vote on the bill.

He promptly ordered a night session. Two hours later the agreement was reached by which no Senator may speak more than 20 minutes on the bill or 20 additional minutes on each amendment. Forty minutes has been set aside for concluding debate on the Clark amendment which would bar armed merchantment of belligerent powers from American ports and territorial waters.

The Senate recessed at 7:15 p. m. until 11 a. m. today.

Significant tests on the coming embargo repeal vote were provided when the Senate refused to prohibit sale of poison gas, flame throwers and bombing planes, and rejected a plan for a "permanent" embargo on arms shipments.

Vote to Sell Poison Gas

The rejected amendments were:

By Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut—Prohibiting sale to foreign countries of flame projectors and poison gases, which, Danaher charged, would be used against civilian populations. Defeated, 54 to 36.

By Senator Danaher—Barring shipment of bombing planes. Shouted down on a voice vote.

By Senator Downey (Democrat), of California—An embargo in both peace and war time on all sales of arms, munitions and implements of war, except to nations in this hemisphere engaged in defensive warfare against non-American states. Defeated 55 to 27.

Follows Expected Line-up

With two or three variations, and several absences, the two record votes followed the expected line-up on the coming repeal vote. Senator

Social Security Board Reports Reduction in Unemployment Benefits

Due to the sharp business upturn and consequent reemployment, unemployment benefit payments in September dropped 24 per cent below the August total, the Social Security Board announced yesterday.

Benefit payments in September aggregated $33,806,000 as contrasted with an average of $38,806,000 for the previous eight months of 1938. In Michigan, due to reemployment in the automobile industry, payments were less than half the August total.

287,000 Find Jobs

Public employment offices, the board said, set a new all-time high in September with 287,000 new jobs in private industry, 13 per cent more than in August and 42 percent more than in September, 1938.

In addition, the active file of persons seeking jobs at employment offices decreased by about 110,000 to reach the lowest point since December, 1937.

At the same time, the board said, the number of claims for unemployment benefits decreased in about the same proportion as benefit payments during the month. New and reopened claims filed by workers who had recently lost jobs dropped 24.6 per cent below the August figure, while claims carried over from previous months declined 23.2 per cent.

Other Developments

Other developments bearing on the business situation were:

The Association of American Railroads announced that carloadings during the week ended October 21 totaled 861,198 cars, 16,243 cars or 1.9 per cent above the previous week and the highest for any week since 1930.

Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics, announced that the wholesale commodity price index advanced six-tenths of 1 per cent during the week ended October 21 to 79.4 per cent of the 1926 average, practically offsetting the decline of the preceding two weeks.

Dies Urges Prosecution of Peace League

Asks Murphy to Act 'In Connection With National Defense'

By John E. Oakes

Chairman Dies of the House Committee on Un-American Activities last night asked Attorney General Murphy to proceed against the American League for Peace and Democracy on grounds of "flagrant violation" of the registration act.

Reminding Murphy of "the state of limited national emergency proclaimed by the President of the United States on September 8," Dies declared that "the case of the American League for Peace and Democracy . . . clearly requires attention in connection with the strengthening of our national defense."

Suggests Murphy Act

The league is "an agency of the Communist International in Moscow," wrote Dies, as he submitted in evidence four pages of extracts from the records of committee hearings.

Dies, whose committee created a furore Wednesday by releasing the names of 563 Federal employes said to be members of the league, told the Attorney General that he was presenting the data "for such action as you may deem appropriate," because "I feel confident of your fullest cooperation in the prosecution of violations of the law."

Before Dies' letter had been drafted, Murphy said at a press conference that he thought it "unwise" for Communists to be in the Government service, but that he had no intention of asking league members if they were opposed to American institutions.

Cahill Making Inquiry

The Attorney General stated that District Attorney Cahill in New York was investigating possible violations of the registration act, which requires all agents of foreign principals to register with the State Department.

Observing that he had "no complaints" to make about the Dies committee, Murphy pointed out that "they're in the educational field but

White House Calls Wallace's Third-Term Talk Ill-Timed

By the Associated Press

Secretary Wallace was rebuked at the White House yesterday for his statement that the war abroad had made plain the desirability of a third term for President Roosevelt.

Thereby, Republicans and some Democrats in Congress, who had criticized Wallace for making such a remark at a time when the Administration was asking an adjournment of politics and nonpartisan consideration of neutrality legislation, were given implied assurance that Mr. Roosevelt had had nothing to do with the Secretary's action.

Stephen Early, a Presidential secretary, discussed the matter with reporters immediately after a visit to the President's study.

"Is the war going to make the President run for a third term?" a reporter asked.

Early said he assumed that the questioner referred to an individual who had discussed the question in an interview at San Francisco. The Secretary of Agriculture made his statement in the California city Wednesday.

"It would have been kind and polite of the speaker to have consulted the victim before he spoke," Early continued.

"Is the victim the President?" he was asked.

"He's the third term subject of the statement," Early replied.

Informed of the Capitol reaction to Wallace's interview, he added:

"It could have been timed better if it had to be timed at all."

Prior to the outbreak of the war and the calling for the special session of Congress to consider repeal of the arms embargo, Secretary

Roosevelt Brands War Fears a Fake

Effort to Mislead People Is 'Worst in Current History,' He Says, Pledges Peace

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt, striking out at critics who charge that his foreign policy may lead the United States to war, accused them last night of perpetrating "one of the worst fakes in current history."

In and out of Congress, he said, orators have been "beating their breasts and proclaiming against sending the boys of American mothers to fight on the battlefields of Europe."

This, he asserted in a radio address, is "a shameless and dishonest fake." No persons in any post of responsibility anywhere in the United States, he said, has ever suggested that American boys be sent to fight abroad.

The President's speech, made as the Senate neared the final action on his proposal to repeal the arms embargo, was delivered from the White House under the auspices of the New York Herald Tribune forum on "The War's Challenge to the United States."

Praises Press, Radio

The President praised the "majority of the press and the radio" for "objective reporting" of the international situation. He said this had worked so well that he wished "for more of it in the field of domestic news."

After repeating that this country is neutral and does not intend to get involved in the war, the President said:

"That we can be neutral in thought as well as in act is, as I have said before, impossible of fulfillment because again, the people of this country, thinking things through calmly and without prejudice, have been and are making up their minds about relative merits of current events on other continents.

"It is a fact increasingly manifest that presentation of real news has sharpened the minds and the judgment of men and women everywhere in these days of real public discussion—and we Americans begin to know the difference between the truth on the one side and the falsehood on the other, no matter how often the falsehood is iterated and reiterated. Repetition does not transform a lie into a truth."

Belgium Reaffirms Neutrality

Through the same forum Leopold III, King of the Belgians, reaffirmed Belgium's desire for neutrality and peace and appealed to the United States for support "in the attitude we have adopted."

In a six-minute broadcast to the United States, the young sovereign said:

"Belgium, neutral, loyal and strong, fulfills an eventually peaceful mission. She stands with other neutrals as a stronghold for peace."

Emphasizing Belgium's ties to the United States, he said:

"I hope the American Nation, to whom we feel so closely drawn, will take courage and support us in the attitude we have adopted."

The King waited up until after 2 o'clock, Belgian time, to speak from a microphone in Laaken Palace.

Chamberlain Reports Five Ship Captures

London, Oct. 26.—While it has been generally supposed here that the British fleet since the beginning of the war had swept the seas clear of German shipping, Prime Minister Chamberlain informed the House of Commons this afternoon that five enemy ships had been captured by blockading squadrons, presumably in the past few days. A sixth Nazi ship was scuttled by her crew to avoid capture, Chamberlain said.

[Britain issued last night the first general call for volunteers since the war began, the Associated Press reported. A war-office announcement said voluntary enlistment was being opened for cavalry, infantry, artillery and engineers. Previously, enlistment of only specialized classes had been asked. Age limits for volunteers were set at 22 to 35 years in Great Britain, and 20 to 35 years in northern Ireland. After acceptance on the first call those enlisted will be sent home with orders to report on November 15.—Editor's note.]

Halifax Excuses Russia

An indication that at the moment, at least, Britain has no intention of raising the question of the Soviet occupation of Poland was given to the House of Lords today.

Replying in a debate in which the Earl of Listowel had said that the British guarantee to Poland was intended to be only against Germany, Foreign Secretary Halifax said the statement carried the whole-hearted assent of the Polish government, both past and present, and indicated that it had been implicit in all conversations with Col. Josef Beck, the former Polish foreign minister.

"The last thing I would want to do would be to defend the action of the Soviet government at the particular time in which they took it," Lord Halifax said. "But it is right to remember two things. They would never have taken that action if the German government had not started it and set an example for it when they invaded Poland without any declaration of war. Secondly, it is worth recalling that the action of the Soviet government has been to advance to the Russian boundary recommended at the Versailles conference by Lord Curzon, then British foreign secretary."

Britain 6,000 Tons Ahead

Chamberlain told Commons that despite the loss of 22,715 tons of British shipping through the expected intensification of submarine warfare, in the past few days the enemy had lost 33,000 tons, leaving a net gain to Great Britain of nearly 6,000 tons.

Chamberlain did not reveal the time or place where the enemy ships were captured and the British admiralty later refused to amplify

Frat Boys Hone for Goldfish After 4 Days of Nazi Rations

Nerves Taut, Vitality Lowered and Belts At Last Notches in Test to See if Carolinians Can Live on German Food

By Walter Logan.
United Press Staff Writer.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 26.—Boy, bring me a goldfish!

I've just had dinner with 24 half-starved brothers of Pi Kappa Alpha at State College and now I know why college boys eat goldfish. I could eat a dozen. But what I really want is a plate of fried chicken, some hot biscuits and enough gravy to cover the whole works.

But you'd better not mention fried chicken out at the Pi-K-A house. The brothers tonight completed four lean days of Nazi war rationing and their dempers are frayed, their nerves are taut and their vitality lowered. Their faces and their belts are drawn to the last notch.

They're worried about the outcome of their intramural sports competition, their grades and a dozen other things. Mostly they are worried about several members of the wrestling squad who showed up late today and didn't get anything to eat but baked potato without butter.

The Pi-K-As started the four-day diet at breakfast Monday morning to see what effect food rationing was having on the German population. The diet list was made up from press reports of Nazi food quotas.

Today, they were having a "Sunday dinner," which they termed the best meal of the series. Each had a baked potato, some cabbage with vinegar on it, a morsel of roast veal and chocolate pudding. It wasn't the food, it was the quantity. We had less than two ounces of veal apiece—two good mouthfuls.

Monday they had pork sausage and spinach; Tuesday they had a weird combination of carrots, apples and potatoes, all cooked together.

Wednesday was onion soup day, with bacon and potatoes.

Lawson J. (Red) Ingram, of High Point, N. C., one of the 24 victims, confessed that he and the others had lost from 2 to 3 pounds apiece since Sunday.

The boys were of the unanimous opinion that one could live indefinitely on the restricted rations—but that malnutrition, weakness and loss of weight was inevitable. The athletes complained they were easily exhausted.

City of Flint and Crew Reported Turned Over To Germany by Russia

Pocket Battleship Deutschland's Captain Said 'Kindness' Prevented Sinking, Relates Britisher Who Slipped Ashore at Tromsoe

By Frank R. Kelley.

Following is an eyewitness account of the capture of the City of Flint by the vessel's British radio operator, James G. McConnochie, of Glasgow, and copyrighted by the London Daily Mail. McConnochie landed at Tromsoe with the captured crew of the British vessel Stonegate.

Bergen, Norway, Oct. 26.—We left New York on October 3 and nothing happened until six days later at 2:50 p. m. I noticed a ship on the horizon.

Looking through my glasses I made her out to be a large warship. Everyone thought it was a British or French cruiser come out to meet us.

Then, as we drew closer, we saw she was flying the German flag. All her guns were trained on us. She signaled to stop and ordered us to shut down the radio apparatus.

Well, we stopped and at a quarter to 4 were boarded by a number of German sailors and officers.

They were armed with revolvers and hand grenades.

The warship we then saw was the "pocket battleship" Deutschland.

The German officer in charge of the boarding party asked to see our papers, and finding that we carried large quantities of oil, he signaled to the Deutschland for orders.

The German officer told us the matter was serious. He didn't like what he had to do, but England had started a war.

However, owing to the kindness of his commanding officer we were not to be sunk, but he had orders to put a prize crew aboard and take us to Germany.

He said the Deutschland had sunk the Stonegate (5,044 tons, of London, which we passed on our way from Valparaiso, Chile, to England), and he would put her crew of 28 aboard our ship.

This he did and the Deutschland left us with the German prize crew in command.

At once they changed our course to due north and . . . took control

American Seamen Believed Held on Board as Vessel Sailed Under Nazis

By G. E. R. Gedye
Wireless—Copyright by New York Times.

Moscow, Oct. 26.—The steamship City of Flint has left the port of Murmansk, presumably with the American officers and crew aboard as prisoners of her German prize crew.

A very brief communique broadcast at midnight on the Russian radio tonight stated that the order had been given to free the vessel. After inspecting the cargo the naval authorities at Murmansk, it was said, gave the order that the ship should be released, "at the same time obliging it to leave the port immediately."

Beyond this meager official statement no further details were obtainable. Nothing was stated concerning the status of the American crew.

[The action came a few hours after Secretary of State Hull, at Washington, revealed he had demanded two days ago that the ship be returned to the American crew.—Editor's note.]

The American Embassy said tonight it had no information to add to the official broadcast as it had no further word from the Russians. Since the embassy has heard nothing concerning the crew beyond the statement released to Washington that they are safe and well aboard the ship it must be concluded that the Germans put to sea again with their American prisoners.

Distress May Be Basis

The case probably will be governed by The Hague Convention of 1907 which provides that a neutral vessel captured at sea may be brought to a neutral port by a prize crew in any of the usual cases of distress at sea, such as engine trouble, which the Russians gave as an explanation, or lack of charts, rendering the vessel unnavigable, which the German radio declared to be the case.

The Hague Convention provides that a vessel may remain in a neutral port a reasonable period of time to make good such deficiencies, whereafter she must proceed to sea again.

There is nothing in this convention governing the fate of the neutral crew aboard the prize.

That the Soviet Union blundered technically is held to be quite clear from the fact she first interned and then released the German prize crew. Either they were entitled to enjoy the benefits of The Hague Convention and should not have been interned or they should have remained interned and the prize handed over to her American master.

The phrase in the Russian communique saying the cargo has been examined must presumably now be interpreted legalistilaly to mean the Russians have satisfied themselves by comparison of the cargo with the German contraband list (incidentally "unilaterally" compiled, which the Soviet Union in last night's protest to Britain cited as a reason for refusing tto recognize the British blockade) that the prize crew were within their rights.

Embargo Repealists Assailed

Meantime, a sharp attack on efforts to repeal the United States neutrality law was made in the Soviet newspaper Red Star.

"The efforts of English and French imperialists to convert the war in western Europe into a world war are meeting with active support on the part of reactionary circles in the United States," the newspaper said.

"The American bourgeois press is

French, Nazis Fight in Rain, Sleet, Snow

Germans Halt Swiss, Dutch and Belgian Telephone Service

Paris, Oct. 26.—French and German advance guards fought in snow, sleet and heavy rain tonight along the 100-mile northern flank of the Western Front as the French studied Nazi outpost lines with an eye to a possible German offensive.

French military observers believed the renewed German activity was designed to cover final preparations for an offensive in force, either a frontal assault on the Maginot Line or a flanking attack through Switzerland or the Netherlands.

While some French military men still expressed doubt that final orders to launch a German offensive would be given this late in the year, new attention was riveted on the possibility of a flank attack as a result of developments in neutral countries protecting the wings of the French armies on the Western Front.

Germans Halt Telephones

Reports reaching Paris from Holland, Belgium and Switzerland said the Germans had suddenly established a rigid control of communications to those countries shortly after noon.

Telephone calls to both Belgium and the Netherlands, these advices said, were interrupted for more than four hours and communication was re-established only under strict supervision. Dispatches from Berne, Switzerland, said Swiss calls were placed under the same control.

Dispatches from Amsterdam told of "important" troop and plane con-

Lithuanian Army To Occupy Vilna, Ancient Capital

The City of Vilna, once the capital of Lithuania, will be occupied Saturday, the dispatch said. The district was occupied by Soviet troops when they took possession of eastern Poland last month.

Alsatian Autonomist, Soldier Doomed by French as Spies

By the Associated Press

Paris, Oct. 26.—A 60-year-old Alsatian autonomist leader and an unidentified French soldier tonight awaited execution on espionage charges.

Conviction of Dr. Karl Roos, veteran sponsor of home rule for Alsace, by a military court at Nancy today overshadowed news of the comparatively few developments at the front.

Dr. Roos was arrested February 7, almost seven months before the war started, when the French charged him and seven others with having furnished German agents with precise details of the movements of French troops during March, 1936, when Germany reoccupied the Rhineland, and September, 1938, during the Czecho-Slovak crisis.

A military announcement disposed of the case thus:

"A permanent military tribunal of the second military region has condemned to death Karl Roos, convicted of having delivered important military secrets to German espionage agents."

It was asserted Dr. Roos' conviction had nothing to do with his autonomy activities which first led to his arrest in 1928 on charges of participating in a separatist plot against the security of the state.

The soldier sentenced to death with Dr. Roos was not identified. They are believed to be the first two Frenchmen convicted as spies since the war started.

The other six defendants received prison terms ranging from three years to life imprisonment.

There was no indication when the death sentences would be carried out.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

GILT OFF THE DOME

Betting with some of the best minds in the Capital and New York, the brilliant New York lawyer, Morris Ernst, recently cleaned up over $400 in a series of $25 wagers.

Harlan Miller

Ernst's bet was that before the end of 1939 "Stalin and Hitler would be in the same bed." Some of the losers are arguing, but most are paying, gradually.

• • • •

It was a psychic bet. Ernst said he was inspired by an offhand remark by Henry Luce, the Time publisher, upon his return from Europe last spring, that all the anti-Stalin and anti-Communist signs in eminent Berlin quarters had been taken down.

• • • •

Ernst made around 27 such $25 bets. He claims he won one of them from Leon Henderson, of SEC. But Leon says he was merely a witness of a wager with Dudley Nichols, the $5,000 a week movie writer; says he has a memo to prove it.

Now Ernst wants to bet $25 at 2 to 1 that we won't get into the war within one year, or even money that we won't be in it within two years. . . .

There have been no takers, which corroborates my observation that no one around here (even the most warlike pro-embargo Senators) expect us to become embroiled—even if the embargo is repealed.

Originally listed with those against repeal, Senator Bridges will vote for repeal.

Some of them made this decision when Hitler marched into Prague—it looked like a restrained 1939-40 social season even then, with fewer parties to miss. So there are quite a few babies on the way—from the Cabinet through official and Army and Navy circles. It's an ill wind, etc.

If, however, the worst should come to the worst, if the Atlantic dries up and war descends upon us, some of the big-hearted Democrats around the War Dept. would be willing to help Tom Dewey, the GOP hope, to get a commission as first lieutenant under the Judge Advocate General of the Army.

When J. Edgar Hoover teaches brave, clean-cut young patriots to be G-Men, in the course on counter-espionage he uses red-haired Mrs. Dilling's famous book, "The Red Network," as a textbook. It's a book that has aroused the scorn of the New Dealers, and few take it seriously.

Officially the book is not regarded as scholarly enough for a text book, but it's tolerated as supplementary reading.

Embryo G-men, however, are taught casually to keep watch (out of the corner of their eye) on the ones jittery Mrs. Dilling regards as dangerous radicals, just in case, and with tongue in cheek.

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt's Popularity Rises Sharply Since Outbreak of War, More Than Ever Before

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 26.—In the two months since war broke out in Europe, President Roosevelt's popularity, as measured by the American Institute of Public Opinion, has shown the sharpest increase ever recorded in the Institute's five years of public opinion soundings on the New Deal.

The October index, based on interviews with a cross-section of American voters in every State, shows an 8-point rise since August and finds President Roosevelt more popular today than he was when re-elected in 1936. Of all voters in the poll, 64.9 per cent said they approve of Roosevelt as President today, as compared to 61.0 in a survey a month ago, and 56.6 per cent two months ago. The President was re-elected in 1936 with 62.5 per cent of the major party vote.

GEORGE GALLUP

Favor Foreign Policy

The President's largest gains in popularity have come in those groups of voters who were least favorable to him before the war broke out in Europe. Thus, the survey finds an 11-point increase in his popularity since August among the upper income group, and a nearly comparable rise among voters 50 years of age and over, who were previously Republican in their leanings.

The chief reason for the increase appears to be the popularity of the President's foreign policy. Institute polls on various phases of the President's program, including revision of the neutralty act, show majorities in favor of his course and indicate substantial agreement over foreign policy among Democrats and Republicans.

In other recent surveys the institute has found a rise in sentiment for a Roosevelt third term, with 48 per cent fatvoring a third term, as compared to 40 per cent before the war. Many voters say, however, that if the war is still going on next year, they would reconsider their present objections to a third term. The actual vote is 52 per cent for a third term if war continues, 48 per cent opposed.

The President's popularity gains have been large in those geographical sections where opinion on the New Deal was most divided prior to the war. In New England and in the East Central States, where institute interviewers in August found only 51 per cent in favor of Roosevelt, today's survey shows a clear majority in favor of the President. The smallest gains since August have come in the two areas which were already overwhelmingly pro-New Deal—the South and the Far West.

	Approve Roosevelt. Today.	Aug.

Middle Atlantic	65	54

How Many People Are Interviewed

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 26.—From its inception, the American Institute of Public Opinion has been criticized for its findings and methods, first by Democrats, later by Republicans and subsequently by the supporters of various programs which have not happened to win the approval of a majority of voters.

In most cases the criticisms have come from persons who disagreed with majority viewpoints expressed in the surveys.

The latest criticism comes from Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, who takes exception to the institute's methods in its current surveys on the neutrality act.

He infers that there is some closely guarded secret in the way public opinion surveys are conducted, some air of mystery which should be dispelled by public investigation. The American Institute of Public Opinion has no secrets; it welcomes any kind of study of its methods.

As a matter of fact, the institute has published a booklet describing in detail its survey methods. Each year a copy of this booklet is mailed to every member of Congress. A copy will be sent free to anyone in the United States who writes to the American Institute of Public Opinion, Princeton, N. J.

The distinguishing feature of the new science of public opinion measurement is the fact that it relies for its accuracy on a scientifically selected sample of voters in each State and not upon broadcasting millions of ballots. Depending upon statistical requirements the institute includes from 3,000 to 60,000 interviews in each survey.

Actually in the survey reported today on President Roosevelt's popularity 12,000 interviews were included. Such a sample insures that any error due solely to the number of people interviewed will not, under any practical circumstances, exceed 2 per cent. According to the laws of probability, the statistical odds are 997 in 1,000 that the error due to size of sample will not exceed 1.3 per cent. From a scientific point of view the institute might have included only a fourth as many ballots, or 3,000, and achieved virtually the same degree of accuracy.

Price Above Parity, Fiscal Officials Say; Halt Cotton Loans

By the Associated Press

White House approval of an Agriculture Department loan program on this year's cotton crop was reported yesterday to have been withheld pending study of questions raised by the General Accounting Office.

It was said at the Agriculture Department that the General Accounting Office had raised objections to the program on the ground that it was not mandatory under provisions of the crop control law.

Under the crop law, commodity loans must be made available to growers on cotton when the average price of ⅞-inch middling cotton on the Nation's ten spot markets falls below 52 per cent of "parity," the price goal of such legislation. Officials said that an average price of about 8.3 cents would make loans mandatory. However, prices on the ten markets now average about 8.9 cents, officials said.

In proposing a loan program at this time, Agriculture Department officials said they hoped to establish a "bolstering" influence on markets and prevent prices from falling below current levels.

Under the loan program, growers could store their cotton and obtain a Government loan on it. Thus they would be in a position to hold title to the crop and benefit from any future price advance.

The proposed program would establish a base loan rate of 8.3 cents a pound, the same as last year's program. It carried provisions for location differentials under which cotton stored at or near principal markets would be eligible for a higher rate than cotton stored at remote points.

Stocks of cotton accumulated under previous loan programs now total about 11,000,000 bales.

Army Fliers Win Mackay Award for Argentine Argosy

Secretary of War Woodring yesterday announced the waard of the Mackay Trophy for 1938 to the Second Bombardment Group, Langley Field, Va., in recognition of its "goodwill" flight to Buenos Aires.

The trophy, awarded annually for the outstanding achievement in military aviation, will be presented to Lieut. Col. Robert Olds, commander of the group, October 31, at Langley, shortly before the unit leaves on another such flight to South America. On November 10, seven planes of the group fly to Rio de Janeiro to take part in the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Republic of Brazil.

In announcing the award, Secretary Woodring said the 1938 flight proved of great value in testing the navigational proficiency of Army Air Corps personnel.

Winds' Vagaries Delay Danish Cadets' Arrival

Well, the good ship Danmark will be coming up the river when she comes.

That, in effect, was the best Navy Yard officials could predict yesterday about the arrival of a Danish merchant marine sailing vessel, which is depending on the winds, if any, to bring her here from Baltimore. She left, with her officers spurning to use the auxiliary engines, on Tuesday.

She is 203 feet long, manned by 16 officers and 120 cadets. The ship was looked for on Wednesday; it was expected momentarily yesterday—but not by local naval officials who know the vagaries of wind.

Trunk Slayer's Brother Says She'll Give Up

Civil Service Worker Here Asks Mrs. Judd Be Allowed 20 Hours

Winnie Ruth Judd, escaped Arizona murderess, will return voluntarily to the Arizona State Hospital "if permitted to do so," her brother, Burton J. McKinnell, Civil Service Commission employe, said yesterday.

"She will give herself up automatically if they permit her to carry out her plans," he asserted.

At the same time, McKinnell predicted, if Winnie Ruth is captured the State will attempt to prove her sane and once more try to hang her for the trunk slaying of two young nurses eight years ago.

"In that event," said the brother, "we are going to take an appeal to the United States Supreme Court if necessary."

Red-headed and bearing a sharp resemblance to pictures of his sister, McKinnell attributed her escape to "suppressive measures" taken by State hopital authorities. He said pressure had been exerted by "political enemies of Gov. Jones" to keep Winnie Ruth confined to the hospital with limited privileges.

"She apparently reached the desperation point, although I think her decision to flee was a foolish move—the first major blunder she has committee since she entered the hospital," he said.

Earlier McKinnell sent messages to several West Coast papers, which he asked be relayed to Mrs. Judd's attorney, reading in part: "If everything goes well for the next 20 hours the probabilities are that no court action will be necessary. One major blunder has already been committed."

McKinnell said he meant that after 20 hours of freedom his sister would return voluntarily. He said the "blunder" was her original decision to escape.

The fugitive's brother was sharply critical of hospital authorities for "clamping down" on Mrs. Judd. Previous administrations, he added, had allowed her more or less leeway.

"Every administration up to the present one has liked her," said McKinnell. "Officials often said what a good influence she was. She earned $10 to $20 a month doing hairdressing."

Mayor Forsyth Fined $1,200 In Conspiracy

3 Women Placed On Probation in Front Royal Case

By the Associated Press

Harrisonburg, Va., Oct. 26.—Judge John Paul imposed a fine of $1,200 today on Mayor J. Frank Forsyth, of Front Royal, and placed on probation three colored women who were found guilty by a Federal district court jury of conspiracy to obstruct justice.

The court told Forsyth and the three women, Eloise Jackson, Steva Jackson Banks and Edith Boyd, that the conspiracy charge was a very serious offense.

The jury's verdict upheld the Government's contention that the four conspired to influence witnesses who were to appear before a Federal grand jury.

Lazarus Jackson, colored employe of Forsyth, was charged with criminal assault upon a girl in the Shenandoah National Park last December. Subsequently, the Government contended, the Front Royal official and the colored women attempted to dissuade the victim and her mother from appearing before the grand jury or, at least, to modify their accusations.

Mayor Forsyth, however, steadfastly denied the conspiracy accusation, contending his only interest in the case was that of an employer for a faithful employe.

The Alexandria Home Owners Protective League held an organization meeting last night and formulated plans to battle the city's impending prosecution of some 300 Zone A area property holders whose homes are two-family dwellings.

Seventy-five home owners named R. F. Hunt, acting president, and R. A. Kleinfelder, secretary-treasurer, to hold office until permanent leaders are elected at the next meeting. The group voted to obtain legal counsel in its fight with the city.

Edison Praises Dr. Daniel For Long Naval Service

Hydrographic Office Official Retires Oct. 31 After Half Century at Desk, Native of City and 'G. W. U.' Graduate

Retiring from the Navy Department after 50 years of continuous service, Dr. Robert A. Daniel, chief of the engraving section of the Hydrographic Office, yesterday received a commendatory letter from Acting Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison.

Appointed an apprentice engraver on July 1, 1889, Dr. Daniel has served in the Hydrographic Office without interruption to date. He was named chief engraver, 12 years ago, and will retire October 31.

"During this long period of faithful service," Edison wrote, "I find your record is one to be proud of, and that you are now leaving the service in good health, with the knowledge that the imprint of your service is permanently recorded in chart engravings, covering all parts of the world.

"Such an excellent record of service is an accomplishment worthy of the highest commendation. The Acting Secretary of the Navy takes great pleasure in complimenting you upon this occasion and is extending to you his best wishes for many years of health and happiness."

Dr. Daniel was born here and attended the local schools. He holds the degree of doctor of medicine from Columbian College, now George Washington University.

Early yesterday Dr. Daniel, who resides at 1661 Newton street northwest, started on a three-week automobile trip.

"He's just going to drive around and enjoy himself," his daughter said.

Mexican Barter Oil Is Reported Seized

By the Associated Press

Secretary Hull said yesterday he had heard reports that two tankers carrying Mexican oil had been captured by the British.

According to the reports, the oil had been shipped from Mexico in Norwegian tankers by W. R. Davis, oil sales promoter who arranged several barter deals exchanging Mexican oil for German goods. The reports said Sweden was the announced destination of the ships, but the British suspected the oil was destined for Germany.

Gov. Long Ends 'Purge;' Tax Probe Dropped

Prosecutor Resigns, Successor Quashes Reduction Hearings

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Oct. 26.—Charles A. Byrnes, Orleans Parish district attorney, resigned today and was replaced by his assistant, Nells F. Hertz, who immediately obtained dismissal of court proceedings in which charges of a widespread tax reduction racket here were being investigated.

Byrne's resignation completed an involved legal purge begun Monday by Gov. Earl K. Long when he removed Attorney General David M. Ellison and Assistant Attorney General James O'Connor in a move interpreted by political observers as meant to stop the tax hearing.

Hertz's first action was to ask dismissal of the three-judge court hearing of charges against Byrne growing out of a grand jury "revolt" against him. This hearing had opened investigation of the alleged tax reduction operations and many prominent businessmen were called as witnesses.

The motion requested termination of the hearing on grounds that the Byrne resignation automatically ended legality of the proceedings. Attorneys for seven grand jurors accusing Byrne of obstructing their work opposed the motion, contending the jurors' petition was directed against the entire staff of the district attorney's office.

Byrne gave illness as reason for his withdrawal.

Boy, 17, Held As Schoolmate Is Hit by Car

Anacostia Student Struck Near School; Two Children Hurt

Three boys were injured, two seriously, in traffic mishaps yesterday while police continued to question a colored motorist in connection wth a hit-run traffic fatality.

Ralph Breckenridge, 17, of 1802 Twenty-fourth place southeast, was near death at Providence Hospital last night, and a schoolmate, William Britten, also 17, of 3302 Fifth street southeast, was charged with operating an auto with bad brakes.

Both students at Anacostia High School, Breckenridge was riding a bicycle at Sixteenth and Q streets southeast when he was struck. The school is at that corner. According to police, young Britten was driving his father's car.

Britten took the injured boy to Providence, where doctors said his condition was critical.

Whitney Winegard, 3, of 418 Shepherd street northwest, ran from behind a school boy patrol at Fifth and Shepherd streets into the path of a light delivery truck. He was taken to Casualty Hospital, where he was treated for body and head injuries.

Police charged the truck driver, Harry T. Payne, colored, 21, of 2206 Flagler place northwest, with operating with a bad hand brake.

The third victim was Donald Newman, 8, of 932 Independence avenue southwest, who was knocked down at Ninth street and Virginia avenue southwest. Clara Hullings, 55, of Silver Hill, Md., driver of the car, took the child to Providence Hospital, where he was treated for head cuts.

Police were holding Sam Richardson, colored, 46, of the 4500 block Eaves street northeast, in connection with the traffic death of Harry Baker, 52, of 202 Indiana avenue northwest, who was struck on the Benning Bridge Wednesday.

Sales Drives In Insurance Held Mistake

SEC Attorney Scores Practice in Talk Before Economic Committee

High pressure life insurance selling methods during contests designed to make agents work harder were criticized yesterday by Gerhard A. Gesell, Securities and Exchange Commission attorney, as the National Economic Committee switched from gasoline to life insurance.

Thomas I. Perkinson, president of the Equitable Life Insurance Society of New York City, defended the practice. He said such campaigns "pepped" up the agents and increased the number of policy holders.

Life insurance agents, he said, thoroughly enjoy the campaigns and "pep" meetings.

"They'll stand more talking than any group of persons I know," he said.

Not Bad Policies

Gesell pointed out that most of the larger insurance companies have discontinued campaigns because they result in a lot of undesirable policies which are not kept up.

Gesell read into the record a letter from a large Kansas City agent, who referred to this type of sales as "hoey business."

"All life insurance selling is done by overcoming resistances," Perkinson remarked.

"Since 1929 many people have come to me and expressed gratification because some agent cornered them, and almost stuck a gun in their ribs to induce them to buy insurance," he added.

Frank Airs Views

Jerome Frank, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, brought up the subject earlier in reference to the "disgruntled feelings of those who have been high-pressured into buying more insurance than they can afford."

Parkinson admitted, under questioning, a few agents do the major portion of the life insurance business. Twenty-five per cent of the Equitable agents, he said, did 64 per cent of that company's business.

Log-Cabin Zoning Draws 50 Despite Cancellation

Despite announcement that a public hearing on the petition of Peter Fritz for rezoning of the Log Cabin Inn property on Georgia avenue near Wheaton, Md., had been canceled, nearly 50 persons appeared to register protest last night.

Washington I. Cleveland and Frederic P. Lee, both former presidents of the Montgomery County Civic Federation, told them Fritz had withdrawn his application.

Names of those who appeared were taken by the federation representatives, who assured them they would be notified if any further action arose.

Estate Asks Tax Exemption on Funds Coster Stole

By the Associated Press

Executors of the estate of F. Donald Coster-Musica, Fairfield, Conn., contended before the Tax Appeals Board yesterday that $722,100 of his income should be exempt from taxes because "it was stolen from McKesson & Robbins, Inc."

Coster, whose name was Philip Musica before he rose to wealth as the seemingly respectable head of the big drug firm, shot himself to death last December when about to be arrested on another of the swindling and thievery charges which marked his spectacular dual life.

His widow, Mrs. Carol E. Coster, and the executors of the estate, Ned E. Ostmark and John T. L. Hubbard, Fairfield, Conn., contested the Treasury's claim that Coster-Musica's estate owed $516,627.14 in income taxes, penalties, and interest for the years 1929-1937, inclusive.

Roosevelt Calls Fleet Surest Way to Peace

Proclaims Navy Day As Edison Terms U. S. Ships Envy of World

President Roosevelt, commending the observance of Navy Day to the Nation today, declared that the "most promising way to preserve our peace lies in the ability to defend our sea frontiers."

"With a world in arms," he said in a letter to Acting Secretary of the Navy Edison, "this country is compelled as never before to maintain an adequate and positive defense."

Celebration of Navy Day this year finds American sea power at an all-time peak in fighting strength, with more ships and men than ever before in peace-time. But because of neutrality patrol duty and recently ordered safeguards against espionage the annual "at home" to the Nation today will contract sharply to exhibits of prior years.

No Visitors for Fleet Ships

Navy yards and industrial stations, closed to visitors since the war began, will continue at work. Ships of the fleet will put on full dress but will not receive visitors. Only small Naval Reserve training ships and a few shore stations have hung out "welcome" signs.

Locally, the observance will center around a program at the Marine Barracks, Eighth and I streets southwest, where sham battles, special drills and dress parades will be held all day. The Naval Observatory will also be open to visitors from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m., although special passes will be required at night.

Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, started a round of Navy Day speeches with an address before the Kiwanis Club yesterday. He said the question of whether the United States would get into war was "unanswerable" but we were much better prepared than in 1917 and therefore had a greater chance of staying out.

"America's views will have weight among the nations of the earth and her general interest will be safeguarded largely in proportion to our strength on the sea," he declared.

Edison Broadcasts

Acting Secretary Edison, in a radio address from New York last night, said American ships and naval officers were equal or superior to any, that our enlisted men were the envy of other navies, and that our naval aviation was the standard for the world.

"Where shall we look for an insurance against war?" he asked. "How may we be certain of the protection of our shores? It must not be a defense built upon promises and plans. It must be an actual fleet in being, with sufficient strong bases and navy yards to support the fleet in either ocean."

Besides the activities at the Marine Barracks and Naval Observatory, the Military Order of the World War will conduct its usual ceremonies at the John Paul Jones Monument. Rear Admiral William R. Furlong, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding the District of Columbia National Guard, and Commander Robert B. Carney will speak. The program begins at 12:15 p. m.

The Sons of the American Legion Squadron of the Cissel-Saxon Post, Silver Spring, Md., will observe Navy Day at a meeting tonight in the Liquor Dispensary Building, East-West highway, at 7:30. A program will be given by the post's drum and bugle corps. Richard Hewitt will preside.

The group is conducting a membership drive, having divided its present membership into three teams, the Army, the Navy and the Marines, under the direction of Jack Cissel.

President's Navy Day Commendation

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

October 26, 1939

My dear Mr. Secretary:

It is a pleasure to command again to our countrymen the annual observance of Navy Day in accordance with the established custom of setting apart the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt for that purpose. On this eighty-first anniversary of the birth of that distinguished American, it seems particularly fitting to pay tribute to the foresight that prompted him to say: "We ask that the work of upbuilding the Navy, and of putting the United States where it should be put among maritime powers, go forward without a break."

At one of the most tragic periods in human history, the United States is blessed in that we are at peace with all the world. That peace we shall strive to maintain by all honorable and just means. With a world in arms, this country is compelled as never before to maintain an adequate and positive defense. The most promising way to preserve our peace lies in the ability to defend our sea frontiers.

Navy Day brings to mind my long and delightful association with the Navy. I wish again to express my thanks and those of my countrymen for the devotion to duty and the loyalty of Navy personnel; these qualities conduce to an unsurpassed morale.

I should like to emphasize the confidence that our citizens have in their first line of defense. It is a faith of free men in the defenders of the democratic tradition; it is a trust that our citizens repose in a Navy that has never failed its country.

Very sincerely yours,

Franklin D. Roosevelt

The Honorable,
The Acting Secretary of the Navy,
Washington, D. C.

Hatchet Club May Buy Ferry Farm

The National Hatchet Club of cherry orchardists, packers and canners announced last night a special meeting of its officers would be called to consider raising funds for bidding on the famous Ferry Farm at Fredericksburg, to be sold at auction.

The farm is said to be the locale where George Washington chopped down the cherry tree. William M. Hutzen, Hatchet president, said he had suggested to President Roosevelt the farm be made a national shrine.

Quality

makes all the difference in

Woodward & Lothrop Cleaning

Quality . . . expressed in the care with which your delicate things are handled. Quality . . . expressed in attention to detail. Quality . . . as interpreted by us makes all the difference between Woodward & Lothrop Cleaning and ordinary cleaning.

Not enough that we should use good chemicals—they must be the finest obtainable. Not enough that your things should be simply cleaned—they must be spotted carefully by hand to remove those hard-to-clean stains. Not enough that your things should have a cursory examination before they are cleaned—they are checked at every stage of the process, and after the cleaning is complete.

Whether it is women's apparel or men's clothing—furniture or curtains and draperies—you can be assured of Quality. And here are some of the reasons why your things are returned to you fresh—clean—sparkling:

In the Quality Dry Cleaning of Women's Apparel and accessories we remove fragile trimmings to prevent breakage during cleaning—longer immersion in dry cleaning fluids insures thorough cleaning—careful spotting—garments finished on wrong side to avoid "shine"—coat linings finished by hand—fur trimmings are carefully glazed—minor rips and repairs made without additional charge.

In the Quality Dry Cleaning of Men's Apparel we vacuum clean pockets, cuffs and inseams to remove all dust and lint—linings are pressed—original shape is maintained in pressing—minor repairs are made at no extra charge—wooden garment hangers aid in retaining shape.

In the Quality Cleaning of Your Furniture we thoroughly vacuum clean every piece—specially prepared soap suds only are used, with water at the correct temperature—difficult stains are removed through dry cleaning—thorough steaming brings up the nap and freshens the appearance of fabrics—careful wrapping to insure "fresh" delivery.

In the Quality Cleaning of Your Curtains and Draperies we take into consideration the fact that they are the one article of homefurnishings that are exposed to more-or-less abnormal wear and service—and we clean them thoroughly and very carefully to restore original sparkle and freshness.

Note—if at any point in the cleaning processes any questions arise—we notify you promptly and discuss them with you before continuing the cleaning. You are safe-guarded every step of the way.

Refugee Group Will Plan for Present Exiles

Committee Decides To Let President's Broad Program Wait

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer.

Officers of the Intergovernmental Committee for Refugees yesterday concluded their meetings here without agreeing to undertake, as President Roosevelt had proposed, a huge new program for resettlement of millions of war refugees in the earth's "vacant spaces."

They decided, instead, to continue surveys with a view to developing all possible projects in out-of-the-way places for relocation of political refugees forced out of Germany before outbreak of the war. It was for this purpose that the committee was originally formed.

Failure to adopt the President's suggestion, it was revealed, was due to objections of the British and French governments. The latter contended that they were fighting a war to end such things as the refugee problem and the ideology which had given rise to that problem. They will win the war, they argued, and when they do the refugee problem will cease to exist.

Proposal Problematical

Mr. Roosevelt's proposal was directed toward what may happen. He contended that surveys should start now for development of homes for between 10,000,000 and 20,000,000 persons who may be deprived of home and country by the present war.

The committee officers emphasized the "urgent need" of going forward with the problem of the present—that is, finding homes for between 150,000 and 200,000 Jews and other political refugees from Germany now scattered through adjacent countries, particularly Switzerland, Holland and Belgium, where the condition of many is said to be desperate.

Data gathered in surveys now being made and contemplated, the committee officer said, will be useful in case the committee should undertake to increase the scope of its work, as suggested by the President.

The group in a statement made public at the close of the meeting, characterized as "inspiring" Mr. Roosevelt's remarks at a White House luncheon October 17 in which he outlined the war refugee proposal.

It agreed that "the problem of involuntary migration might be greatly increased," as the President had said.

Indorse Survey Plan

The group indorsed Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion that thorough surveys of all possible resettlement projects should be made. Special regard should be given, it said, to the possible development of the natural resources of the colonization areas by "engineering, irrigation and similar measures."

Committee officers, it was revealed, contended that they had no authority to adopt a proposal which would commit the committee to a huge new undertaking, such as the President had recommended. Any such action, they said, would have to be taken by the representatives of the 32 governments who comprise the full committee.

Nevertheless, the executive group made no arrangement for further meetings, and did not undertake to call the full committee together at some later time to pass on the President's proposal.

The Coordinating Foundation for Relief of Refugees, of which Paul Van Zeeland, former Belgian prime minister, is head, is considering, it was disclosed, about 25 different colonization projects in different parts of the globe for prewar refugees.

Van Zeeland, accompanied by Myron G. Taylor, former chairman of the board of United States Steel and American vice chairman of the inter-governmental committee, called on the President yesterday and discussed the refugee problem in detail. Van Zeeland likewise discussed at length plans for resettlement projects at the meeting of the executive group, which was held at the State Department.

Dominican Plan Pushed

A report was made at the meeting on progress of plans for the colony of 500 families, supplemented by several hundred young men and girls, to be established in the Dominican Republic. A corporation has been set up to handle the project, and colonists will be selected and transported to the Dominican Republic shortly.

The next colony to be established will be on Mindanao, southernmost island of the Philippines. Part of the private funds necessary to establish this colony has been raised.

President Roosevelt will have officers of the committee at the White House for tea this afternoon. Before the meeting broke up yesterday, speeches were made by representatives of the various governments present expressing their thanks to the President.

Sen. Andrews Denies He Seeks Judgeship

Senator Andrews (Democrat), of Florida), declared yesterday he was not an applicant for appointment as judge of Florida's Southern District, a post left vacant by the retirement of Judge Alexander Akerman.

His statement did not close the door to his getting the judgeship. He said he understood that some of his friends had recommended him to the Attorney General.

Dall Asks SEC License

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Curtis B. Dall, former son-in-law of President Roosevelt, declared today that he had filed an application with the Securities and Exchange Commission for license as a securities dealer. He said he intended, through the Curtis B. Dall Corporation, of which he is president, to underwrite both domestic and foreign corporate financing.

Senate Further Limits Talk To Force Repeal Vote Today

Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, who announced he would vote against embargo repeal, opposed the Downey embargo. Senators Taft, of Ohio; Barbour, of New Jersey (Republicans), and Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, have announced for repeal but supported the Danaher poison gas embargo.

The day's lone successful amendment was one acceptable to the Administration. Proposed by Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, it declared it "unlawful" for any foreign nation to display the American flag on their vessels. The penalty would be a prohibition on the offending ship's entry into United States ports for three months.

The following amendments were defeated after lively debate:

By Senator Taft—Amending the gold seserve act to bar the Treasury from holding more than $20,000,000 of the currency of any belligerent at any one time, aimed at denying Treasury support for currencies of belligerents. Rejected, 47 to 37.

By Senator Taft—Tightening the Johnson act by prohibiting the RFC, Export-Import Bank or other Federal agencies from extending loans to war debtors to finance exports of American commodities. Defeated, 44 to 36.

By Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania—Setting up a neutrality commission to aid in the administration of the neutrality act. Rejected by voice vote.

Tydings Indicates Approval

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, hitherto uncommitted on the embargo repeal issue, indicated he would vote for repeal when he took the floor to assail the Danaher plan to stop shipments of poison gas and flame throwers.

"Civilization demands that we give all of the aid that we can to a nation that is being attacked," declared the Marylander, "and not run like cowards all over the face of the earth until our turn comes next."

Tydings argued that a nation attacked would use "any weapon it could get its hands on" and declared that death from gas was no more horrible than death from bayoneting or shrapnel wounds.

He said "every Senator here knows" who is the aggressor in this war, adding it was not necessary to name any nation.

"Mind Our Own Business"

"We should mind our own business, and sell as usual, and take those steps proper for the security of our own citizens," said the Maryland Senator.

Administration Senators turned out in force to oppose the Danaher poison gas sale ban, viewing this as their first trial of strength on repeal.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, argued that a soldier in "just as dead" if slain with gas as if any other weapon were used. "All you can do with any weapon is kill a man," said the Texan.

Chairman Pittman, of the Foreign Relations Committee, declared Germany was the first nation to use poison gas in the World War, and is better supplied with chemical plants to produce gas for the present conflict. He contended the Danaher amendment would assist Germany and hinder the Allies.

Vandenberg Dissented

Speaking for the amendment, Senator Danaher asserted defeat of his plan would make the United States "a party to the gassing of innocent women and children," while Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, said that to vote against it would be "to favor the use of poison gas on civilians." Senator Vandenberg said this country for 20 years has been trying to eliminate use of chemical and incendiary weapons, and to stop aerial bombardment of civilian populations.

The Downey amendment, proposed later, would have substituted an embargo much tighter than the existing ban, and make it apply in peace as well as war time to all nations outside this hemisphere. Vandenberg, who supported the poison-gas prohibition and opposed repeal, alone of the isolationist bloc refused to go along with the Downey plan.

Downey, who rode into the Senate on a pension platform, declared Americans cannot "vindicate our claim to national morality when we trade in instruments of death and become the agents of destruction."

Pending when the Senate recessed last night was an amendment by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, to prohibit by statute the armed vessels of any belligerent foreign state from entering a port or the territorial waters of the United States. The President already has barred belligerent submarines from American ports or waters.

Expected by Noon

A vote on the Clark amendment is expected by noon. The Missouri Democrat and opponent of embargo repeal in a lengthy speech on his proposal argued that the issue of armed merchant vessels had contributed to America's last war involvement, and had figured prominently in our pre-war controversies with Germany. Clark also urged that Congress not adjourn after action on the neutrality bill, but remain here for the duration of the "limited national emergency."

The day of many speeches brought three warnings that the United States might be the next target of Hitler should the Allies lose in the war and the first formal declaration for repeal by Senator Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland.

It was Radcliffe's first speech in five years in the Senate. He called on Congress to build up the Nation's defenses because "some day we may face a nation that is geared up and ready for war." He declared nothing should be permitted to jeopardize American preparedness and said the embargo must be repealed to safeguard "peace and security" of this Nation.

Supported by Hale

Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, declared "that if Hitler decisively wins this war, he would wage the world's greatest and most disastrous war against the United States."

"Victory for the Hitlerites in the present contest means that the British navy, the French army, the Dominion of Canada on our north and the British islands in the West Indies, some of which by aeronautical standards are only a stone's throw from our coast—all of these would come under Hitler's control."

Senator Hale (Republican), of Maine, also supporting the bill, declared that if Germany wins "the next move by the totalitarian governments, in my judgment, would be against ourselves. We are the most tempting prize."

Dies Urges Prosecution of Peace League

Asks Murphy to Act 'In Conection With National Defense'

we have to get evidence that makes out a case."

"The evidence before our committee," Dies wrote, "shows not only that the American League was organized in the first instance by the Communist Party acting under instructions of the Communist International and that the league has shifted its policies . . . in strict accordance with the changing policies of the Communist International, but also shows that the league is today the instrument of the Communist Party of the United States for the carrying out of the decisions of the Communist International."

Both Dr. Harry F. Ward, president of the league, and Harry C. Lamberton, head of the Washington branch, have denied that the league is Communist or Communist-controlled.

Many Reported Joining Now

At Washington headquarters of the league, it was stated last night that "a large number of people joined the league today." No names or figures were given.

League officials also stated that the name of Nathan Witt, secretary of the National Labor Relations Board, was on neither their membership nor their mailing list. (Witt had been included in the list given out by the Dies Committee). According to league officials, the name of Witt's wife was on their mailing list, but she was listed as Mrs. Anna Witt.

Dies Tells of Organization

Springing from the 1932 Amsterdam World Congress Against War, the league was organized "as one of a number of parallel national bodies in various countries, affiliated with each other under the direction of the Communist International in Moscow," Dies charged.

He quoted Earl Browder, American Communist Party secretary and vice president of the league, as stating in 1933 that the first United States congress against war, held in that year, was "from the beginning led by our party quite openly." It was at this congress that the American League was founded.

Ward, Weiner Quoted

Dies reminded Murphy that Browder, in 1933, had stated that "in fighting against war, the Communists must prepare even now for the transformation of the imperialist war into civil war and concentrate their forces in each country at the vital part of the war machine of imperialism . . . preventing the shipment of arms and troops, hindering the execution of orders for belligerent countries . . . and must intensify political educational work in the army and in the Navy."

Dies wrote that Dr. Ward and William Weiner, financial secretary of the Communist Party, testified that the party "is the only national organization which contributes any appreciable sum of money to the work of the American League." This sum, Dies added, amounts to $2,000 to $3,000 per annum, and is approximately 15 per cent of the league's budget.

"This financial contribution has continued down to the present moment," wrote Dies, "despite the fact that the Communist Party formally severed its affiliation with the American League almost two years ago."

The chairman told Murphy he saw a "close tie-up" between the league and the Communist Party in a statement issued by the league's Washington branch on August 25, praising the Nazi-Soviet pact as "a real contribution to the peace and security of Europe, the world and the United States."

of my radio room and posted armed guards at every strategic point.

Next day there was a heavy sea. We hoped British warships would sight us, but we were disappointed.

Next morning, October 11, we were still ploughing our way north.

It was growing steadily colder, the Germans were becoming very "jittery" . . . keeping an anxious watch for British warships or planes.

Still we kept due north. No ships were sighted until next day (October 12), although we crossed the track taken by convoys. We all hoped to see one, but in vain.

My diary notes continue:

October 13 (a Friday), men's nerves getting worse. Talked to Germans—they are mostly between 22 and 26 years old. Still heading north.

October 14. Today the Germans made a Danish flag.

October 15. Sighted a huge iceberg just before nightfall. Temperature 17 degrees below zero and deck covered with ice and snow.

October 16 dawn. Still afloat—after nerve-wracking night beating between icebergs and stopping frequently. Most of us stayed up all night.

We seem to be heading for the North Sea. Still hoping strongly that we shall meet British warships.

Flag Painted From Sides

October 17. Some excitement when the lookout tonight mistook a planet for a ship's light.

Course was changed. All English ordered to their cabins.

During the day the funnel was repainted. The name of the ship and the United States flags on the sides were painted out.

They put a false name over our original name and we are traveling under the Danish flag—which the Germans raised three days ago.

Not so cold. Heading northeast.

The Germans are now carrying daggers in addition to revolvers.

We have given up hope of being sighted. Running short of fresh water.

October 18. Now going due east. Should sight Norwegian coast tomorrow.

Now we have a Danish flag on either side of the ship and are thus sailing under false colors.

October 19. Much warmer now. Germans taking soundings. Evidently expect to make land. Commander stops ship at midnight. Seems unsure about his position.

Norway Restores U. S. Flag

October 20. Picked up a pilot this morning. Now flying German flag.

Nazi sailors are concealing guns under their jackets.

Landed at Thomsoe (Norway) about 5 p. m. and took on 60 tons of water.

Captains and naval officers came aboard, and, in spite of the false name and the disguise, found out our true nationality.

The Norwegians would not let us sail off until the American flag had been repainted. Norwegian destroyers came along, too.

The Germans told us they intended to land the Stonegate's crew.

I managed to squeeze in among them, and so avoided going to Russia with the City of Flint. We were brought on at once to Bergen.

Men of the Stonegate told me that before they were put aboard the City of Flint, their officers were made to sign a declaration that they would not fight.

striving to conceal from the people the imperialist aims of the war.

"Attempts to silence the Communist Party of the United States and arrest of its general secretary, Comrade Browder (Earl Browder, under Federal indictment in New York on a charge of obtaining and using a fraudulent passport), is direct proof of what the policies and intention of American reactionaries are."

By Edward T. Folliard.
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of State Hull revealed yesterday that the American Ambassador to Russia, Laurence A. Steinhardt, had been instructed to demand the release of the S. S. City of Flint.

Mr. Hull said this action had been taken shortly after the United States Government learned that a German warship had seized the vessel.

Ambassador Steinhardt, Secretary Hull said, had been instructed to remind the Soviet government of Article 21 of The Hague Convention of 1907, and also of the United State's Supreme Court's decision in the Appam case.

Alexander C. Kirk, American Charge d'Affaires in Berlin, notified the State Department late yesterday that, in response to his inquiries at the foreign office, he had been told:

That a German warship captured the City of Flint because she was carrying contraband to British ports, and that a prize crew was placed on board and took the vessel to Murmansk because of "havarie"—sea damage.

That the German foreign office had no details as to the "havarie," or damage, but that this term would cover the case of a ship lacking charts with which to navigate the waters through the course over which she had to proceed.

Nazi Purpose Explained

This excuse caused American officials here to smile. Naturally, the City of Flint had no charts for the waters en route to Murmansk, they said, because her captain never intended to go to Murmansk.

The eagerness of the German foreign office to establish an excuse for the taking of the City of Flint into a neutral harbor was understandable.

Article 21 of The Hague Convention of 1907, a section of international law dealing with "the rights and duties of neutral powers in naval war," had this to say about taking a prize ship into a neutral port:

"A prize may only be brought into a neutral port on account of unseaworthiness, stress of weather, or want of fuel or provisions."

Apparently the weather was good, and the City of Flint did not need fuel or provisions. Thus the reason for taking her into Murmansk has to be based on "unseaworthiness." And her unseaworthiness, according to the German argument, was based on a lack of maps charting the way to Murmansk, a route she had never expected to follow.

The remainder of Article 21 of the Hague Convention reads:

"It (the prize ship) must leave as soon as the circumstances which justified its entry are at an end. If it does not, the neutral power must order it to leave at once; should it fail to obey, the neutral power must employ the means at its disposal to release it with its officers and crew and to interne the prize crew."

Russian Stand Studied

The United States takes the position that if there was really no good reason for the Germans to take the City of Flint into Murmansk — unseaworthiness, bad weather, or want of fuel or provisions—the Germans forfeited their right to her once the vessel got into the neutral harbor.

An indication that Soviet Russia agreed with the German thesis that they were justified in taking the City of Flint into Murmansk was seen in an announcement made Wednesday by Tass, the official Russian news agency.

Tass said that Murmansk port authorities had canceled internment of the German prize crew because they had "ascertained that the steamer was brought into the port for repairs to her machinery."

Apparently the German prize crew which complained of a breakdown in the machinery had not heard of the foreign office's thesis of lack of charts.

Sub Convoy Hinted

Berlin, Oct. 26 (AP).—German-Russian cooperation functioned smoothly tonight with the Soviet government agreeing to release to Germany the seized American freighter City of Flint and Berlin giving support to Moscow's refusal to recognize Britain's blockade.

Well-informed German circles intimated that despite the demand of United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull that the ship be returned to the United States, the vessel would be convoyed from Murmansk by submarines whose commanders would be only too happy if British men of war would try to seize her.

FlyBacks Radio Code Scored by Roosevelt Son

Suggests It Be Given a Fair Trial to Show 'Democracy at Work'

The self-imposed code of the National Association of Broadcasters was approved in principle last night by James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, in his first address since he took ojce. The talk was broadcast by the Columbia Broadcasting System and Station WJSB.

While avoiding mention of names, Fly suggested to broadcasters and others that the NAB code be given a fair trial and that all members of the trade organization should look to the "over-all benefits" rather than find fault with a rule which restricts them.

Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, announced his resignation from the NAB last week in protest against a code provision barring expression of opinion on controversial issues in a sponsored broadcast. Other stations have threatened to quit because of the ban on paid broadcasts by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit priest, after expiration of present contracts.

Issue in Economic Power

"It may be obvious," Fly said, "that even self-regulation, voluntarily imposed, may at times actually regulate. The adoption of the code and its self-imposition by the broadcasters is an example of democracy at work."

The "really grave isue" in the controversy, Fly declared is "whether the right to speak and to present one-sided arguments on public questions shall be limited "Shall single individuals or groups of individuals through sheer economic power be permitted to buy the limited amount of time and pace in these limited channels of expression in order to advocate in a one-sided manner the views which they themselves desire to promote?" he asked.

Denies Censorship Plan

"The least freedom exists in those countries today where only limited groups of powerful individuals can utilize the radio waves with absolute freedom," he declared.

Fly said that he held "no particular brief for any detailed form of rule," however, and added:

"It may well be that in the light of experience, the rule need be changed in some particulars, with a view to assuring the public that it does have full opportunity to hear full, free, and two-sided discussions of all the great issues."

Fly said that the FCC "neither asserts nor seeks the power to censor" radio programs and that "neither the Congress nor the commission undertakes to act as a general lord for the industry."

'Training the Peaceful Mind' Explained to U. S. by Japanese

Art of Arranging Flowers, Called Ikebana, Is Best Means, He Says; First Step Is to Rub Salt or Vitriol on the Bleeding Stems

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, N. Y., Oct. 26.—The art of flower arrangement is cherished by the Japanese "as a necessary means for training the peaceful frame of mind," K. Ogura, officer of the Nippon Yusen Kaisha steamship line, disclased here today.

Ogura's statement was made public through the N. Y. K. "Educational and feature news service," under the heading, "Art of Flower Arrangement Dear to Japanese Girlhood."

"Floral schemes lie so near to the Japanese heart that a distinctive art, called 'ikebana,' has grown up through the centuries and now is a part of every well-bred young woman's education," the N. Y. K. executive stated. "The art is taught very widely in girls' high schools and among ladies of any social standing."

He explained that "the fundamental principles of the ritual of flower arrangement are three: 'Heaven,' represented by the main part, shooting upward; 'man,' denoted by a twig bent sideways in the shape of a V, and the lowest twig or branch on the left, the end slightly bent so as to point upward, signifying 'earth.'"

"In this art, which was imported from India into Japan 13 centuries ago, any flower will serve the purpose, but as far as trees go, pine, plum, bamboo and azalea are the most popular, and in flowers, chrysanthemum, peony, iris, lily and orchid are most favored," the statement continues.

To prolong the life of the plant the lower part "is burned and treated with salt, vinegar, alum and sometimes vitriol," Ogura said. "Then it is cut, bent and twisted and finally arranged properly. Every tiny twig or leaf plays a special symbolic part in portraying its message."

Hoare Urges India Stand By During War

Sees Dire Peril to Both Sides in Drift To Noncooperation

By Raymond Daniell.
Copyright by New York Times.

London, Oct. 26.—A drift toward noncooperation by Gandhi followers in the Indian National Congress is fraught with dire peril to the empire and to India and "may set the clock back for years," Sir Samuel Hoare, lord privy seal, declared today in a debate on the question of dominion status for that vast land, with its 350,000,000, part Hindu and part Moslem.

Sir Samuel spoke in Commons in reply to Wedgewood Benn, opposition Laborite, who described Viceroy Lord Linlithgow's report recommending postponement of action on Indian independence until after the war as "a clumsy document." In his address, Wedgewood Benn said:

"If we are asking India to make the sacrifices which she is being asked to make surely she is entitled to be assured that the cause wherefor this country is fighting is also her cause—freedom.

Must Uphold Professions

"It must be remembered that we stand at the bar of world opinion. It is up to us to prove before the world that we are sincere in the professions we make."

Wedgewood Benn agreed with the government and with the viceroy that no change in India's status could be made until after the war, but he pointed out that in 1917 Edwin S. Montagu went to Indian and laid the foundations for the act of 1919.

The presence of the mission in India then, he said, did not hinder India's help in the war but on the contrary stimulated her cooperation.

The deadlock in the growth of self-government in India, said Benn, "is damaging to our prestige." There was need, he said, for a conference truly representative of all groups in India.

Sir Samuel Hoare said that despite two and a half years of provincial autonomy in 11 provinces of British India, racial and class divisions still existed. For the government to withdraw now while the minorities' fears of majority oppression existed, Hoare said, would render Britain "false to the pledges we have given in the most solemn words to the Moslems and the other minorities and to the European community."

Commenting on the viceroy's proposal in his report that a consultative body, composed of representatives of all the Indian groups, be set up during the war, Hoare said this "might well prove a bridge to carry the Indians over the great divide of communal bitterness that at present stands chiefly in the way of constitutional advance."

"If this be the case," he said, these wartime meetings will make much easier constitutional discussions that are bound to take place at the end of the war."

Pledges New Study

Cooperation in the war would make certain a victory against Germany, which threatens the free existence of India as well as Britain, said Hoare, pledging the Government to reexamine the whole Indian problem after the war. Speaking very slowly and gravely he continued:

"There is the alternative of noncooperation under which the Indian Congress goes its own way and the British Government and minority communities in India go theirs. If it came to this issue, we here should have no choice. The King-Emperor's government must be carried on and it would be carried on with efficiency, strength and justice and we, like any other government, would give the Viceroy the fullest support. But let every man of good will in India and Britain contemplate the waste that such a chapter of noncooperation would mean. There would be waste of all our constitutional efforts which started so well with the provincial governments."

centrations along the German coast east of the Netherlands.

French scouts, who slashed through ice-coated barbed wire and dropped into shell holes filled with icy rain water to watch movements of the Germans, reported shock divisions all the way from the Luxemburg border to the Rhine in jump-off positions.

Each division was said to be flanked by squadrons of tanks and protected by special antitank units.

Airdromes behind the Siegfried line were reported to have been filled with pursuit, attack and bombardment planes.

The French and German advance troops clashed as the Germans took up the challenge of the French patrols after a quiet which had lasted through most of the day.

French Too Near Nazi Lines

The first blows were struck as French raiding parties snaked their way too close to the Nazi lines. They moved over slushy ground which in some sectors had been frozen into a thin crust of ice.

Fingers almost stiff with cold jerked the lanyards of field guns as the artillery took up the fight.

A military writer in the usually well informed Le Temps declared: "It seems undoubted that the Germans could launch a powerful attack against our front within a few days."

Snow fell lightly on the tree-covered slopes of the Vosges Mountains and in Haardt foothills across the border in Germany. At the opposite end of the 100-mile front, in the Saar River Valley, snow was mixed with stinging sleet and rain, which formed a thin coat of ice as it froze on the ground.

"Bad Weather" Noted

The French morning communique said the night was "quiet, as a whole" and noted the "bad weather."

The French have offered to provide shelter for the civilian population of Nancy, which is about 40 miles behind the Maginot Line, if the citizens will withdraw from the city voluntarily. Only 57 of 120,000 residents have availed themselves of the offer.

In the rear, Polish and Czech recruit armies are in training. Most of the recruits come from the mining regions of northern France and Belgium.

would make several million foreigners living in France eligible for military duty, the ministry of justice announced a plan to accelerate naturalization procedure.

In the domestic field, Finance Minister Paul Reynaud told the senate finance committee that the ordinary budget for 1940 had been set provisionally at 349,000,000,000 francs (about $8,000,000,000), almost six times as large as it was for 1939.

There also will be an extraordinary budget.

Premier Daladier summoned the cabinet to meet with President Albert Lebrun at 10 a. m. (4 a. m. E. S. T.) tomorrow.

Dutch See Nazis Massing

Amsterdam, Oct. 26 (AP).—Concentrations of German troops sighted along the southern half of the Netherlands-German frontier caused nervousness late today in villages along the border.

The German troops were plainly visible from the hills which line the frontier from Genner to Vaals.

This was said to be the first time there had been any noticeable troop movements opposite the Netherlands Province of Limburg although a week ago observers noted new fortifications were under construction in the Siegfried Line opposite Vaals at the southern tip of the Netherlands.

Many Troop Cars Noted

The Taal hills behind Vaals overlook Aachen, a key point in the Siegfried Line. The southern half of Limburg Province lies between Germany and Belgium and Vaals is the point from which parts of three countries—Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands—can be seen.

For several hours on end witnesses on the Netherlands near Venlo, Gennep, Sittard and Vaals said they saw many military cars filled with soldiers and troops on the march in the fortified and rolling country across the frontier.

These troops disappeared suddenly and observers assumed they had entered deep fortifications which line the low hills of the German Western Wall across from Limburg.

England Calls For Volunteers

his statement, saying it would disclose "too many secret matters."

Aside from the premier's statement relative to the seizure of the enemy merchantmen, most of the matters dealt with by Chamberlain in his weekly review of the war had already been discussed in the press. Earlier in the war the premier's weekly survey was the main source of news.

This week the reading public already knew that five British ships had been sunk by submarines and that a large number of German bombers engaged in raids on coastal points had been brought down by the defending forces. Likewise Chamberlain's remarks about the effects of the Turkish treaty and the speech of German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, seeking to shift the war guilt from Germany to Great Britain, had been anticipated by the official statements issued for the foreign office by the ministry of information.

Although the censor had been instructed to prevent transmission abroad of any discussion of the Anglo-Turkish financial negotiations, Chamberlain announced that the talks were progressing satisfactorily with the Turkish military mission regarding economic assistance to Turkey. The assistance to be given, he said, related chiefly to the supply of war materials.

There was one matter on which Chamberlain did not touch at all, which was a topic of much discussion among people who had read about it in their newspapers. That was Stalin's protest against the British inclusion of food and other commodities for general consumption by the civil population of Germany in its list of contraband. The reason for the omission, it was said, was that the Russian note on this subject had not been received.

Captured Ships Listed

The ships which Chamberlain said had been captured by British blockading squadrons were the Phoebus, 8,863 tons; the Gloria, 5,890 tons; the Bianca, 1,375 tons; the Poseidon, 5,864 tons, and the Biscaya, 6,369 tons, totaling 28,367 tons of enemy shipping [illegible] as compared with 22,715 tons destroyed recently by submarines, which sent five British ships to the bottom. The Gonzenheim, of 4,864 tons, the prime minister said, was the one scuttled by its own crew.

Chamberlain said his estimates of British gains over losses were subject to the decision of the prize court. Lloyd's register gave the Panama Transport Co. as the owner of the Phoebus, which was built at Kiel in 1923 and was registered under the Panama flag. Lloyd's listed another Phoebus, of 657 tons, as a German ship. There was no listing of a ship named Gloria fitting the prime minister's description.

All of the other ships mentioned, however, were of German registry. Chamberlain commented on the "growing lawlessness" of the submarine campaign against the British blockade, and said it seemed to be the rule now to sink merchantmen without warning.

There was a "deplorable loss of life," he said, in the sinking of the Yorkshire.

Many of the victims, he pointed out, were the wives and children of soldiers returning from the East. The shelling and sinking of the French ship Bretagne, with the loss of 14 lives, he said, was another "flagrant instance." Cries of "Hear! Hear!" interrupted Chamberlain when he said:

"No words are strong enough to express our detestation of this cowardly form of warfare."

Commenting on the Turkish treaty, Chamberlain declared:

"It is a purely defensive instrument, threatening no one, and designed only to pose resistance to aggression. We are proud to feel that under its provisions we now share mutual responsibilities with the Turkish people, for whose patriotism, probity and valor we have long cherished a high regard."

Cheers greeted Chamberlain when he said he did not propose to waste the time of the House by commenting extensively on Von Ribbentrop's speech in Danzig declaring that it was Britain, rather than Germany, which "desired and plotted the war." The whole world knew from the documents published by the British government since the war broke out that this charge was false, said Chamberlain.

Declaring that Von Ribbentrop seemed desirous of inviting the Soviet to join in a crusade against the British Empire, Chamberlain said he would like to read two sentences of a statement that the German foreign minister made to the press when he came here as ambassador in 1936.

"Your Friend Then"

William Gallacher, the only Communist in the house, interrupted, saying:

"He (Ribbentrop) was your friend then."

"Now he's yours!" yelled B. McGovern, Independent Labor member.

After the interruption Chamberlain proceeded to read the quotation by Von Ribbentrop as follows:

"Germany wants to be friends with Britain and I think the British people also wish for German friendship. The Fuehrer is convinced that there is only one danger to Europe, and the British Empire as well—that is the spreading further of communism, the most terrible of diseases—terrible because people generally seem to realize the danger only when it is too late."

The import of Von Ribbentrop's speech, Chamberlain said, was that the German government had made a choice between peace and war. If they had chosen war, said the prime minister, there could be but one reply, and "we are prepared to give it." Then he concluded:

"But it is not England that has challenged Germany. It is the German government who by persistent acts of aggression pursued in the face of our repeated warnings which forced us to take up arms. It is the German government who, by their reckless disregard for their pledged word and of the rights and liberties of other peoples, must bear the responsibility for this war and all its consequences."

Pope to Issue First Encyclical Of Reign Today

Purport Is Secret; Rome Expects Stand On War to Be Stated

By Herbert L. Matthews.
Copyright by New York Times.

Castel Gandolfo, Oct. 26.—The Pope's first encyclical will be issued tomorrow and it will probably be entitled "Summi Pontificatus" (of the Supreme Pontificate). This long-awaited announcement came as a surprise, because only yesterday authoritative Vatican circles said that the encyclical would be postponed for some days.

The opening words in Latin by which it may be known to posterity do not agree with the version that has been going the rounds of Rome for a week or so. Those words just as well be translated "From the Supreme Pontificate," and nobody can say today which is correct or even be quite sure that those will be the first two words.

No one outside a restricted Vatican group knows anything about the document's contents. Everyone expects something in line with the Pontiff's previously expressed ideas and attitudes, but even that cannot be guaranteed.

The first encyclicals of all Popes are usually considered their most important. From this one, the world may learn what part Pius XII intends to play in the problems which are rending Europe, whether the church will be led against Nazi neo-paganism as well as against Communist atheism, whether the church's attitude will be militant or patient, purely religious or partly political.

Contrary to expectations the Pope will not be back in the Vatican when his encyclical is issued for he is not leaving Castel Gandolfo until 6 Saturday evening.

The Pope received the carabineers and metropolitan police at the village this morning to thank them for their guardianship through the summer and in his farewell showed the affection which he, as an Italian, feels toward Italy and her people.

Wallace Rebuked On 3d-Term Talk

Ickes and some other high Administration officials had advocated another term for the President. Their statements drew no critical comment from the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt himself has never publicly discussed his 1940 intentions.

McNary Would Run

Another political development yesterday was a statement by Senator McNary, of Oregon, the Republican Senate leader, that he was willing to have his name placed before the Republican Convention next year, but only for the purpose of aiding agricultural areas to influence the selection of the Republican candidate and the formulation of the platform.

Friends have formed McNary-for-President groups in several Western States and have urged the Senator to accept delegates so that farm States and areas interested particularly in reclamation work would be in a position to make their voices heard at the convention.

McNary, who was chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee under Republican administrations, said he had "no ambitions, nor any illusions."

"But if it is thought best for the interests of the Republican Party in Oregon, or any part of the West, in order to provide party solidarity I would accept the responsibility," he said.

Stalin Demands Too Much, Says Finnish Leader

Minister Still Hopes For Accord but Sees 'Nerve Testing' Period

By Lynn Heinzerling,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Helsinki, Oct. 26.—Soviet Russia's demands were declared still unacceptable to Finland by one Finnish leader tonight, while another bid the Finnish people look at the "nations wiped off the map of Europe."

Finance Minister V. Tanner disclosed that Russia's proposals are still unacceptable, but asserted that "I still think we can come to an agreement."

Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko, addressing a large patriotic rally, referred to the last two years in which "two ancient countries have been wiped off the map of Europe; both great and small states are anxiously wondering what the future holds for them and in which direction the wheels of fate will carry them."

As foreign minister, Erkko has had an active part in the Moscow negotiations, while Tanner was a member of the delegation which went to the Kremlin.

In his statement, Tanner said the negotiators probably would start a return trip to Moscow on Sunday to resume the talks.

Fears "Nerve Testing"

Speaking in an unusually solemn mood, Erkko told the Finns they must face with calmness and courage a "period of nerve testing" and place implicit faith in the government.

At the same time he called on the present regime at Moscow to "show of its own free will that conditions have altered" in Russia.

He touched upon what many believed to be the hub of the difficulty with Russia when he mentioned Finnish neutrality.

Won't Violate Status

Finland, he said, could not make an agreement which would make it possible for her territory to be used in an unneutral manner.

An indication of the importance Russia attached to the negotiations with Finland was seen in Tanner's disclosure that Stalin himself took charge of the talks in Moscow while Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff sat by silently.

Seven persons were held tonight in Helsinki on suspicion of espionage.

Nazi 'Minorities' Cool to Reich

Copyright by New York Times.

Bucharest, Oct. 26.—Germans in Rumania are continuing to be anxious about Hitler's proposal to repatriate them to the Reich, while it is understood that Germans in Bukovina and Banat would be expected to return to Germany. Nothing is yet being said about the minority in Transylvania.

Although the idea is unpopular among a large section of the German minority—particularly the older generation—the Rumanian government would not object to the move. Rumanian exports to the Reich have attained high levels, while imports remain below the normal figure. As a result, Rumania is owed considerable money which could be paid off with the value of properties of the repatriated Germans.

SCOTCH WITH A STORY

Lake Stephanie? Why, that's in Southern Abyssinia. You can see it clearly on the map. "Sure it's on the map," says Captain White. "But that's the only place you'll find it. I traveled through the hottest, driest land on earth to find that lake. But when I arrived, all I saw was a great, empty, sun-baked valley. Yes, Lake Stephanie had dried up and disappeared! But that disappointment wasn't half as bad as the long journey back . . . days of endless marching under a blistering sun, with a few drops of liquid a day, and the nearest water 200 miles away." Does that story make you thirsty? If it does, what is more satisfying than a delicious glass of White Horse and soda. And you never have to travel far to get it. Wherever fine whisky is available, you will see the sign of the White Horse. And you will never find a finer Scotch anywhere. From the first smooth sip to the last perfect drop, White Horse is a joy to your palate. Match it if you can!

Capt. Harold A. White, explorer and world traveler, relates his fascinating experiences in this White Horse series. Follow it week by week.

Nazis Restrict Private Wires; Drive Indicated

Similar Step Taken at Polish Invasion and on Allied War Declaration

Berlin, Oct. 26 (AP).—New restrictions were placed today on communications between Germany and the outside world.

A regulation was issued providing that private telephone calls to foreign countries hereafter would not be accepted without special permits and private telegrams would be censored.

Authorized sources said newspaper correspondents would not be affected by the regulation—that no direct censorship of press dispatches was contemplated.

Telephone numbers and teleprinters of foreign news offices will be registered with the postal ministry and approved by the propaganda ministry. It was stated correspondents then could telephone and telegraph unhampered.

German officials since the first few days of the war have not attempted to exercise direct censorship on news dispatches, preferring to hold correspondents personally responsible for whatever they may write.

Offensive Believed Indicated

Some dispatches were held up for several hours today, however, and telephone lines for foreign calls were not available while the new system was being put into operation.

No reason for regulation on private messages was given. However, the view of some observers that Germany was preparing for some great offensive on the Western Front seemed borne out by the restrictions.

It was recalled that a ban on communications was invoked just before the war against Poland started and again immediately after England and France declared themselves in a state of war with Germany.

There was much talk in political sources that the Germans know exactly where British troops are stationed in France. German air forces, these circles claimed, would try to strike terror into the British expeditionary force.

At the same time there seemed to be under preparation a large-scale combined air and naval attack on British seaports and coastal airdromes. Storage plants for gasoline were to be on Germany's list of marks to be hit.

Attack on Turkey Hinted

The impression prevailed in German political circles—whether rightly or wrongly remains to be seen—that Russia soon would make another Poland of Turkey and place herself in possession of the Dardanelles. Thereby the war would assume a new aspect and strike Great Britain at one of her most vital points.

A Russian trade delegation arrived to place orders for machinery, and the German press threw its full weight behind the Soviet's refusal to recognize Britain's blockade.

A large Soviet trade group tomorrow will begin visiting factories and inspecting the Reich's synthetic rubber and gasoline plants. Artillery Gen. Sawtschenko, described as a Soviet expert on guns, is a member of the delegation, which is a counterpart of a German mission now on a similar task in Moscow.

One million tons of fodder, the scarcity of which beset Germany in the World War, will be the first delivery to arrive from Russia.

Public Blamed In High Rate of Parole Failure

Need for Right Kinds Of Jobs Emphasized at Rehabilitation Session

Public coolness, in business and social relationships, toward paroled prisoners accounts largely for the return of so great a percentage of them to prisons, Dr. F. Lovell Bixby, chief of probation and parole, United States Bureau of Prisons, said yesterday. He spoke at the annual luncheon of the Bureau of Rehabilitation, a Community Chest agency.

While other speakers, among them Frank R. Jelleff, chairman of the Parole Board, and Wilbur LaRoe, jr., former board chairman and local churchman, emphasized need for the right kinds of jobs for paroled men and women, Dr. Bixby urged that their spare-time hours be given increased attention.

Coleman Jennings, Community Chest president, urged a greater number of volunteer rehabilitation workers, and LaRoe called attention to the Federal Government's regulation against hiring people convicted of crime. He suggested that the churches take a greater interest in the problem.

Jelleff contended that care to provide parolees with the right kinds of jobs, the kind each individual is adapted to and that promises him some measure of success, is among the principal problems.

The meeting, held at the Y. W. C. A., had a record attendance and was presided over by Allen Pope, bureau president.

Duck Bootlegger Finds Mutilation No Aid to Trade

A Virginia State game warden had to call on the scientists of the United States Bureau of Biological Survey to prove that a wild duck bereft of head, feet, and feathers was still a wild duck, but he got his man.

It was revealed yesterday, Jesse Newton, of Fredericksburg, was fined a maximum of $500 for sale of two wilid ducks.

Newton was apprehended as a duck bootlegger by a warden, but since the ducks' head, feet, and feathers had been removed, the fowl were sent to the Biological Survey to determine whether they were wild. An expert skeletonized the specimens and by comparison of bone structures identified what was left as remnants of pintail ducks.

'Infantilism' Held Threat To Democracy

Lindeman Says It Takes Pessimistic Form; Cites Books

Growing pessimism and "infantilism" are threatening the democratic process, Eduard C. Lindeman, president of the Institute of Propaganda Analysis, said here yesterday.

Lindeman, speaking at the United States Chamber of Commerce under auspices of the Council of Social Agencies, said adults who enjoyed wearing uniforms and greeting everyone with a "Heil" displayed the kind of behavior one would expect in a child of 7 or 8 years.

Refers to Books

He said that infantilism, offering a convenient escape from facing the problems of the world in an adult manner, expressed itself in literature by extreme bitterness, such as "Grapes of Wrath" and "Christ in Concrete."

Also threatening democracy, said Lindeman, are an increasing perplexity about standards and values, and growing barriers to a democratic sharing of experience between the specialists and the common man. He said the German people lost faith in specialists and turned to a non-specialist who, they believed, had their interests at heart.

Has Doubts on Democracy

Expressing doubt whether the professional's training fitted him to function in a democracy, Lindeman said:

"It is not written in the stars that democracy shall prevail. Every other system in the world is easier. It is especially easy to train a person to fit into the pattern of life in a dictatorship."

He warned against "short circuiting" democracy in time of stress, and said, "if we abandon the democratic process in a crisis on the assumption that we must act as quickly as dictators do, then more and more crises will be created by these dictators, and there will be no democracy left."

Lindeman will continue his discussion of "Social Forces Vital to Democracy" November 2 and 3. Mrs. William Adam Slade was chairman of yesterday's meeting.

Secondary Picketing Results in Guild Fine

Los Angeles, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Los Angeles Newspaper Guild was fined for contempt of court today by Superior Judge Edward R. Brand for carrying on secondary picketing.

The judge enjoined the guild from maintaining picket lines in front of advertisers in the Huntington Park Bulletin and fined the guild, its president, Tom O'Connor, and 11 members $10 each. Witnesses testified that the guild members continued to picket customers of the newspaper despite a preliminary injunction.

Text of Roosevelt Address on Radio Forum

The text of President Roosevelt's address broadcast last night under auspices of the New York Herald-Tribune forum follows:

I am glad to say a word in this forum because I heartily approve the forum idea. After all, two eighteenth century forums in Philadelphia gave us the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States.

It is the magic of radio that has so greatly increased the usefulness of the forum. Radio listeners have learned to discriminate over the air between the honest advocate who relies on truth and logic and the more dramatic speaker who is clever in appealing to the passions and prejudices of his listeners.

We have had an example of objective reporting during recent weeks in the presentation of international subjects, both in the press and the radio. Right here I should like to throw bouquets to the majority of the press and the radio. Through a period of grave anxiety both have tried to discriminate between fact and propaganda and unfounded rumor and to give their readers and listeners an unbiased and factual chronicle of developments. This has worked so well in international reporting that one may be pardoned for wishing for more of it in the field of domestic news. If it is a good rule in one, why is it not a good rule in the other?

Holds Stagnation Dangerous

From the end of the World War onwards this country, like many others, went through a phase of having large groups of people carried away by some emotion—some alluring, attractive, even speciously inspiring, public presentation of a nostrum. Many Americans lose their heads because several plausible fellows lost theirs in expounding schemes to end barbarity, to give weekly handouts, to give everybody a better job—or, more modestly, to put a chicken or two in every pot—all by adoption of some new financial plan or some new social system. And they all burst like bubbles.

Some proponents of nostrums were honest and sincere—others, too many of them, were seekers of personal power; still others saw a chance to get rich on the dimes and quarters of the poor. All of them, perhaps unconsciously, were capitalizing the fact that the democratic form of government works slowly, that there always exists in democratic society a large group which champs at the bit over the slowness of democracy. That is why it is right for us who believe in democracy to keep the democratic processes progressive—moving forward with the advances in civilization. That is why it is dangerous for democracy to stop moving forward because any period of stagnation increases the numbers of those who demand action and action now.

There are, therefore, two distinct dangers to democracy—the peril from those who seek the fulfillment of ideals at a pace too fast for the machinery of the modern body politic to function—people who by insistence on too great speed foster an oligarchic form of government such as communism, or nazism or fascism.

Attacks Extremists

The other group, which presents an equal danger, is composed of that small minority which complains that the democratic processes are inefficient as well as being slow, people who would have the whole of government put into the hands of a little group of those who have proved their efficiency in lines of specialized science or specialized private business. They equally, and in most cases unconsciously, too, are in effect advocating the oligarchic form of government—Communism or nazism or fascism.

Extreme rightists and extreme leftists should not be taken out by us and shot against the wall, for they sharpen the argument and make us realize the value of the democratic middle course—especially if that middle course, in order to keep up with the times, is "just a little bit left of center."

I am reminded of four definitions:

A radical is a man with both feet firmly planted—in the air.

A conservative is a man with two perfectly good legs who, however, has never learned to walk.

His War "Bogey Man"

It has been a good thing that during the past twenty years we have seen the effect of organized propaganda even when it has been based on nostrums or prejudices.

It has been a good thing for the country that the Congress of the United States has been deluged from time to time by organized propaganda. Members of the House of Representatives and the Senate begin to discriminate nowadays between honest, spontaneous, unsolicited expressions of opinion on the part of voters and the propaganda type of mass appeals.

Because the country is so profoundly interested in the world situation today I do not want to leave with you one thought bearing on international relations. I make bold to do this because the topic of this evening's discussion, as I understand it, is "the war's challenge to the United States."

In and out of Congress we have heard orators and commentators and others beating their breasts and proclaiming against sending the boys of American mothers to fight on the battlefields of Europe. That, I do not hesitate to label as one of the worst fakes in current history. It is a deliberate setting up of an imaginary bogey man. The simple truth is that no person in any responsible place in the National Administration in Washington, or in any State government, or in any city government, or in any county government, has ever suggested in any shape, manner or form the remotest possibility of sending the boys of American mothers to fight in the battlefields of Europe. That is why I label that argument a shameless and dishonest fake.

Neutral Thought Impossible

I have not the slightest objection to make against the amateurs who, to the reading and listening public, discourse on the inner meanings of the military and naval events of the war in Europe. They do no harm because the average citizen is acquiring the gift of discrimination—and the more all of these subjects are talked about by amateur armchair strategists the more the public will make up its own mind in the long run. The public will acquire the ability to think things through for themselves.

The fact of the international situation—the simple fact, without any bogey in it, without any appeals to prejudice—is that the United States, as I have said before, is neutral, and does not intend to get involved in war. That we can be neutral in thought as well as in act is, as I have said before, impossible of fulfilment, because again, the people of this country, thinking things through calmly and without prejudice, have been and are making up their minds about relative merits of current events on other continents.

It is a fact increasingly manifest that presentation of real news has sharpened the minds and the judgment of men and women everywhere in these days of real public discussion—and we Americans begin to know the difference between the truth on the one side and the falsehood on the other, no matter how often the falsehood is iterated and reiterated. Repetition does not transform a lie into a truth.

Commissioners To Act Today On Ticket Fixing

Whether the police will make publica traffic ticket "fixers" list will be finally decided by the Commissioners at their weekly meeting today, Maj. Ernest W. Brown said yesterday.

"It is up to the Commissioners," he declared. "I complied with their order to the letter."

Brown was commenting upon the controversy which arose when he published only the names of 15 motorists who had tickets canceled last week. Names of 72 other motorists who received "warnings" were withheld.

Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, who suggested the action, charged the police with evading the order by not releasing the names of those who received warnings.

Jordon Refused New Trial Here

Thomas Jordon, 38-year-old bus boy serving life imprisonment for the Garden T. Shoppe holdup murder eight years ago, lost his fight for a new trial in the District Court yesterday.

Chief Justice Wheat dismissed Jordon's petition after Jordon's lawyer, James J. Laughlin, had claimed the Government "tampered" with the jury that convicted Jordon.

Juror Israel F. Good said former Deputy Marshal John B. Upperman unlawfully gave the Jordon jury a copy of the District Code. Upperman and 10 other jurors denied it. Assistant District Attorneys Krouse and Wilson indicated Good might have been confused.

Naturalist, Wife End Skyline Tour With Auto Crash

Earl A. Trager, chief naturalist of the National Park Service, and his wife, Martelle Trager, were under the care of a physician yesterday as the result of injuries suffered in an automobile accident Wednesday.

It was believed something went wrong with the steering gear of their car, which plunged over an 8-foot embankment several miles from Panorama, near the Skyline Drive. Both suffered bruises and Trager also suffered a cut scalp. They were given first-aid at Panorama and brought home by a park naturalist.

Murphy Issues Interpretation Of Hatch Law

Federal Workers May Not Attend Political Conventions, He Rules

By International News Service

Attorney General Murphy yesterday defined and interpreted broad provisions of the Hatch act, prohibiting Federal employes from activity in politics.

He said the act precluded attendance of Federal employes at political conventions, and barred them from holding any office in any political party.

The Government's legal explanation of the scope of the act, passed late in the last regular session of Congress, has been awaited for its obvious effects upon future political campaigns.

Congressmen Exempt

Confusion has pervaded varying interpretations of the act's provisions. Murphy, during a long examination of its clauses, had for several weeks promised a legal clarification of its terms which he made today without issuing advance notice. Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, was author of the act.

The Attorney General ruled that members of Congress, their clerical staffs, all members of the Federal judiciary, old-age pensioners, and retired Federal employes were exempt from the measure.

Proscribed Activities

Murphy decreed the following acts by Federal employes were prohibited because they constituted "taking active part in political management or in political campaigns" within the meaning and intent of the act:

Holding office in a political party or in a political club.

Attending political conventions as a delegate or an alternate.

Serving on committees of a political party or a political club.

Distributing buttons or printed matter in support of any candidate or party.

Serving at the party headquarters or as watchers at polls, or otherwise assisting a party or candidate in any primary or election campaign.

Being a candidate for elective office—Federal, State or local—and soliciting funds for a political organization or campaign fund.

Anticipates Revisions

Murphy said his rulings might require extensive future revision, and emphasized the need for additional, supplemental legislation, particularly to clarify the status of State employes who are paid in part or entirely with Federal funds.

The following Federal employes, he said, are covered by the act:

United States attorneys and marshals, their assistants and deputies; special attorneys of the Department of Justice, special assistants to the Attorney General, temporary substitutes and per diem employes during period of their employment, reserve officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps during active duty, furloughed employes and employes on leave, whether with or without pay; officers and employes of governmental agencies such as the HOLC, the RFC, and Public Works Administration; officers and employes occupying administrative and supervisory positions in the WPA, the NYA and CCC.

Exemptions Listed

He ruled exempt from the act's provisions the following groups:

Officers and employes of the legislative branch of the Federal Government, including secretaries, clerks to Congressmen and Congressional committees; officers and employes of the judicial branch, including United States commissioners, clerks of Federal courts, bankruptcy referees and their secretaries, deputies and clerks.

Officers and employes of State and local governments, even though their employment involves expenditure of Federal funds; persons retained to perform special services on a fee basis; persons receiving benefit payments, such as old-age assistance under the social security act, agricultural conservation payments and retired Federal employes.

W. Va., Fire Peril May Halt Hunters

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Conservation Commissioner H. W. Shawhan said today that "unless the rains come" it might be necessary to suspend the hunting season in parts of southern West Virginia because of forest fires.

Half a dozen big fires blazed out of control in that area, with steady winds adding hourly to the danger of even bigger blazes. Shawhan described the fire situation elsewhere throughout the State as generally good.

S. J. Sachs Heads Virginia Masons

Richmond, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—The Grand Royal Chapter of Virginia Masons adjourned its two-day convention here last night after elevating S. J. Sachs, of Staunton, to the position of grand high priest, to succeed Charles F. Unruh, of Kinsale.

In accordance with custom the Masons raised eight of the officers to higher posts. Gov. Price retained his position as grand treasurer, a post he has held for more than a decade.

Petersburg, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Several hours before funeral services for her brother, W. Wales Wynne, were to be held this morning, Mrs. Bernice Wynne Moore was found dead in bed at her home. Text of Chamberlain Report to Commons

London, Oct. 26 (AP).—The text of Prime Minister Chamberlain's war report today:

During the past week there have been no operations of importance on the Western Front. Minor adjustments in the positions occupied have been made and the general result is that the French and German forces are now on the line of the common frontier.

The steady stream of reinforcements and reserves of material for the British expeditionary force continues and the defenses in the British sector are being continually strengthened. In the air, aircraft of the fighter command have again been in action. The House is already aware of the attempted attacks by German bombers on the east coast convoy on October 21. In the morning attacks, delivered by 6 bombers, it is probable that 2 of the enemy aircraft were destroyed and in the afternoon attempt, made by two formations of 9 and 12 bombers, respectively, it is certain that 4 and probably that 5 were destroyed.

On the following day one of two bombers was shot down into the sea near a convoy off St. Abbs Head. None of the ships or escorts in the convoys suffered hurt, nor did any of the R. A. F. aircraft engaged. The work of the units of the coastal command is almost continuous. Occasionally it is spectacular and attracts attention, but more often it is of the routine kind and though no less effective, passes unnoticed.

Sub Warfare Intensified

This week there are certain successes to report. Mines in the path of convoys have been detected from the air in time to save the ships in the convoys from danger, and seven U-boats have been sighted. Of those sighted, four have been attacked. There is good reason to believe that at least one of those attacked was severely damaged and that another was destroyed by naval vessels directed to the scene by the attacking aircraft. I should like also to mention the admirable work of the antiaircraft gunners who have been continuously at their posts from a date before the waf began. It is now known that in the raids on Rosyth and Scapa Flow they brought down two German bombers, and there is reason to think that they caused such damage to others as to prevent their reaching home.

In the war at sea there has been an intensification of the German submarine campaign. This intensification we have always expected. But I can assure the House with confidence that the situation is well in hand. In spite of one or two strokes of good fortune, the enemy have not been able to attain the rate of sinking which they attained at the beginning of the war. Their submarines have been driven to operate farther and farther from their bases and farther and farther from the focal point where trade is bound to congregate.

Finally, the destruction of enemy submarines is being maintained at a sufficiently high rate to encourage us to believe that this menace to our trade will eventually be overcome. Honorable members may indeed have seen that during the last few days the sinking of five British ships has been announced. One of these ships—Stonegate—was sunk by the German raider Deutschland some time ago, but information of this loss has only just reached us. Together, these ships aggregated 22,715 tons.

More Seized Than Sunk

On the other hand, a number of enemy ships have been arrested and brought in by our blockading squadrons for adjudication in the regular way. These ships are the Phoebus of 3,863 tons, the Gloria of 5,896 tons, the Bianca of 1,375 tons, the Poseidon of 5,864 tons, and the Biscaya of 6,369 tons, all of which are now in our control, totaling 28,367 tons.

In addition to these, the Gonzenheim of 4,574 tons was intercepted and scuttled herself to avoid capture. There is therefore a loss to the enemy of some 33,000 tons, and a net gain to us of nearly 6,000 tons. These figures are, however, subject to the decision of the prize court.

One feature of the enemy's U-boat campaign to which I must call attention is their growing lawlessness. It seems now to have become the rule for merchant ships to be sunk without warning. Frequently passengers and crew have been turned adrift in small open boats in stormy seas to suffer from cold and exposure. In the case of the S. S. Yorkshire in particular there was a deplorable loss of life amongst the wives and children of soldiers returning home from the East.

Another flagrant instance was the sinking of the French ship "Bretagne" carrying a large number of women and children. This ship was sunk miles from land by gunfire and torpedo without warning. Fourteen of those on board are missing.

No words are strong enough to express our detestation of this cowardly form of warfare.

Turk Treaty Prised

The outstanding event in foreign affairs since my last statement to the House was made has been the signature of the treaty with Turkey. The treaty has been received with profound satisfaction throughout the empire and in France and it is a great encouragement to us to know that it has been widely welcomed in many other parts of the world. That is doubtless because the world sees in it a guarantee for the maintenance of peace in at least one region of the world.

It is purely a defensive instrument, threatening no one and designed only to oppose resistance to aggression. We are proud to feel that under its provisions we now share mutual responsibilities with the Turkish people for whose patriotism, probity and valour we have long cherished a high regard.

I should like to take this opportunity of informing the House that His Majesty's government and the French and Turkish governments have been discussing for some time the question of financial and economic assistance for Turkey. The assistance to be given relates particularly to the supply of war material. Conversations on this subject have been taking place in London with a Turkish military mission and it has been a great pleasure to us to welcome the mission and its distinguished leader Gen. Orbay to this country.

The conversations have been conducted in a spirit of frankness and cordiality and are now nearing completion; I am confident that they will lead to useful and practical results.

Attacks Ribbentrop Speech

A week ago I informed the House that there had been no indication from Berlin of the views of the German government upon the issues which I sought to define in my statement of October 12.

In the last few days reports have come from Berlin of lengthy consultations among the Nazi leaders. It may be that the speech made at Danzig on October 24 by the German foreign minister is the result of these consultations.

I do not propose to waste time by commenting on the many details of this performance. No one in this country will be deceived by its distortions of the truth and there is already abundant evidence that Herr von Ribbentrop has been no more successful in his attempt to mislead impartial observers in other parts of the world. Indeed I even cherish the hope that despite all suppressions and falsifications there are still some in Germany itself who see where the real truth lies.

The main thesis of the speech is that it was England and not Germany who desired and plotted for war. The whole world knows that this is not true. The whole world knows that no government ever sought more ardently to avoid war or took greater risks to preserve peace than did the government of this country. We have already published with complete frankness all the essential documents relating to the causes of the war. We are content to be judged by the facts and to know that the verdict of the great majority of neutral observers is in our favor.

In his final report on his mission to Berlin, Sir Nevile Henderson referred to the encouragement given to Herr Hitler in his designs on Poland by Herr von Ribbentrop, who apparently advised him up to the last moment that Britain would not fight. Yet this is the man who now asserts that the whole object of British policy since 1933 has been to concert war against Germany.

Cites Ribbentrop Turn

One of the questions which the historians of the future will have to consider is how far the great tragedy of our times was due to the failure of Herr von Ribbentrop to comprehend either the policy or the character of the British people.

I will make one other comment upon the German foreign minister's speech. He desires, it seems, to invite the Soviet Union to join in a crusade against the British Empire. Why, what a change is here! Let me read two sentences from Herr von Ribbentrop's address to the press when he first came to England in 1936:

"Germany wants to be friends with Great Britain and I think the British people also wish for German friendship. The Fuehrer is convinced that there is only one real danger to Europe and to the British Empire as well, that is the spreading further of communism. This most terrible of all diseases—terrible because people generally seem to realize its danger only when it is too late."

The positive conclusion which we are apparently asked to draw from the German foreign minister's speech is that the German government have made the choice which, as I stated on October 12, lay before them. He has announced their intention of seeing the struggle through with all their energy and strength. If that is indeed their decision there can be but one reply, and we are prepared to give it. But it is not England that has challenged Germany. It is the German government who, by their persistent acts of aggression pursued in face of our repeated warnings, have forced us at last reluctantly to take up arms. It is the German government who, by their reckless disregard of their pledged word and of the rights and liberties of other peoples, must bear the responsibility for this war and for all its consequences.

Police Rescue Boat Owner From Flames

Fire broke out aboard a speedboat in the Washington Channel yesterday and harbor police rescued the owner, Wilbur E. Dungan, 642 Gallatin street northwest, and extinguished the blaze.

The boat was moving near the harbor police dock when a short circuit caused oil to become ignited. Police, using one of their patrol boats, towed the burning craft alongside the Norfolk-Washington steamer Southland, where the flames were put out. Damage was estimated at $150.

Four-Fold Tax Study Outlined For Maryland

Governor's Survey Board Lists Phases For Subcommittees

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 26.—Tax law administration, property assessment, special taxes and corporation levies were set down by Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor's tax revision commission today as the four broad phases of its study of the State's tax structure.

Subcommittees will begin the work immediately, William Lee Rawls, commission chairman, announced.

Deputy Attorney General William L. Henderson will head the subcommittee studying administration, including possible plans for reorganizing the present administration of tax laws.

Charles G. Lord, member of the House of Delegates from Baltimore County, and coauthor of the bill creating the tax commission, will direct a second subcommittee surveying local property assessments with especial reference to equalization of assessments between political subdivisions and within such subdivisions.

H. H. Walker Lewis, Baltimore Mortgage Co. official, heads the group handling income, inheritance and other special levies, including taxes on commissions, licenses, fines and forfeitures.

Huntington Cairnes, attorney and special counsel to the United States Treasury Department, will have charge of the section studying corporation taxes.

The ten-man revision commission was appointed September 17 and includes six men who also served on the revenue sources commission which recommended most of the taxing program adopted by the 1939 Legislature.

Rawls said the next meeting would be held November 16 but the time intervening was too short to expect reports from the subcommittees on that date.

'Pressure Groups' Here to Stay, Wallace Tells Governors

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Oct. 26.—"Pressure groups" were described by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace today as in integral part of the American scene.

"No pressure group in America can successfully abuse its power at the expense of the general welfare," he told the Western Conference on Governmental Problems. "It may succeed for a while, but it cannot succeed for very long if our democracy is functioning properly.

"There is no sense in deploring pressure groups, for they are a component part of democracy and have been active on the American scene for 150 years."

Protests Irksome Regulations

He blamed the pressure of economic groups largely for the "absurd lengths" to which economic barriers have been erected between States. He particularly protested the "expensive and irksome" regulations some States have placed on interstate trucking.

Wallace suggested three ways to prevent State "protective laws from having damaging results on the public generally, as well as on those groups they were designed to protect."

He suggested Congress could further regulate interstate commerce but this would be "expensive and require much legal activity." The States could get together and adopt uniform laws but this would "seem hopelessly optimistic." Joint Federal-State action with each "supplementing and reinforcing" the other, he said, "offers the most hope."

Presents Three Suggestions

He presented three other suggestions for joint State-Federal milk inspection service, for reaching "reasonable uniformity" in State truck regulations, and for Federal standards for crates, boxes and sacks whose present "innumerable and deceptive shapes and sizes impose an unnecessary burden and expense on the whole fruit and vegetable indutry."

Federal-State cooperation in collecting income and inheritance taxes was proposed by Gov. Culbert L. Olson, who called his first conference of Governors or their representatives from the eleven Western States.

Uniform laws of Western States plus cooperation with the Federal Government was advanced by John R. Richards, California director of finance, as the only means of solving the problems of unemployment and relief.

Gifts For Education

In comparison with some gifts previously made to the Johns Hopkins University the bequests accepted on Monday by the board of trustees are not huge. But they demonstrate that this institution retains the continuing interest and support of the community which it serves.

The larger of the current bequests, about $1,000,000, will be set up as a fund to aid the work of the department of history. That decision is in keeping with the suggestion of the donor, the late Dr. John Martin Vincent, a former history professor. Alfred Jenkins Shriver's bequest of approximately $650,000 will be used to erect a lecture hall. In accord with the terms of Mr. Shriver's will the hall must be decorated with murals depicting the original Johns Hopkins board of trustees, members of the faculty, members of the Shriver family and ten Baltimore women named in the will as outstanding examples of feminine charm.

Since Johns Hopkins opened its doors in 1876, with a bequest of $7,000,000 to be divided between the university and hospital, it has attracted many notable gifts. As one of the United States' truly great institutions of learning, it has exercised a vital influence upon the community of which it is a part. And that community, in turn, has made it possible for the university to carry on its work on a greatly expanded scale.

Many institutions of higher learning have been forced to restrict their activities in recent years because the depression has reduced the value of their endowments and wiped out fortunes that otherwise might have been left to them. Nevertheless, gifts for educational purposes continue to be made. It is not to be supposed that great institutions of learning will be denied the means of financing their activities because many large fortunes have been impaired or because inheritance taxes now claim an enormous percentage of wealthy estates.

So long as universities serve their communities well, men of means will doubtless continue to make generous gifts and bequests, and these are likely to be supplemented to an increasing degree by public appropriations.

Quebec's Election

In sweeping the Duplessis government out of office, the French-Canadian voters of Quebec have made it clear that they are wholeheartedly in favor of Canada's continued participation in the war on the side of Great Britain.

As in all such elections, the balloting in Quebec this week involved a multiplicity of issues. Indeed, it is possible that purely provincial questions played at least as great a part in determining the outcome as did considerations of foreign policy.

Premier Duplessis and his National Union government came into power three years ago on a tidal wave of discontent with the Liberals, who for 39 years had continuously held office in the Province of Quebec. With 71 of the 86 seats in the provincial Legislature in the government's hands, Mr. Duplessis and his colleagues had a golden opportunity to make a splendid record.

There is no evidence that they did so. On the contrary, large bodies of voters were antagonized by the government's policies. Liberal-minded citizens were shocked by certain almost Fascist tendencies displayed by the regime, as manifested, for instance, in the drastic padlock law. On the other hand, the thrifty citizens of the province were outraged by a drift toward bankruptcy which the Duplessis government found itself unable to check.

But if dissatisfaction with the domestic policies of the regime had much to do with the defeat of Premier Duplessis, the fact remains that he fought the election largely on the issue of Quebec's relations to the Dominion government. That government, he argued, had infringed on Quebec's provincial rights by the war measures it was putting through. And, despite the fact that Premier King had solemnly pledged himself not to resort to conscription, Duplessis and the National Union Party sought votes on the ground that only by returning them to power would conscription be avoided.

For this reason it would have been difficult to avoid interpreting a victory for the Duplessis regime as evidence of provincial opposition to the war. It is even probable that such a victory would have compelled Premier King to dissolve the Dominion Parliament and hold a general election, despite the dangers of such a course in wartime.

Instead of a victory for Duplessis, however, the results show a landslide in the other direction. The National Union Party retained only 15 of its 76 seats in the Legislature. The Liberals increased in strength from 14 to 68. It is also significant that the extreme Nationalist Party of Paul Gouin got nowhere at all.

However strong particularist sentiment may have been in Quebec in the past, it is now obvious that the people of that province today regard themselves first and foremost as citizens of the Dominion. It is not without justification that Premier King has hailed the overturn in Quebec as an event whose significance "it is impossible to exaggerate."

What Sort Of Peace?

Six months ago today, in commenting on the appointment of the Marquis of Lothian as British Ambassador to the United States, we said in these columns that "what distinguishes the new Ambassador" is that he "has learned to think along lines which are philosophic rather than nationalistic in their direction."

In New York on Wednesday night, making his first speech since assuming his post in this country, Lord Lothian amply justified that prediction. Speaking, as he said, "on my own responsibility," and as a student of history rather than as a diplomat, the new Ambassador concentrated on the vital issue of the sort of peace which should emerge from the present war.

It should, he pointed out, be a negotiated peace rather than one imposed by dictation "on a prostrate Germany." But it must also be a peace which, once made, can be secured by the establishment of "overwhelming power behind law."

Should the Nazi government win, Lord Lothian said, there can be no doubt that their peace will be maintained by "a far more relentless power." The issue, then, is not whether peace when achieved will be backed by force, but along what lines and according to what principles that force shall be organized. "It is a question of whether power is going to be behind a liberal and democratic world or a totalitarian world."

From the Ambassador's remarks it is obvious that he does not anticipate a revival of the League of Nations in the form sketched out in 1919. He anticipates, rather, a growth of regional order leading in time to cooperative action between continents. Thus Lord Lothian speaks approvingly of the development of the Monroe Doctrine into a pan-American doctrine and suggests that "some form of economic federation, perhaps even of political federation, at any rate for part of Europe," is "a necessary condition of any stable world order."

Of the part which the British Empire should play in this regional development, however, the Ambassador seems somewhat uncertain. He is confronted by that same conflict between the interests of England as a European power and the interests of England as the center of the farflung British Commonwealth of Nations which has long puzzled British statesmanship. It is a problem no less baffling because the British Empire was throughout the nineteenth century, as Lord Lothian points out, a bulwark of world peace. It has not remained so because the relative power of that empire has declined.

In consequence of its dual position, as a nation which is part of Europe but also head of a world commonwealth, a precise definition of post-war policy becomes extraordinarily difficult for Great Britain. Its interests lie not merely in the stabilization of European peace but also in the establishment of reliable world order.

Confronted with this problem Lord Lothian, like any other British leader, is wholly justified in asking what contribution the United States proposes to make "to the solution of the greatest problem that has ever presented itself to the genius of man." The war in Europe, he freely admits, is not the concern of the United States. But that does not mean that we can be indifferent to the type of peace which must eventually result.

Thanks are due to the British Ambassador for calling this obvious fact to American attention. The kind of world which will result from the present war is very much an American concern. And if neutrality in the war is difficult, neutrality toward the sort of peace to follow it will be all but impossible for this country either to justify or achieve.

Moral Victory

The University of Michigan deserves to be congratulated on last Saturday's football victory over Chicago by the score of 85-0. That score would have been notable even had there been no opposing team at all. But the most remarkable incident of the game was the appearance in the Chicago team's dressing room of President Robert Maynard Hutchins. Noted for his dislike of the way college football is conducted, Mr. Hutchins is said to have told the team, "Don't let the final score bother you. You did well today."

The players, it is reported, were so amazed at their prexy's display of interest that they "just stood there gaping in amazement." The coach remarked that Hutchins' appearance was one of the best things that could have happened to the squad. He didn't say just what it would do for them. Perhaps it might spur the boys on to a defeat of only 50-0 in the next game.

Anyway, President Hutchins' praise was in order. The students were actually only following teacher's advice. Some years ago, in an interview, when Mr. Hutchins was asked how he kept so fit, he admitted that whenever he felt the need to exercise he just quietly lay down until that feeling passed, and that, after all, is what must have happened last Saturday in Chicago.

"Enthusiastic Error"

Secretary Wallace has never been noted for tact or perspicacity. But even with due allowance for this, the blunder of his third-term indorsement for President Roosevelt seems unbelievable. A neophyte in politics should have realized in advance that this was not merely a foolish observation but also the worst possible time at which to make it.

Since the outbreak of the war in Europe, domestic politics have been largely adjourned. To accept this adjournment has required no small degree of patriotism and self-sacrifice from the Republican leadership. At a moment when the many blunders of the Administration were coming home to roost, the opposition was in effect requested not to capitalize on its advantages; to let the President escape well-merited criticism while fundamental issues of foreign policy were being hammered out in the national interest.

On the whole the Republicans have accepted this unwelcome situation with good grace. There has been a tendency in some opposition quarters to make neutrality a political issue, but most of the influential party leadership has refused to follow this line. There are not many Republicans in either Senate or House of whom it can be said with certainty that they oppose the Administration's neutrality program on partisan grounds.

President Roosevelt has been similarly correct and circumspect in the issue. Since his message at the opening of the present special session he has carefully refrained from personally pressing the legislation he is known to favor. The Department of State has willingly compromised points which its experts regard as important for the sake of insuring a wholly nonpartisan approach in the field of foreign policy.

Against this background, on the eve of the final Senate vote on neutrality revision, Secretary Wallace is quoted by reporters at San Francisco as saying that the war in Europe makes it "necessary" that President Roosevelt should be elected for a third term. The justifiable annoyance caused Mr. Roosevelt by this remark is reflected in the White House statement yesterday that "it would have been kind and polite of the speaker to have consulted the victim before he spoke."

There is no questioning the President's profound understanding of international relations, to which the Secretary of Agriculture refers. But it is preposterous to conclude therefrom that Mr. Roosevelt's leadership would be indispensable after 1940. Indeed, a much more logical conclusion from the Wallace statement, unless he can convincingly prove misquotation, is that the present Secretary of Agriculture is himself far from essential to national well-being.

The President has done what he can to minimize the effects of his colleague's boner. Leading Democrats in Congress have promptly disowned the Wallace statement. And Senator Vandenberg has given a good lead to his Republican colleagues by dismissing it, with justified contempt, as "another enthusiastic error" on the part of the Secretary of Agriculture.

The Canopus Treatment

From the Hartford Courant.

Dr. Annie Jump Cannon suggests that when the public gets fed up with the war in Europe, it can find relief, peace and escape by looking at the stars. Dr. Cannon ought to know; she is curator of astronomical photographs at Harvard and a professional star-gazer of recognized authority.

It is not a new thought. Walt Whitman hinted at it in two of his clumsier lines:

I was thinking the day most splendid till I saw what the not-day exhibited;
I was thinking this globe enough till there sprang out so noiseless around me myriads of other globes.

Mrs. Hemans had a whack at the same idea in "The Lost Pleiad," over which a generation of school children stumbled with gestures in the days of copper-toed boots and elocution classes. And the ever-lamented Bert Leston Taylor sang the same theme:

And after one has had about a week of
The arguments of friends as well as foes
A star that has no parallax to speak of Conduces to repose.

Canopus and a good seegar were the main ingredients of his prescription for nerves frazzled by mundane distractions. Doubtless a careful search of the works of other poets and philosophers would produce further evidence of the efficacy of stars, with or without nicotine, when the world is too much with one. And even when it is not, prophylactic doses of stargazing may be recommended confidently for those who find the confusion of modern life a bit trying.

Hating Hitler

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A disturbing thing about the European war is the failure in leadership of the American press, especially big, influential metropolitan papers.

I think this failure may be due to an effort to occupy two opposing positions at the same time. (1) Hatred of Hitler, and (2) It ain't our war. Naturally these two things don't go together. If we keep on hating Hitler more and more, we'll finally conclude it's "our" war, too—and get in, as we did in 1917.

I think most of us who went through the World War now realize that our entry was made possible by the growth of our aversion to the Kaiser and Germany. Morgan loans, munition sales and war booms may have affected those in high places, but the man in the street had to start hating before we could get in.

That's where the papers are failing us today. Columnists and cartoonists seem to vie with each other as to which can make us hate Hitler more. A year or so more of this, and our resistance to war will be overcome by our hatred—and we'll be in it again.

The newspapers can't have their cake and eat it, too. If they want to keep America out of war, they will have to abandon the anti-Hitler campaign. Why not be real leaders? Get interested in ourselves, and have your readers consider that subject, rather than the problems of outsiders. National defense, for instance. There's plenty of room for patriotism there.

On Stopping Immigration

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Our American overcrowded labor markets demand that immigration be interdicted for a period of ten years. For the Congress to declare the United States a nonimmigration receiving country for a decade, or to such time as our industrial system will have absorbed our unemployed, would prove a help.

It may be said that our population is growing too fast and that our industrial system is growing too slow. If our population is not growing too fast as against the growth of our industrial system, then the conduct of industry deserves a good investigation.

I am inclined to believe, however, that the lack of reciprocal relations, as we see them in this country today, between supply and demand, is not due to the fault of either supply or demand, but is the result of the United States having been up to 1924, a dumping market for the overcrowded labor markets of the world.

Embargo Must Stand

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Maryland Senators, Mr. Radcliffe and Mr. Tydings, gave democracy a day in court Monday, October 16, which will not soon be forgotten by many of their constituents, who were invited to report in person at Room 318 of the Senate Office Building to take part in open discussion of the embargo repeal question. Admitting the problem to be one of great complexity, these Senators asked for opinions before making their decisions.

Many wise persons have said "Nothing was ever gained by war that could not have been gained through other means." If we are very sure of our objectives, sure that we want peace more than we want foreign trade in munitions or other profitable merchandise, then there should be no doubt about the matter. The embargo must stand.

In a democracy, such as this, the people do not seem to find it difficult to decide the issue.

Respect For Law

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your comment on action of Department of Justice officials, as expressed in an editorial of October 20, entitled, "A Useful Reminder," deserves unstinted applause. Press accounts of several weeks ago, by quotation and otherwise, seemed to show a disposition to straddle the Hatch act or to find methods by which administratively only the spirit and not the letter of the law might be met. Evidence now at hand reveals an about-face and exhibits an expressed intention to meet unreservedly the terms of the statute.

This type of ruling forebodes a return to respect for an enacted law no matter how disagreeable it may be politically.

Bicyclists' Chance

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I must add my personal indorsement to Mr. R. L. Strout's suggestion that the new C. and O. Canal be made a place where bicyclists may have a chance, free from instant annihilation from the great horde of I'll-mow-you-down motorists.

America has become a sedentary, almost an exerciseless Nation, save for a frenzy of athletics in the teens and early twenties. Addiction to the car starts early and the slavery never ends.

In fact, it is only in the vital outdoor trades that any survival of the tendency toward bodily activity still remains. That all vital instincts have not been squelched by an excess of super-civilization is indicated by the fact that upwards of 10,000 Americans go to Europe yearly to ride or hike (your servant frequently one of them).

Yet millions of youngsters would like to follow this fine building sport, whose only disadvantage is that it keeps you (in other countries) in prime shape into the seventies. But they give it up and join the majority—the motorists.

Strong Arm Tactics

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been publically listed as a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy.

It seems to me that such action by the Dies Committee is ill-advised. There is nothing I can do as an individual to retaliate. It seems very unfair. The Dies Committee is perfectly safe whereas I am in a very vulnerable position. It appears to me to be a case of the powerful taking an unfair advantage of the weak.

What is this that I am to be persecuted for? Is membership in the A. L. P. D. a crime? I am generally regarded as a gentleman, a law abiding person and all in all a rather sensitive person and I have never had any experiences in connection with the American League which would cause me to think that the league stood for anything which was wrong, or un-American.

It is true that I am not on the executive committee and I had nothing to do with founding the organization, so I do not know what goes on in executive committee meetings and I have no knowledge of what the purposes of the founders were, but I do know what happens at the open meetings of the league because I have attended and have been very attentive.

If the executive committee have any subversive ideas they certainly have been very ineffective. I cannot believe that they have ideas directed toward the destruction of our Government. If they have, they have not tried to communicate them. It seems silly to me to say that the league is Communist controlled. If it is, some Communists have been wasting their time. They have not taken time in the meetings to preach their propaganda.

The action of the Dies Committee in attacking the league seems to me not only unfair and silly but it is also not calculated to secure approval for the work of the committee. If the Dies Committee hurts me how am I going to react? I have been persuaded many times to change my mind, but I have never been forced to do something that I did not want to do. I will listen to reason, but I will not be forced to do something against my will by strong-arm tactics. And I believe that I am just as good an American as any member of the Dies Committee.

A MEMBER OF THE LEAGUE.

Contrary To International Law?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is much doubt as to what the legal situation would be, in case a change in the neutrality act permits the sale of arms, ammunition and implements of war, especially battleship-airplanes.

Two important questions are involved, namely (1) as to whether we can change our neutrality laws, that will, in fact, unequally affect belligerents, during the progress of a war, and (2) whether, even under international law, we have the right to sell armed airplanes, or built for armament, to a belligerent knowing that they will be used against a nation with which we are at peace.

Every offense is made up of two elements, namely (1) the act, and (2) the intent.

If the intent of the Congress, in amending our neutrality laws, is to aid England and France, as beyond a reasonable doubt it is, then to make such changes in the law during the progress of a war is contrary to international law, and would be in effect an act of war. The relation existing between two states, at any time, must be either those of peace or war. International law recognizes no intermediate condition.

My sympathies are with England and France, but we lost our chance to legally aid them when we failed to repeal the neutrality act last July. Would we change our present neutrality laws if Germany controlled the seas? The Congress cannot, of course, by neutrality legislation or otherwise, make legal that which is contrary to the law of nations.

It would appear that the airplanes contracted by England and France before the war, a contract valid when made with no objectionable intent, should be delivered to them.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

THE MAIN LESSON emerging from Oland Russell's history of "The House of Mitsui" (Little, Brown, $4) is that there is no such thing as hereditary business genius. The Mitsuis carry on from generation to generation, reaping the profits of Japanese industry; but the men who make the wheels go round are bright young Japanese adopted from other families.

There was Takahisa Sasaki, back in the fifteenth centry. Takahisa was a fighting man, and there have always been certain points of similarity betwen war and big business. Takahisa put the Mitsuis into the fighting business, but they couldn't sustain it. Fifty years after his death a real fighting man mopped them up and took their hereditary lands away from them; this turned the clan's thoughts to trading. They have been trading ever since.

The Mitsuis also married with care, and marriage is as important to hereditary business as to a royal house. Mr. Russell, who begins his Mitsui history almost as devoutly as a Japanese historian, has more to say about the Mitsui ancestry than seems strictly pertinent; it is obvious that business brains came into the family when one sagacious Mitsui wife picked a girl named Ju-san as wife for her hopeful son. Ju-san, in the middle 1600s, produced six Mitsui heirs; and the family estate is still divided in six main parts. It was her husband who, in 1673, set up a shop in Kyoto, proclaiming that he would sell only for cash, and at fixed prices. This policy, successfully imitated by certain modern department stores, laid the foundations of Mitsui prosperity.

IT WAS, of course, only after the "opening" of Japan in the middle of the last century that the Mitsuis evolved into one of the great houses of all financial history. As Mr. Russell tells the story, the minds which seized the opportunity were all those of "adopted" head clerks: Rizaemon Minomura, a bright gogetter with a talent for winning the friendship of finance ministers; Hikojiro Nakamigawa first of the group to travel abroad; Takashi Masuda, a great "foreigner;" Takuma Dan, the mining genius, graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who was shot to death in 1932, and Seihin Ikeda, Harvard, 1895, a Mitsui man and a finance minister at the same time. But the heirs of the six Mitsui clans still draw the dividends.

As Mr. Russell works his way through the complex story of this business dynasty he seems to change his point of view. He loses his Japanese traditionalism and becomes increasingly critical of his heroes. He is openly critical about the efforts of Mr. Ikeda, sometimes known as the "Ivy Lee of Japan," to humanize the Mitsuis as Ivy Lee publicized our own Rockefellers. And his story, which is at the same time a history of Japanese industrial development, becomes increasingly cloudy. Possibly the full story of the Mitsuis cannot yet be told; Mr. Russell's book reads like the first rough draft of a much better book which remains to be written.

ANOTHER CURIOUSLY interesting and baffling book is Krishnalal Shridharahi's "War Without Violence" (Harcourt, Brace, $2.50), which is a history of Ghandi's movement of civil disobedience in India and a study of its possible application in the Western World. (Oswald Garrison Villard's foreword suggests that it was, in somewhat modified form, applied by the Germans when the French invaded the Ruhr in 1923.) In India this "peaceful" defiance of law has had a romantic success. It has not meant actual war; but it has called, as war does, for the willingness to die. It has avoided the negativism of mere pacifism; it has faced the existence of evil in the world. . . . But when Mr. Shridharani lightly suggests that it is a method which might be applied in the Western World as well, one's mind wanders far beyond anything he has to say.

Mr. Villard suggests that Germany might have tried it in 1919, refusing to sign the Treaty of Versailles and permitting the Allied armies to overrun their country without resistance—and without co-operation. Suppose Czecho-Slovakia had used such a method? But England ruled India, and Germany rules Czecho-Slovakia today. Millions of Czechs, for all we know, may have tried Ghandi's methods—in vain. For the British lacked the German logic of ruthlessness. They put Ghandi in jail, let him be interviewed, and all the world watched and commented, day by day. The Germans put the Chancellor of Austria in jail and denied him visitors; and the outside world forgets him, as it forgets the Torgler acquitted of responsibility for the Reichstag fire in 1933, but never released, and others.

"THE FINE ARTS OF PROPAGANDA" (Harcourt, Brace, $1.50) is another disappointing book. For Drs. Alfred McClung Lee and Betty Briant Lee set out to demonstrate the arts of propaganda as seen in the speeches of Father Coughlin, isolating, as good romanticists, his use of the Seven Propaganda Devices common to almost all professional propagandists: "name calling," "glittering generality," "transfer," "testimonial," "plain folks," "card-stacking" and "band wagon." They have no difficulty whatever in convicting Father Coughlin on all counts; and their parallel quotations from him and from Mr. Hitler's Mr. Goebbels are impressive. But they use so much of the priest's own techniques of name-calling, etc., that the unemotional reader is less impressed than he might well be.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Reno, A Gretna Green

THERE HAS BEEN a decline in the divorce industry in Reno since the banner year of 1931, when Nevada met a challenge from Arkansas by reducing from three months to six weeks the period required for the establishment of a legal residence. Nevada pioneered the field under an old law requiring a residence of six months, and was doing a fine business, rich in economic butterfat, when the best minds of the hotel trade, retail business and the Legislature decided that a reduction to three months would increase the volume without reducing to an injurious degree the quality of the clientele.

Arkansas then designed a stock-model decree and, under a three-month law adopted for the purpose, attempted to divert from Nevada the business from the Mississippi Valley and the East with the benefit of a freight differential, as you might say.

Small Profits, Bigger Volume

THIS DIVORCE trade is almost entirely interstate commerce, and if Arkansas had been a private corporation the Federal Government might have found a law somewhere to protect Nevada's rights. However, no such relief could be hoped for, so Nevada largely abandoned the quality trade, as such, and adopted a six-week law embodying the business principle of the five-and-ten, which is small profits but many of them.

Rich people as well as the poor shop at the five-and-ten, so Nevada would still get their business, though in smaller units, because they naturally would spend much less in six weeks than they had spent in six months, or three.

However, Nevada decrees were quality decrees with a world reputation. They had been tested in many courts, and many repeaters in Reno provided evidence that Nevada divorces were not only stylish but serviceable.

Court Tests Fail To Disturb Prestige

THE PRESTIGE of these writs is so high that Reno scoffs airily at a current attempt by her neighbor, Idaho, to intrude in the field with a six-week law and a campaign to divert business to Sun Valley.

When the minimum requirement was six months of residence, and even after it had been reduced to three, the divorce clientele bought many expensive automobiles in Reno, and the retail merchants carried stocks of the most expensive goods, particularly woman's wear. This demand for new cars has almost vanished under the present law, and, of course, the customers find it no problem to carry a program of stylish gear to see them through six weeks without local replacements.

The hotels, however, are doing better than ever, because Nevada, and particularly Reno, has recently discovered another profitable specialty in quick-and-easy marriage for Californians unwilling to wait three days, as required by the law against gin weddings, or to comply with new blood-test regulations. There are no statistics to indicate which law the Californians are particularly determined to avoid in coming to Reno for marriage.

Marriages Exceed Divorces In Reno

UNLESS THEY drink extremely high-octane gin in California they would cool out or pass out on the long trip to Reno, but, nevertheless, the day after this law took effect there was a queue of Californians in the throes of the divine delirium extending from the courthouse door a half block to the corner and another half block down that street. The blood-test law caused another rise in the marriage traffic, and together they have raised the score of marriage far above that of divorce.

The Riverside Hotel, the confluence of both streams, is crowded with guests drawn here on conflicting missions. Divorcing ladies, biding their time until judgment day in the courthouse across the street, crunch rice underfoot as they enter the lobby and may be permitted wry thoughts as they enter the elevators with other ladies wearing gardenias, the badge of the bride. However, I observed no wry glances, and it would seem, from conversations with divorce lawyers, that the divorcing ladies do not feel wry about marriage. Most of them intend to try again.

Marriage Trade Shows Upsurge

BECAUSE IT TAKES only a matter of minutes for a marriage, and most of the trade is out and gone back to California next morning, a huge turnover is required to yield a decent profit. The lawyers are completely short-circuited and can only hope that these marriages are ill-advised, in which case, of course, they would be only too glad to serve.

In Reno, with a population of 20,000, there were 7,824 marriages last year and only 2,375 divorces—an appalling decline from the boom divorce business, 5,745, in 1931. This year in September the marriage rate increased 41 per cent, and the divorce traffic just held steady at the rate of 1938—2,375 for the year—the lowest since Reno went into quantity production.

Concerning War Aims

By Barnet Nover

The Difficulty Of Definition

THERE HAS been a great deal of criticism of the Allies not only in neutral lands but France and Great Britain as well, for their failure to make known their war aims.

The presumption is that the responsible leaders in Paris and London are, or at least ought to be, looking beyond the war their nations are today engaged in fighting, beyond the victory they ultimately hope to achieve, to that settlement which is to follow the war.

What kind of a settlement is it going to be? Will it be generous or punitive, an Appomatox or a Versailles? Will it leave things just about where they are so that in another 20 years or so there will be another war? Or will it be a peace that will make possible a new world order of the kind which people dreamed about during the "war to end war," but which never came into being?

To these questions, which millions of people all over the world are asking, there has, so far, been no precise answer by the Allies. Messrs. Chamberlain and Daladier have contented themselves with stating that their nations are fighting Hitlerism and will not rest until Hitlerism and all it stands for has been crushed. But this, say critics, is not enough.

OF COUSE it isn't. But it must be pointed out, however, that in the matter of war aims the Allies find themselves today in a peculiar and difficult position.

In 1914 the various belligerents went to war to achieve fairly precise objectives. They were following out the dictum of on Clausewitz that war is the continuation of policy by military means. Austria-Hungary was fighting to smash Serbia and thus paralyze the centrifugal tendencies that were threatening to destroy the Hapsburg empire. Russia was fighting for Constantinople and the Straits. France hoped forever to end the menace of an expanding Germany and to regain Alsace-Lorraine. Great Britain wanted to prevent German hegemony on the continent and to get rid of a restless and dangerous imperial rival, and so on.

SOME OF THESE aims were entertained by the belligerent powers at the outset; others were added as the war progressed. Thus by 1917 France made the annexation of the left bank of the Rhine one of its objectives while Germany hoped to retain the gains she had achieved in Belgium and in Poland. With the collapse of Russia her war aims were further amended in an ambitious direction, as the Treaty of Brest Litovsk makes plain.

But in addition to these aims there were others. They were the war aims of millions of people in belligerent and particularly the Allied lands who were not so much interested in territorial acquisitions for their nations as in a stabilized peace for the world. In Woodrow Wilson these largely inarticulate millions found an eloquent spokesman. But Versailles was the grave of their hopes and his good intentions.

THE WAR of 1914-1918, however, directly involved a very large part of the world. All seven of the great powers of that period were participants. In addition there were such other nations as Serbia, Rumania, Bulgaria, Turkey, Belgium, Greece, Montenegro, China and the Latin-American republics that came into the war following America's entry.

The present war directly involves only four nations—Great Britain, France, Germany and Poland. For Great Britain and France to issue a comprehensive statement of war aims at this time would be premature. They are in no position definitely to promise the implementation of the high aspirations for a new world order such as those expressed by Lord Lothian in his speech the other day.

Even if victorious, Britain and France could not by themselves alone create a new world order, that would require the cooperation of all the powers. Neither Mr. Daladier nor Mr. Chamberlain can speak for the world. The clarification of Allied war aims beyond the point to which the London and Paris governments have so far shown any willingness to go must perforce depend on the evolution of the war and also on the evolution of public opinion in nations that are at peace.

THERE IS another factor to be considered. Whatever doubts one may entertain regarding the motives for their participation in the last great conflict, there can be no doubt that Great Britain and France are today waging a defensive war. They are defending themselves against a system with which they tried repeatedly and at enormous expense to come to terms. They failed. And realizing the consequences of further capitulation they decided to resist.

For the time being the paramount task facing them is to resist successfully. There is much to be said in favor of looking beyond this static concept of war aims to the kind of a world that is to come into being after the war. But if such precision as to their ultimate objectives would have its great virtues it would also have its real dangers. For should they, in any respect, interfere with the conduct of the war these announced objectives might multiply the difficulties of the Allies rather than contribute to the final victory. In the last analysis, the final say as to what kind of a world the world after the present war is to be will depend fully as mucn upon those nations which are not now fighting as upon those which are. In other words, if it is fair to ask the Allies what are their war aims are it is equally fair to ask the neutrals what are their peace aims. And the nation which can least of all evade or ignore this question is the most powerful of all neutrals—the United States.

"What's SHE got that I haven't got?"

An Example Of Sanity

By Ernest K. Lindley

Our Army And Navy

ONE OF THE MORE reassuring aspects of the debate over American foreign policy is the sanity which prevails in the War and Navy Departments. This assertion stands in spite of the recent furore over the War Resources Board.

At almost any given moment during the last few years there has been less evidence of war hysteria in the War and Navy Departments than among top-ranking New Dealers in other branches of the Government.

Secretary of War Woodring has turned out to be a persistent opponent of foreign adventures. In the early days of the Roosevelt Administration, while he was Assistant Secretary, he was suspected of being a professional patriot, perhaps even a kind of firebrand. He put his name to one or two ill-considered magazine articles. And, of course, he made as strong a case as he could for improving the Army, which was in a bad state.

Woodring Displays Caution, Coolness

HE WAS ALSO eager to please his boss, Franklin D. Roosevelt, to whom he is utterly loyal. But as the European crisis has edged into war, Woodring's influence has been exerted more and more on the side of caution. Frequently his advice has not been taken. For example, he advised against the French airplane deal almost a year ago, and when he saw that the President was determined to go ahead, he urged that it be done publicly. The President chose secrecy instead, and was greatly embarrassed when the arrangement was brought to light by the crash of the bomber which the French were considering buying. The whole affair received ten times the attention which it would have received if Woodring's advice had been followed.

Although he has worked for a larger, better-equipped, and better-trained Army, Woodring looks upon the Army as a defensive instrument. And he seems to be wholly committed to the idea that our lines of defense should be in the Western Hemisphere, not on the Rhine or the Yangtze. In recent months nobody in the Cabinet has a more beneficent influence on the side of caution and coolness.

Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, has been more militant, more war-minded. He is by nature a more aggressive man than Woodring, and he is quick, energetic, and ambitious. Yet in the speeches for which he has been criticized by the isolationists he only followed the main line of policy laid down by the White House—where every one of his important utterances was okayed before it was delivered. Johnson's eagerness to cooperate in every way was one of the qualities which made him a favorite with the White House group until a few weeks ago, when he riled the New Deal crowd by the men he picked for the War Resources Board. These selections were approved by the President, however. And it was the President who decided that it was time to play up the industrial mobilization side of national defense—and then changed his mind when he found out that the War Resources Board was being regarded as a sign that he was getting ready to put us in the European war.

Johnson Takes Rap For Miscalculation

JOHNSON like many another lieutenant, has had to take the rap for a miscalculation higher up.

The long-standing fued between Woodring and Johnson is not pleasant to behold and is not conducive to the best administration of the War Department. But the two men complement each other and if Johnson had not been led to believe he would get Woodring's job, they could have made a strong team.

President Roosevelt, who knows more about naval strategy and tactics than probably all of our other Presidents combined, has been his own Secretary of the Navy. The concern of Acting Secretary Charles Edison has been with the business and organizational sides of the department. He has stood apart from the whole controversy over foreign policy.

The professional heads of the armed services have been faithful to the tradition that their job is to support our foreign policy, not to make it. In both branches, however, there is a wholesome scarcity of jingoism, and the undercover influence has been, on the whole, on the side of caution.

Since a precedent for mobilizing a huge Army for overseas service was set in the World War, the Army has to bear in mind the possibility of fighting again on a foreign continent. Its industrial mobilization plans were originally drawn with a repetition of the World War experience in mind. The recent trend, however, has been toward more flexible industrial mobilization plans, on the theory that, if we get into another war, the main brunt of the fighting will be borne by the Navy and air forces, and that we will need only a small, highly trained Army for protecting our outlying naval bases and as a reserve line of defense.

CONTINENTAL defense, not adventuring beyond the seas, seems to be the dominant idea in the Army.

The Navy is less isolationist. It must think always with reference to the other great navies. It has roots in maritime trade and imperialistic ambitions. For years it has been educating officers in Far Eastern affairs, through service in the Asiatic Squadron and the Yangtze patrol. The Navy is accustomed to looking to East and West instead of North and South. Consequently it hasn't done or thought much about the defense of the Western Hemisphere below the Equator.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Comrade Browder And Gauleiter Kuhn

WHEN EARL BROWDER and Fritz Kuhn, the Communist Party, the German-American Bund and all the other "front" organizations of these two personalities and groups plead for exemption under the Bill of Rights, they are like a man who, having murdered his parents, pleads for clemency on the ground that he is an orphan.

The object of the Bill of Rights is the object of the Constitution in which it is incorporated. American civil liberties no not exist as an act of God. They are designed to serve a purpose. That purpose is stated in the preamble to the Constitution: "To form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity."

The Bill of Rights—the first ten amendments to the Constitution—was inserted for the purpose of guaranteeing the last-named objective—"to secure the blessings of liberty for ourselves and our posterity." Men who had fought for national independence and political liberty—the right to free speech, a free press and free assemblage—made the concept of political liberty the very basis of the whole constitutional order, which is designed to preserve it—to preserve it forever—along with justice, domestic tranquillity, common defense and the general welfare.

Definite Purpose For Civil Liberties

FREE SPEECH, press and assembly were also conceived as a means for presenting grievances, promoting public discussion, and so progressing toward greater unity, tranquillity, strength and welfare.

Outside of the frame of these objectives, "civil liberties" make no sense whatsoever. They were devised as an instrument for a purpose.

Now Messrs. Kuhn, Browder and all their satellites and fellow travelers are calling upon the Bill of Rights to protect two parallel conspiracies whose object it is to remove impartial courts of justice, promote domestic strife, weaken the common defense, promote exclusively the welfare of their own partisans and remove forever the blessings of liberty from ourselves and our posterity.

And when "liberals" spring to their defense, they only illustrate how degenerated, how cut off from the roots, how devoid of philosophical and moral content, how frivolously careless, how lacking in the first instinct of self-preservation liberalism has become.

From a conception of life and politics, awake, aware and eternally aggressive liberalism is becoming a symbol for negativism, a society of self-flagellants, a suicide compact of men who can find nothing better to do for liberty than to protect and whitewash the enemies of any form of liberal society, be that society in the economic field, capitalist, semi-capitalist or Socialist.

False Passports Is Not Main Issue

IN THE CASE of Mr. Browder and in the case of Mr. Kunn, false passports and misappropriated funds are incidental to the main issue, which is whether any nation or any form of organized society can tolerate in its midst conspirators of foreign governments claiming and using the instruments of political democracy for the disruption of the liberal state in the interests of other illiberal forms of society.

Mr. Browder, under the Constitution, has the right to advocate any changes in the political and economic structure of the country that he desires. He has the right to preach constitutional changes that will make possible the socialization of all property.

Mr. Kuhn has the right to advocate the limitation of suffrage and of citizens' rights to people who can prove that they are "Gentiles"—which is the Americanized version of "Aryanism."

But there is nothing in the Constitution, in the law, in the American philosophy or in ordinary common sense which gives either of them the right to organize boycotts, incite to pogroms, falsify passports, engage in military and industrial espionage, rig accounts, publish false statements, and, under other pretexts, under false fronts, yes, even under the portraits of Washington and Lincoln, organize starry-eyed saps, muzzy-minded liberals, psychotic vigilantes, frustrated egoists, and even honest rebels against real injustices, into terrorbands and pressure groups for promoting civil war and for furthering the policies of Moscow and Berlin.

Moscow Subsidizes U. S. Communists

MR. BROWDER is a Soviet agent. He and his whole party are nothing more or less than an organization for promoting by legal and illegal methods the international policies of the Soviet Union.

Mr. Browder was an agent of the Soviet Union in China in 1927. His former wife, Katie Harris, alias Katherine Harrison, has been an Ogpu agent in western Europe. His brother, William, testified before the Dies Committee that, although he had reported for income-tax purposes only $4,000 a year in 1937 and 1938, he had banked nearly $1,000,000 in his own name at that time.

Other witnesses testified that the Communist Party had received heavy subsidies throughout most of its existence from Moscow, and that The Daily Worker started with a Moscow subsidy.

The Communist Party regularly raises money for one purpose and diverts it to other purposes. Relief funds and defense funds go into the party coffers for propaganda.

If and when the whole story of Communist finances is unraveled, it will make Richard Whitney look like a piker. And there is no more reason why Mr. Browder should be protected than Mr. Whitney. In fact Mr. Whitney is of little consequence, for Mr. Whitney was not engaged as Mr. Browder and Mr. Kuhn both are influencing the foreign policy of the United States according to the decisions of two foreign dictators.

Kuhn Is Agent Of Nazi Party

KUHN IS an agent of the Nazi party. He is as much an agent as Kurt Wilhelm George Ludecke was an agent. The difference is that Ludecke got purged and told. Kuhn has a jail record in Germany, was an early member of the Nazi Party, participated in the beer hall putsch and came here to promote the interests of his master.

Under cover of protecting the rights of German-Americans—who felt not the slightest need of having their rights protected until Mr. Kuhn appeared upon the scene—his sole objective is to influence the foreign policy of the United States in a manner favorable to Berchtesgaden. Both of these self-styled followers of Washington and Lincoln have local branches of the Ogpu and the Gestapo. Both of their organizations indulge in industrial and military espionage, and in case of war would indulge in sabotage.

Both organizations exercise terror over the members of their parties. Mr. Browder's appeal to his rights of free speech is laughable to Berchtesgaden. Both of testimony regarding party policies. He testified criticism o fthe Nazi-Soviet pact would be ground for expulsion from the party.

A Communist Party member has nothing whatever to say about party policy. He carries out, in blind obedience, whatever instructions come to the party from the Kremlin. If the party is told to talk war, the party and all its fronts howl for war. If it is told to talk peace, the party and all its fronts howl for peace."

Innocent People Bound To Be Smeared

AND THE ORGANS of the bund shift their organization and their propaganda in exactly the same way. They urge the United States toward a common front against communism one week and into a common front against British "imperialism" the next.

And at present both these conspiracies are working for the same goal—namely, to make the United States of America completely impotent in foreign policy. What they will work for tomorrow depends upon the course of the war, and on that alone.

They have been described by Walt Whitman in a day when words had blood in them: "Cringers, suckers, doughfaces, lice of politics, planners of sly involutions."

The Dies Committee is doing an unpleasant job, in the course of which a number of perfectly innocent people are bound to be smeared. This is too bod, but the job had to be done. The people who have innocently joined "front" organizations for international conspiracies are not the victims of the Dies Committee. They are victims of the conspirators and of their own simplicity.

And it is high time that the American people knew the truth.

For the truth is the most powerful weapon which openness has against conspiracy and democracy has against despotism.

Absence Rules Not Harsh, Says St. John's Dean

Annapolis, Oct. 26 (AP).—Saying that calm discussion in college had been carried on heatedly to a great-to extent in the college and metropolitan newspapers, Scott Buchanan, dean of St. John's College, spoke on the new college rules of absence in the regular weekly student convocation today.

The apparent harshness of the rules that allow no unexcused absences from class is removed, the dean stated, by the provision for excuses when tendered by parents, doctors or instructors. "Ample grounds for discretion," he said, "are given the writers of such excuses."

Daily attendance, the dean stated, is particularly important to the operation of the new St. John's "100-book" program. Weekly convocations are included in the list of classes which should not be missed if they prevent the achievement of what the dean held to be the purposes of the students and the instructors.

Big Board Asks U. S. Place Tax On Market Value

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange today made public recommended changes in Federal tax law applicable to stock transactions. The recommendations were made at the request of Undersecretary of the Treasury John W. Hanes.

Emphasis was placed on the desirability of making the tax moderate and flexible, based upon market value rather than face value, use of some less complicated system than stamps, and elimination of the "double" tax on lots of stock less than 100 shares.

The report also urged grading down of the New York State tax. Special committee which prepared the report was composed of Robert P. Boylan, chairman; Howard Froelick and John A. Coleman.

Georgetown Poll Shows Most Balk At Sending Troops

A slight majority of the Georgetown College student body are certain the United States will be drawn into the European war eventually but they are opposed almost unanimously to this country's participation as an "armed force."

A total of 641 students voted in a poll being conducted by the magazine America among Catholic colleges on various issues involving the present war. Results of the Hilltop voting were announced yesterday.

The leading questions and replies were:

Do you, personally, favor entry of the United States as an armed force in the present European war? 622 no; 12 yes; 7 noncommittal.

Do you believe the United States will eventually be drawn into the war? 291 yes; 208 no; 142 doubtful.

Would American intervention on the side of Great Britain and France lead to the creation of a stable peace in Europe? 484 no; 40 yes; 108 doubtful.

Would you favor a national referendum on sending soldiers to Europe? 410 yes; 196 no; 35 doubtful.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Garble Sisters

"Well, I'm certainly glad Dardanella has signed that pact with Daladier and Chamberlain in keeping the straits of Molotoff open."

"Yeh. I was afraid it wouldn't come off. What's it mean?"

"Turkish cigarettes will be sold only on the cash and carry system, the Black Sea is closed to submarines within the 3-mile limit and the Finns will have to look out for themselves, the way I see it."

"Well, the Turks have a smart ruler in that fellow Ankara."

"How does it affect the war situation?"

"I read it all in a hurry, but I think it puts the Rumanians in a position where they can now open the dikes and flood the low countries if the Germans decide to attack through Greece. It brings in the Allies on the side of Turkey if Russia tries to take over the rich Turkish rug areas of the north."

"What does Italy get out of it?"

"What Italy is that?"

"The country of Italy."

"Oh, I don't know. You don't hear her mentioned much any more. I think Mussolini has formed his own league and is holding out on his playing schedule."

"What do you think about the Scandinavian situation?"

"Stalin is naturally sore at any section of the world where a king keeps his people so happy that he can play tennis most of the time. That's what's behind the whole business up there."

"The Danes, Finns, and Swedes are the only people in Europe who mind their own business, pay their debts and are really happy."

"Sure. That's why Russia and Hitler can't stand for 'em. It breaks down their morale. These Scandinavians are so quiet and modest I'll bet you can't even remember the name of the King of Denmark?"

"Saracoglu, ain't it?"

"Gosh, I didn't think you knew!"

"The German submarines and bombing planes are certainly causing trouble, ain't they?"

"That Capt. Forth certainly got away with it at the Firth of Fifth. They made him a great hero in Germany, didn't they?"

"Hitler made an exception in his case and let him have two eggs a week instead of one."

"Has America acted on the arms embargo act yet?"

"With everybody talking at once down there, nobody can find out whether the new one has been passed or not."

"What's it all about?"

"Something about whether we send Fritz Kuhn back to Germany on an American ship or make Hitler come and get him."

It must have improved since it played New Haven.

U. S. Passes Montgomery Housing Plan

First $800,000 of $2,500,000 to Be Available at Once For Rural Villages

Montgomery County's $2,500,000 rural housing project has been approved by the United States Housing Authority, according to word received yesterday by E. Brooke Lee, chairman of the Montgomery County Housing Authority.

Lee said Nathan Straus, chairman of the national authority, had informed him that $800,000 would be made available immediately and the balance, $1,600,000, would be available early next year.

The national body approved the plan of the local authority for construction of 16 villages, eight for white and eight for colored, in rural areas of Montgomery County for farm workers and other laborers of the lower wage brackets, Lee said. The national body also approved the contention of the county group that the rural agricultural worker is entitled to the minimum housing requirements of city workers, including heating plants, running water and inside sanitary facilities, Lee announced.

The buildings will be of permanent construction, mostly of brick, and will cost $3,000 or less each and will be grouped in villages of from 25 to 50 homes near existing school facilities.

The project is the first for rural areas to be approved in the United States and will serve as an experiment in this type of housing, Lee said.

Heating, fuel and lighting will be included in rents of the houses, which will range from $6 to $12 a month. Several sites which had been selected tentatively will be purchased as soon as possible and work on the first group is expected to begin before close of the year, Lee said.

Missing Student Hunted by Police

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Police authorities today are seeking Harvey Craig, 19-year-old first year student at the University of Virginia, who has been missing since Friday.

The student, son of Mrs. H. C. Merrill of North Haverhill, N. H., told friends that he was going to hitch-hike to Lexington and would return Sunday night.

About five feet nine inches tall, he weighs about 130 pounds, has light hair and blue eyes and was said to be wearing a brown suit and carrying a small overnight bag when last seen.

Gov. Price Calls Revenue Parley

Richmond, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Gov. Price announced today he had called a conference for Monday of legislators, State officials and citizens in close touch with State affairs for a discussion of the probable effect of present "economic conditions and trends in Virginia" on the State revenue system.

"We are confronted with considerable uncertainty," the Governor said, "in estimating the effect which current developments will have on our revenue system. I am extremely anxious to avoid the necessity which we encountered shortly after the last appropriation act was passed of drastically revising and, in several instances, lowering our estimates of revenues."

Lake Drained in Hunt For Missing Va. Boy

Staunton, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—The secret of the whereabouts of missing 4-year-old Billy Montgomery was held fast by the rolling slopes of Augusta County today.

Authorities confessed they could find no trace of the boy, who wandered away from home Monday afternoon, in spite of the concentrated efforts of a large volunteer posse. A squad from the Staunton Fire Department dragged a private lake on the Hayden estate, about a mile from the Montgomery home, yesterday.

Prince Georges Seeks to Halt 'Feeder' Lines

Legal Action Voted To Seek Reversal of Street Car Ruling

Prince Georges County's joint transportation committee last night voted to take legal action to obtain a reversal of the Maryland Public Service Commission's approval of a "feeder" streetcar system on the Riverdale-Branchville line.

C. U. Anderson, secretary to the committee, said it was decided to obtain the advice of an attorney on what steps to take. He pointed out there were several alternatives, including an appeal to the Circuit Court for a review of the case, a request for an injunction, or an appeal to the Governor.

The Chamber of Commerce last Monday agreed to underwrite the cost of a court test of the service commission's ruling. Anderson said the transportation committee also had received offers of financial help from a number of car patrons.

The "feeder" system, effective in non-rush hours, was put into operation Sunday after the Capital Transit Co. had obtained permission from the service commission. The change was vigorously opposed by citizens groups at a public hearing in Baltimore September 27.

Homemakers Meet At Surrattsville

Miss Grace Frysinger, of the Department of Agriculture, will speak at the annual Achievement Day meeting of the Prince Georges County Council of Homemakers' Clubs Monday at the Surrattsvile High School.

Other speakers will include Mrs. Randall Spoerlein, of New Windsor, Md., president of the State Council of Homemakers' Clubs; Miss Venia Keller, State home demonstration agent, and Miss Ethel Regan, county home demonstration agent.

Exhibits illustrating the theme, "Consumer's Education," will be sponsored by each of the 12 clubs Mrs. Joseph H. Blandford, of Brandywine, will preside at the meeting.

Riverdale Plans Halloween Fete

Residents of Riverdale will stage a Halloween festival Tuesday night before a bonfire on the community playground. Prizes will be awarded for the most pleasing and most grotesque costumes by a committee of masked judges.

The party will conclude with a danes in the auditorium of the school. Leo J. Kelly has charge of arrangements.

Beltsville Trolley Again Held Up

Prince Georges County police last night were investigating the second streetcar holdup within six weeks.

Louis Linder, 50, of 236 R street northeast, Capital Transit Co. motorman-conductor, reported he was held up at pistol point at Beltsville, where the carline ends, early yesterday, and robbed of $11, including $4 of his own.

Lindner said the bandit, a stocky man with a slouch hat pulled over his eyes, also took his change carrier and fare box. Linder was changing the trolley when the man approached him, he told police.

The previous holdup also occurred at Beltsville.

Forest Fires Menace New Danville Plant

Danville, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Forest fires in the Pinnacles of the Dan area of Patrick County were reported abating today after concern had been felt for the city's new hydroelectric plant in that section.

Superintendent of City Utilities E. C. Brantly said the flames had "quieted down."

No Major Pickup in Farm Income Seen By Robertson

By the Associated Press

Winchester, Va., Oct. 26.—Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, told the annual meeting of the Virginia State Grange today that farmers should not count too heavily on any war boom and should remember that a lingering depression was the ultimate result of the World War.

The speakers reminded the farmers that out of the World War and its credit inflation "developed a land boom which we now know was a great curse to the farmers rather than a blessing. Surely we would not rush blindly into another inflationary cycle of that type.

"It should therefore be apparent to all," he added, "that while the terrible holocaust in Europe, which may possibly end in a destruction of democracy in Europe, is at the moment our most absorbing interest, we cannot afford to lose sight of domestic factors that may imperil the perpetuity of representative democracy in our own land."

Robertson said he believed "that there will be no major pickup in farm income for the months that lie immediately ahead, and I think the same will be true of industry." In referring to the depression which started in 1929, he said "we have preferred a lingering illness to heroic medicine, yielding to the delusion that the depression was solely due to the money-changers and economic royalists and that they could be made to bear all of its burdens. But we now realize that the distribution of wealth through Government spending means increased taxation for all and not just for the rich, and is not God's answer to a farmer's prayer."

5-Point Program Urged

The members of the Grange were asked by State Master Mark Turner, of Falls Church, to go on record as favoring a three-point State legislative program which would include the appropriation of funds for the eradication of bangs disease among cattle, the adoption of a cooperative marketing act, and the approval of legislation against diversion of the gasoline tax.

The State master announced that Malcolm Brumback, of Middleton, had been awarded first prize of $10 in a State rural safety contest sponsored by the Virginia Grange. Other winners who receive medals are Vera Pitchford, of Chesterfield County; Emma Jane Rogers, of Bedford County, and Amy Sanders, of Fairfax County.

Fred Brenckman, of Washington, national legislative agent for the Grange, will speak tomorrow for National Master Louis J. Taber, who telegraphed he would be unable to attend this meeting. Neither will Senator Harry F. Byrd, who is a member of the Frederick County Pomona, be able to leave official duties in Washington.

L. W. Douglas Cites Code In Arlington

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 9429

In support of its contention that the properties of the existing power companies in Arlington County cannot be acquired by condemnation proceedings, the Arlington Chamber of Commerce yesterday made public a letter from Lawrence W. Douglas, Commonwealth's attorney. The chamber is opposed to the proposed municipal power system.

Douglas said:

"It is my opinion that the county board has not the power to compel the two electric companies now operating in the county to discontinue their operations merely by the revocation of such permits as have been granted for the extension of the lines of these two systems. This conclusion is based upon an analysis of the relative powers of the county and of the State corporation commission in respect to public utility lines in the counties.

Code Is Quoted

"The question whether the county board would have the power to condemn is one that offers more difficulty. Code section 1560-c, subsection (B), gives the county board the right, in express terms, to acquire the lines by condemnation. However, it is my opinion that the exercise of this right is limited by the provisions of section 3832 of the code as follows:

"'No corporation shall take by condemnation proceedings any property belonging to any other corporation possessing the power of eminent domain, unless, after hearing all parties in interest, the State Corporation Commission shall certify that a public necessity, or that an essential public convenience shall so require, and shall give its permission thereto, and in no event shall one corporation take by condemnation proceedings any property owned by and essential to the purposes of another corporation possessing the power of eminent domain.'

Cites Hopewell Case

Douglas pointed to the case of Hopewell vs. Norfolk & Western Railroad Co. (154 Va. 19), as an authority for the opinion that the Arlington Sanitary District and the county board of Arlington County, acting for it, are to be considered as corporations within the meaning of the code sections cited. This case also holds that where two statutes are in apparent conflict they should be read and considered together so that the conflict may be reconciled, if possible.

"It is my opinion," Douglas said, "based upon a study of other Virginia cases where similar apparently conflicting statutes have been considered, that the provisions of Section 1560c are limited by the provisions of Section 3832, and that the county board may condemn the lines of the present companies only after the State corporation commission has found that a public necessity, or an essential public conveyance, shall so require. And in no case could the county board condemn these lines if it should be found, as a matter of fact, by the State corporation commission, or the court of appeals, that the property proposed to be taken was essential to the purposes of the owners. If it be assumed as a fact that these lines are essential to the purposes of the present owners, then the county could not condemn them."

Virginia Grants Incorporation to Arlington Chest

The Virginia Corporation Commission has granted a charter to the Arlington County Community Chest, it was announced yesterday. The charter lists 100 residents as trustees, with the following officers: George A. Collier, president; Mrs. Sara E. Carl, vice president; Clyde Stovall, secretary, and Charles T. Jesse, treasurer.

At the same time Frank C. Hanrahan, county manager, appealed to business, professional, labor and Government groups, "whose home life is spent in the country," support the Chest campaign, which is independent of the Washington drive.

"Our population has doubled within the past eight years," he said, adding, "We cannot afford to disappoint those at home and abroad who are looking to us to lead the way to ideal local self-government.

Rep. Byron For Lifting Arms Ban

World War Flier And House Member To Vote for Change In Neutrality Law

Representative William Devereux Byron (Democrat), of the Sixth Maryland District, last night told his constituents over WJSV that he would vote to repeal the arms embargo in the neutrality law.

Representative Byron, a World War aviator, said he was opposed to the embargo, first, because it carried no assurance of peace for America, and, second, because the neutrality law as it now stands "actually invites our early involvement in the European war by allowing our ships to sail every danger zone."

Handicaps U. S. Defense

The Marylander, a member of the House Military Affairs Committee, also based his argument on national defense needs.

"By our own law," he said, "we refuse to allow the manufacturing plants of America to produce the finished equipment needed for defensive war which, at any time in the future, our own people may need so desperately to preserve our own independence.

"Why should we be so blind to the needs of our own national defense as to allow our industries and our producers to make and sell everything needed in war except the weapons with which we, the citizens of a free nation, may need to defend ourselves from possible aggression and tyranny in the future?

More Planes Needed

"I am unwilling to continue this penalty of our defense and the discrimination that the embargo entails against 10 per cent of our manufacturers and producers.

"Do the opponents of an adequate defense hold that we should not even develop and exercise our Nation's ability to manufacture planes in vast numbers?

"The experience of the past war has shown that it was the market offered the munition producers which enabled this country when it did enter the war, to be better prepared at least with respect to munitions."

Speaks From Experience

"It has been said that at the present time our country was not in danger of air raids or bombings from any European nation. This statement is undoubtedly true when we consider the long-range limit of the most modern bombing plane. However, and I speak as a veteran of the last war and one who was a pilot in the aviation branch of the service, the range and efficiency of planes is increasing every day. Most of the planes in the last war were only capable of maintaining flight for several hours. Long-range bombing was practically out of the question. Since then every layman has had the opportunity to observe that planes are being constructed to fly farther and faster every day. No one can say that ten years from now our shores and even our hinterland will be safe from aerial attack. And so it seems to me highly important that we keep pace, or even go ahead, with a production in all classes of war materials that will help us maintain an adequate defense."

Gen. Parsons Urges Expansion Of Guard to Bolster Defense

Third Corps Leader Addresses Session Of 400 Officers*

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 26.—Expansion of the National Guard to a point where it would be a "greater burden to the States financially" was recommended today by Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, commander of the Third Corps Area.

"I am not one of those persons who think we are liable to be attacked now or even in the near future," Gen. Parsons told the annual convention of the National Guard Association of the United States.

Deterrent Force

"Neither do I believe that any enemy that might attempt to invade us even now would succeed," he asserted. "However, I, like every American, want a force that will deter any nation or group of nations that might be foolish enough to want to attack us."

This country, Gen. Parsons added, would be making a "grievous mistake if we place our trust in any" nations or "count on them to help in our hour of need" in light of recent international events.

Some 400 guard officers, in olive drab or blue dress uniforms, representing 48 States, were on hand for the opening of the convention and the first of a series of speeches by high-ranking Regular Army officers.

"Carry Big Stick"

"This country wants . . . an honorable peace," Gen. Parsons warned. "We object to war not because we are afraid but because we believe it is the wrong way to settle controversies. But because this Nation does not plan to attack other nations is no reason for us to think that other nations will not attack us."

Recalling President Theodore Roosevelt's dictum: "Speak softly but carry a big stick," the Third Corps commander asserted this country's "big stick" should be a Navy surpassed by none and an air force superior to any air force which might possibly be brought against us, anti-aircraft defense sufficient for our vital areas, a modern harbor defense . . . and a mobile army equipped with the latest and best weapons."

Fairfax County Leads State in Traffic Deaths

Seven-Month Record Shows 14 Fatalities; Norfolk Second

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Oct. 26.—Accident records of the division of motor vehicles showed today that five counties had eight or more traffic fatalities during the first seven months of 1939.

Topping the list was Fairfax with 14, followed by Norfolk County with 11, Chesterfield with 10, Campbell, 9, and Prince George, 8. Henry County, the records showed, had reported eight traffic fatalities up to this date.

The total fatalities for the first seven months in the counties was 298, or an average of nearly three for each of the 100 counties.

These statistics include only traffic deaths and not fatalities occurring in connection with motor vehicle accidents on farms or elsewhere off the highways.

The figures showed Henry County fatalities totaled 47 since 1934. By years they were 1935, 13; 1936, eight; 1937, ten; 1938, eight, and thus far this year, eight.

Fairfax, apparently because of its heavy Washington traffic, had the worst fatality record among the counties last year with 39 deaths. Norfolk County had 20, Augusta, 18; Henrico, 16; Accomac and Wise, 14 each, and Henry was tied with five other counties, 11 notches below the top at eight deaths each.

Suitor Sought In Girl's Shooting Is Found Dead

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 26 (AP).—The body of Gerald Mick, 24, sought for two days for questioning in the wounding of a 17-year-old school girl, was found early today near the girl's home at Green Ridge.

County Investigator Terence J. Boyle said Mick died from a shotgun wound near the heart. He had been missing since the girl, Gladys Snyder, was admitted to Memorial Hospital with gunshot wounds in the arms and legs which she said Mick inflicted because he feared "we might become separated."

Boyle indicated a verdict of suicide would be returned.

PWA Grants Alexandria Jail 5,141

Original Allotment Of $13,500 Proves Inadequate for Repair Program

An increase of $5,141 has been granted by the Public Works Administration for Alexandria's jail improvement program, City Manager Carl Budwesky was notified yesterday.

The original grant of $13,500 failed to meet requirements of the improvement program, and the increase following a reuest for additional funds submitted several months ago. Total cost of the program will be $18,641.

As a result of the increase, Budwesky said, the jail building will be completely fireproofed; additional modern plumbing will be installed, and offices for the jail physician and dentist will be provided.

Approximately $3,000 will be contributed by the city and combined with the PWA allotment to complete the improvements.

Dr. C. Cooper Bell To Arrive Today

The Rev. C. Cooper Bell, D. D., newly appointed pastor of the Washington Street Methodist Church, Alexandria, is expected to arrive today to assume his duties as successor to Dr. John Paul Tyler, who will be transferred to Newport News. He will participate in services at the church Sunday.

For the past four years Dr. Bell has been stationed in Portsmouth, where he served as superintendent of the Portsmouth-Newport News district of the Virginia Conference.

'Beau Geste' Treads Desert Sands Again

Gary Cooper Stars In New Version of Story at Palace

"BEAU GESTE." Paramount picturization of the novel by Percival C. Wren, adapted to the screen by Robert Carson, starring Gary Cooper, with Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy, Heather Thatcher, Susan Hayward, J. Carrol Leish, Donald O'Connor, James Stevenson, Harry Woods. James Burke and Albert Dekker. Directed by William A. Wellman. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At the Palace Theater.

Paramount's remake of its 1926 success, "Beau Geste," opened its run at the Palace yesterday, with Gary Cooper in the title role, which Ronald Coleman created 13 years ago.

To all outward appearances, the original has been carefully followed, but with the passage of years the glamor of the French Foreign Legion has become tarnished and the spectacle of silently devoted brothers leaving the stately homes of England to frizzle on Saraha's burning sands has become as common as a war rumor. It is of the school, one quite consciously feels, that is founded on the idea that only mad dogs and Englishmen join the French Foreign Legion.

For the rest of the legion is surely a pack of mad dogs. Chief among them, and the best of the cast to boot, is Brian Donlevy's cruel-minded Sergt. Markoff, a sadist in the grand tradition, who winds up each statement with a chilling "I PROMISE you!" With a scar on his cheek and a closely shorn bull-neck, Donlevy succeeds admirably in making the hateful Markoff more than a mere surface characterization.

Film Lacks Pace

High barrack-room comedy slows up the action when the roughneck pace of, say, "Gunga Din" would have been more in keeping. The suspense in the latter part of the film is far better handled than the piece as a whole, which seems to have been treated as reverently as a delicate and irreplaceable antique.

Gary Cooper, Ray Milland and Robert Preston are the three young men who have been brought up by a loving benefactress and when a family heirloom disappears under their noses all signs point to one of them. Because, as our introductory Arabic proverb points out, the love of brothers is the strongest love of all, each seeks to seem guilty to hide the supposed guilt of his brothers. And, at the time the P. C. Wren novel was the rage, the natural way to continue this little game was to join the Foreign Legion.

Audience suspicion and that of the rest of the cast is directed against the trio as the true thieves, which is where the film-goer who missed the earlier version might find "Beau Geste" more interesting than those for whom the adventure is a copy.

A Gruesome Trick

Death takes no holiday in the course of all these adventures and propping-up the mortal remains of the legionnaires, to fox the marauding natives, is a trick as gruesome as it is enective in routing the Arabs.

The production is well-shod in its talking version, complete to the soft voices of angels keeping watch over the silent corpses in that haunt of death, the desert fortress. Ray Milland is the boy that gets the girl and Robert Preston is the faithful brother who recalls a promise made in childhood.

A Pete Smith specialty, and a good one, too, discourses on bowling. "Set 'Em Up," a Terrytoon, "A Mouse and a Million," and "The News of the Day" complete the bill. RICHARD L. COE.

Metropolitan

"U-BOAT 29." Columbia picturization of a story by J. Storer Clouston, adapted to the screen by Emerie Pressburger, with Conrad Veidt, Sebastian Shaw, Valerie Hobson, Marius Goring, June Duprez, Athole Stewart, Agnes Laughlin, Helen Haye, Cyril Raymond, George Summerford and May Petrie. Directed by Michael Powell. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater

"U-Boat 29" uncannily visions forth recent trends in the submarine warfare of World War II. A German submarine invades Scapa Flow, snaking its way carefully through mine fields in search of the British fleet. But instead of downing H. M. S. Courageous, the undersea raider is downed itself by death bombs, is seen sinking to the sea floor amid an upward shower of air and oil bubbles.

In its thematic concentration on submarine warfare, the blockade and espionage activities, this Columbia picture, now at the Metropolitan, is one of the most timely of the war pictures now being re-released. All of its desperate action not only could have happened, often did happen, in 1914-18—but could happen in this fall and winter of 1939.

Conrad Veidt, always the splendid actor, plays a German sub commander detailed to keep a rendezvous with a German (girl) spy in the Orkneys. By the time he arrives off the coast, the astute British Intelligence has located the German spy, substituted an English lass, played by Valerie Hobson. The German commander mixes sentiment with business in his encounter with his "countrywoman," finds himself trapped and his plans for wrecking the British fleet irretrievably sunk, along with a group of German subs. But he daringly breaks out of the trap, boards and captures a Scotch cargo boat with the aid of a few captured German sailors. The end comes when the captured Scotch ship is sent to the bottom, along with its new German commander—by his own submarine.

Though "U-Boat 29" is a war picture, and a good one, its prime villain is not German. English, Russian or French. He's that old trouble-maker, pig-eyed and bloody-handed, who's been embroiling mankind since time began, the moron of the gods—Mars.

'Fast and Furious' And Stellar Stage Acts Comprise Ace Entertainment

"FAST AND FURIOUS." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a screen play by Harry Kurnitz, starring Franchot Tone and Ann Sothern, with Ruth Hussey, Lee Bowman, Allyn Joslyn, John Miljan, Bernard Nedell, Mary Beth Hughes, Cliff Clark, James Burke, Frank Orth, Margaret Roach, Gladys Blake and Granville Bates. Directed by Busby Berkeley. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

If a quick appraisal of the new bill at Loew's Capitol Theater, opening yesterday, had to be made, it would be the opinion of this observation post that it assays no less than 99 44/100 percent pure entertainment.

BELL

Eddie Cantor, returning to a local rostrum after an absence of six years—too long—not only contributes a generous individual measure of the stage entertainment, but has in tow the stars of his radio program who compile an interval of visual diversion that hasn't a dull moment or weak spot. He himself initiates the frolic with a few sapient observations on topics close to the Capital's heart—and spleen, too, since he brings up the matter of motor car traffic—sings some new and some old songs, introduces the members of his company in turn, sounds a serious note on the present state of world affairs and the priceless privilege of being an American and altogether demonstrates once again why he holds the top spot among the theater's triple-threat artists. There is only one Eddie Cantor and there he is on the Capitol stage.

But Mr. Cantor is by no means the sum total of his own show. "Mr. Guffy," in the person of Sidney Fields, is on hand to twist everything his mentor says into reverse English, and "The Mad Russian," who would be Bert Gordon, also chips in his carload of comedy, along with Joyce Hunter, the "debutante entertainer," who strikes the eye as a statuesque and gifted young woman who knows her way about the stage as well as the social register—if that is where Mr. Cantor discovered her.

Music Holds High Place

Then, for additional music, there are the duo-piano virtuosi, Fairchild and Carroll, who make the "Donkey's Serenade" a thing of new beauty on the brace of Steinways, and Leni Lynn, the ingenuous youngster with the prodigious coloratura voice, whose age precludes her appearance on the stage in Washington after 7 p. m., under the District's defrauding child labor law. The youthful Miss Lynn is as much at home in the intricacies of operatic arias as she is in the simpler measures of "Over the Rainbow" and her glib introduction of an unexpected appearance of Shirley Temple—who, of course, turns out to be the Cantor rigged up in a baby costume to sing the "Lollipop" business with a set of lyrics that I am afraid would bring blushes to Shirley's cheeks.

And if it is dancing you like, there are Ruth Dayle, an agile young triple-time tap dancer, and the Stuart Morgan group of adagio adepts, who practically fulfill Mr. Cantor's reiterated suggestion that they are the best in the world. In watching this team of three stalwart young men and a fragile girl, one always wonders if the girl may not be septuplets, with a new edition for every day in the week. It seems improbable that any one girl could withstand all that buffeting about and survive.

If the most cogent line in Mr. Cantor's tribute to America and Americanism had to be singled out, it might be one in defense of the younger generation and the jitterbugs: "I would rather have them hailing band leaders than heiling bund leaders."

Film Play a Whiz

The screen feature for the week does not lag behind the stage pastiming, either in speedy tempo or power to hold attention. "Fast and Furious," while not always precisely that, nevertheless is one of the better comedy-mysery-melodramas. In a third installment, it picks up the sleuthing, marital adventures of those ravenous bibliophiles, Joel and Garda Sloane, who go on a vacation and become involved in a swindle, two murders and a few other complications, arising from a seashore bathing beauty pageant, all of which they solve with amusing aplomb, a few domestic clashes and no end of hilarious excitement, to which a troupe of trained lions is added for good measure.

Franchot Tone and Ann Sothern play as well as any of their predecessors—perhaps better—the roles that previously have been assumed by Melvyn Douglas and Florence Rice, in "Fast Company," and Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell, in "Fast and Loose." They are efficiently supported by Ruth Hussey, Lee Bowman, Allyn Joslyn, John Miljan, Mary Beth Hughes, Margaret Roach, Gladys Blake, Granville Bates and a host of others. There is crisp smartness in the dialogue, just as there is in the manner of the play's production and the quality of its photography. The contestants in the beauty pageant come a little nearer realizing the implications of that title than is usually the case when actual competitors parade a boardwalk and stage their "talent contest."

Even that isn't all. One of Vyvyan Bonner's Technicolor "Fashion Forecasts" is a temptation to the feminine eye and a threat against the masculine billfold, and the Terrytoon comedy, "The Watchdog," makes clear the destructive power of the "rabbit punch."

Max Zinder's "Navy Day" overture weaves together a mosaic of nautical tunes to complete a bill that won't be matched for unadulterated amusement in a month of Sundays.

The Return Trail Gets Rough

Remarque Story Is Amplified by New Scenes and Running Commentary

"THE ROAD BACK." Universal picturization of the novel by Erich Maria Remarque, adapted to the screen by R. C. Sheriff and Charles Kenyon, featuring John King, Richard Cromwell, "Slim" Summerville and Andy Devine, with Barbara Read, Louise Fazenda, Noah Beery, jr., Etienne Girardot, Lionel Atwill, Spring Byington, Sigrid Gurie, Frank Reicher, Laura Hope Crews, Arthur Hohl, William Davidson, Al Shean, Edwin Maxwell, Samuel S. Hinds, Larry Blake, Henry Hunter, Gene Garrick and Robert Warwick. Directed by James Whale. Reviewed Thursday morning. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

The torturing and vivid struggle of disillusioned youth to re-orient itself in a world of peace after four years of savage slaughter in the front line German trenches in the Great War, is revived—with modifications—on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater this week, where, in accordance with the new mode, it opened yesterday.

"The Road Back," originally adapted with conspicuous fidelity from Erich Maria Remarque's sequel to his "All Quiet on the Western Front," is a bit of a new experience in its latest manifestation. Much of the extraneous comedy that marred the first picturization in its early sequences has been eliminated and in its place has been substituted a running commentary delivered on the sound track by an unseen Mr. John Deering. Instead of being devoted to direct consideration of the dramatic elements that form the basis of the pictured drama, these analytical and intermittent discussions are utilized to make clear in what manner Adolph Hitler took advantage of the economic and social unrest in Germany after the World War to foment his Munich beer hall putsch that marked the beginning of his ascension to greater power than even he dared dream.

Story Basis Remains

The vital factors of the story have been preserved, with a quickening of their development and a sacrifice of their complete revelation of the effects of peace on the lives of a bewildered band of youthful veterans who carry over into "civilized" society the violent solutions of their personal difficulties taught them by the drill sergeant who put guns in their hands. The climax of the picture still is the trial scene, in which one of the youngsters is convicted of murder for shooting the munitions tycoon who had stolen the interest of the girl to whom he was betrothed. The forcefulness of the trial testimony is vitiated by the more comprehensive considerations of Mr. Deering's commentary—eloquent, denunciatory and sometimes bitter in its indictment of the whole sorry scheme of war.

The original cast remains virtually intact. John King, Richard Cromwell, "Slim" Summerville, Andy Devine, Noah Beery, jr., Maurice Murphy, John Emery—since risen to greater eminence than he enjoyed when the film was made—Lionel Atwill, Robert Warwick, as the trial judge; Frank Reicher, Arthur Hohl, William B. Davidson, Larry Blake and Gene Garrick remain the principal figures in the motivation of a drama that paints a poignant and pathetic canvas. Barbara Read, Spring Byington, Jean Rouverol and others of the feminine cast continue to lend the developments of the action the gentler touches needed to leaven a grim, relentless and tragic story.

Terrifying Battle Scenes

The initial scenes in No Man's Land and the useless slaughter that followed the signing of the armistice, because the high command was too indifferent to hurry the news of peace to the front, always will be among the most devastating of the screen's depictions of human sacrifice. For the first time, Hitler appears as a member of the dramatis personae, newsreel shots of his occasional activities having been woven into the flow of the celluloid narrative—to the pointing of political discussion and the weakening of the film's inherent strength.

"Kennel Kings," "Life Begins for Andy Pandy" and the Pathe News are the short subjects that supplement the major feature on the new Keith bill. They effectually ameliorate the somber implications of a screen play that is not so compact and compelling as it used to be.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 26.

SURPRISE: Sally Clark, sister-in-law of John Roosevelt, went with her husband, George McLanahan, to the office of a jeweler friend. She examined some rings and trinkets—and then the jeweler said: "Now I'll really show you something unusual" . . . From an inner room six guards brought a small, white box, opened it—and revealed a huge diamond, appraised at $150,000 . . . Sally was so startled that her chewing gum dropped—onto the rare gem. The guards immediately huddled around the diamond, while Sally lamented: "Those were two good pieces of gum" . . . "But this diamond's worth $150,000," the jeweler moaned . . . "Well," Sally replied, "now it's worth $150,000.02."

CRIME: The United States Attorney's office here, investigating the passport irregularities about which Earl Browder had boasted to the Dies Committee, soon will take further action in connection with passports issued to 100 members of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade who went to Spain to fight . . . These 100 men will not be prosecuted; the higher-ups will be.

ISSUES. Al Smith sat at Moore's and discussed his son's candidacy for the city council . . . He had just made a broadcast sponsoring that candidacy . . . "Governor," he was asked, concerning his neutrality-bill speech, "will you make any more broadcasts on national matters?" . . . "Only," he confessed, "if those national matters should concern the membership of the new city council in Manhattan."

ENTERPRISE: Eddie Dowling, who will appear tonight in William Saroyan's new play, "Time of My Life," has found himself involved in many complications because of changes in directors, Saroyan's theatrical inexperience, etc. . . . Will Lee, who has one of the minor roles, took issue with Dowling in one matter . . . "Listen, son," said the veteran Dowling, "I've been in show business for 30 years" . . . "Well, so have I," replied Lee, "—the past three weeks!"

PRIDE: Louis Bromfield, who is living on his 400-acre farm in Lucas, Ohio, for many years has been telling his friends about the beauty of his birthplace and how wonderful it is to live there . . . Bromfield will leave Ohio next month to go to Hollywood for another movie assignment . . . "It's very strange," Jim Thurber said, "but I've met Louis in London, Paris, New York, Hollywood—and every time, I see him he says: 'Have you heard? I'm living on a farm in Ohio.'"

CHATTER: Senator McNaboe, who will be dumped from his office by the new leader, Jim Fay, will retaliate by running for Congress against Fay in '40 . . . The Casino Nacionale in Havana is negotiating with Ben Marden of the Riviera to come to Cuba this winter and operate the place . . . Spec. Pros. Amen will announce indictments of officials in a Brooklyn jail, because of steering cases to lawyers . . . The Archduke Franz Josef and his wife, Austrians, and Lady Clark Kerr, wife of Britain's Ambassador to China, supped together at El Morocco last night . . . Browder's attorney will charge that the testimony he gave before the Dies Committee was "privileged" and that the admissions he made, therefore, may not be used against him.

TALENT: Nicky Blair, proprietor of the Paradise Restaurant, was discussing the plans for his new revue with Paul Small of the William Morris theatrical agency . . . "For this new show," Small suggested, "why don't you hire a bunch of $30-a-week entertainers?" . . . "I'd like to," Blair said, "but who's a $30-a-week actor these days?" . . . "Those actors," Small replied, "for whom you've been paying me $300 a week."

LAMENT: The father of Mary Jane Walsh came from Davenport, Iowa, to see her perform in "Too Many Girls" . . . "I'm supposed to bring Al Smith to the show next week," he told her later, "but now I'm afraid I can't do it because of your role" . . . "I have a wonderful role," Mary Jane assured him . . . "But you portray a divorcee," her father sighed, "and so I can't bring Smith to see you" . . . "You knew that as far back as last summer," the girl reminded him, "and you didn't object" . . . "I know," he explained, "but I thought that during rehearsals they'd find out what a nice girl you are—and would change the role."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of Motion Picture Scene

By International News Service.

Hollywood, Oct. 26.—Bette Davis will eat her Christmas dinner in Hollywood, ready to start work at Warners on "The Woman Brown" the last of the year. Today she and Warners officially buried the hatchet and once again Bette reigns supreme as their top actress. "The Woman Brown" is the play she saw at Dennis, Mass., at the Cape Playhouse, where she started her career as an usherette. At her request it was bought for her and will be her next movie.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Even more interesting than "The Woman Brown" was Hal Wallis' admission to this writer today that Rachel Field's "All This and Heaven, Too," would revert to La Davis. Originally bought for Bette, it was later mentioned both for Miriam Hopkins and Merle Oberon. Also there will be no more talk of trying to persuade Katharine Cornell to join Warners to bring to the screen the role she created on the stage in "No Time for Comedy." That, too, is for Bette, as well as "The Miracle," to be made in Technicolor. So ends another Hollywood battle.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: A telegram from Ruth Mack and Leopold Friedman, attorney for G-M-G, contains the happy tidings of their marriage in New York today. They are honeymooning in White Sulphur Springs. She was formerly Mrs. Russell Mack; Larry Adler is still buying cigars for his 3-day-old daughter; Alan Curtis has fallen hook, line and sinker for attractive little Sonja Henie; Ilona Massey and Sam Katz looking unutterably happy at the Beverly Tropics; that was Patricia Morison, Para's new hope, at Victor Hugo's with Lew Ayres; Johnny Weissmuller and his bride reach here November 3 and Johnny has ordered his florist to fill the house with bridal flowers; Dorothy Lamour is suffering from an ear affection, the same type that laid Charles Laughton low.

Jacques Mersereau has been commissioned to redecorate the Norma Talmadge beach house, which Cary Grant bought for his bride-to-be, Phyllis Brooks. The wedding date is now set for the last of November or early December, depending upon when Cary finishes at Columbia; Ginger Rogers, the Bob Hopes and the Bob Youngs among those who helped Venita Varden Oakie celebrate her birthday; Mrs. James Farley, wife of the Postmaster General, is the house guest of Rosa Ponselle.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Futuristic Halloween Party Is Change From Old-Fashioned Apple Bobbing

Guests May Dress As People of The Next Century

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

ONE OF THE BEST times of the year for a party, regardless of whether the guests are young or adults, is Halloween. Perhaps no other occasion has a more weird historical background, nor leaves such latitude for decorations and food.

Martha Ellyn

This is one time when a hostess can let her imagination take flight, and use original ideas. There are always the proverbial silhouettes of witches, goblins and black cats for ornamentation, and jack o' lanterns to cast an eerie light.

Perhaps a futuristic party may fit your plans, and instead of the usual equipment of pumpkins and witches, you can use toy balloons, cellophane and mirrors to give a festive effect. The guests can use their imaginations too, if they are invited to come dressed as they think people will dress in the future. There can be men from Mars and girls dressed modernistically in strips of tin. Men may in the next century revolt against shaving and wear beautiful beards, or perhaps their hats may be an antenna snatching radio out of the ether.

There can be no old-fashioned apple-bobbing in a tub of water, or fishing for pennies with the lips only, in a pan of flour, at a futuristic party. A dance contest as to the way dancing will be done in 1979 will create a lot of fun. A profile-cutting contest, where profiles are cut from black paper, provides fun for the guests. Soap carving, too, is a way to be futuristic. Give the guests a small cake of white soap and a knife and let them carve a statue of the future. Some very peculiar shapes will evolve from the cakes of soap.

The refreshments too, should be different, something to make the guests believe they're living in 1979. Brazil nuts, shelled, then dipped in melted butter, sprinkled with salt and pepper, and each nut wrapped in a half strip of bacon, fastened with a toothpick and broiled five minutes, turning once, make a crips and crunchy appetizer. Chunks of gingerbread and hot spiced cider or hot spiced apricot punch are just right for a chill October night. Gingerbread is no trick to bake with the prepared mix that is now available at the stores. The recipes for these drinks follow:

Hot Spiced Cider

Tie in a bag, six 2-inch stick cinnamon, 1 tablespoon whole cloves, 1 tablespoon allspice, 2 large pieces mace, ½ teaspoon salt, a few grains cayenne. Put into a large kettle, the bag of spices, 1 gallon sweet cider, and 1½ pounds brown sugar. Bring slowly to the boiling point and boil very slowly for 15 minutes. Remove the bag of spices and serve the cider hot.

Hot Spiced Apricot Punch

Combine 1½ cups water, ¼ cup granulated sugar and ½ dozen whole cloves, 1 two-inch stick cinnamon in a saucepan and boil about 5 minutes. Strain. Add 1½ cups apricot nectar, 2 tablespoons lemon juice and ¼ cup strong tea infusion and stir to blend. Reheat and serve hot. For variation, replace apricot with other whole-fruit nectars, such as peach-nectarine, pear, plum or peach. Serves 6.

Or you may vote for all the good old stunts that have been favorites for Halloween for many a year. Fortune telling, ghost stories, a witches' web woven of tangled string at the end of which are written directions for future stunts are all ways of keeping the tempo rapid. One thing certain is that with lots of fun all evening long refreshments will be in order at the end.

Black cat sandwiches will lend a note of atmosphere to Halloween refreshments. These sandwiches amuse both children and grown-ups. Make them as follows:

Black Cat Sandwiches

Cut 1 can raisin brown bread into thin slices and stamp with a cat-shaped cutter. Soften 1 package cream cheese by mashing with a fork. Add 1 tablespoon horseradish, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon lemon juice and 1 teaspoon grated onion. Moisten with enough sour cream to make the mixture of the right consistency to spread. Spread half the cats with the cheese mixture and cover with the remaining "cats." Dot each cat with a bit of the cheese mixture to represent an eye.

A festive note of Halloween at the dinner hour, may be individual pumpkin cakes served as a warm dessert, and accompanied with a bowl of sweetened whipped cream, dusted with nutmeg.

Pumpkin Cakes

Sift 2¼ cups cake flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon each of cinnamon, ginger and nutmeg. Cream ½ cup shortening and add 1¼ cups sugar and then 2 eggs, slightly beaten, and continue creaming until the mixture is light and fluffy. Blend 1 cup canned pumpkin and ¾ cup milk and stir in ½ teaspoon of soda. Add the flour mixture alternately to the shortening and sugar. Stir in ½ cup chopped walnut meats. Place the mixture in individual tins that have been buttered and floured. Bake as indicated. To prepare the whipped cream, add 2 tablespoons confectioner's sugar and ½ teaspoon nutmeg to 1 cup heavy cream.

Magic Rings made of apples make an interesting accompaniment for a platter of cold cuts of meat, if a buffet supper is in order. These rings are a perfect accompaniment for the table-ready, ovenized hams now available.

Modernistic Food May Be Served; Suggestions Given

Cook's Library

By The Post Food Editor

"THE KITCHEN LIBRARY" is as important as the historical one. There is a cookbook for every need. The following list may help you to find the type of cookbook for which you have been looking.

Yankee Fare

"GOOD MAINE FOOD," by Marjorie Mosser, is a cyclopedia of ancient and modern New England food and drink, enlivened by Kenneth Roberts' notes. Do you know that fiddle-heads, once known only to the Indians along the Tobique, rival asparagus, that they are sold in every Aroostook County grocery store during the fiddle-head season, and that they may be had for the picking by anyone in North America? Do you know that porcupine livers are an unrivaled delicacy? Do you know how to make fish house punch? Such unusual foods as these are contained in this interesting book. Many practical recipes which makes it a storehouse of delights for the table. The publishers are Doubleday & Doran. Price, $2.50.

All Through the Year

"THE DAY BY DAY COOK BOOK," by Demetria Taylor and Gertrude Lynn, of the staff of McCall's magazine, is a practical cookbook intended for the housewife who must do her own cooking or supervise the cooking for a family on an average budget. The as an answer to the four problems the American women face every day — menu-planning, marketing, balancing menus and fitting new recipes into the daily menu. A complete index by dishes and ingredients makes the 1,000 recipes immediately available for reference. The publishers are Harper & Brothers. Price, $2.50.

Old-Fashioned and Modern

"SALADS and HERBS," by Cora, Rose and Bob Brown, is a collection of more than 300 recipes of a variety of salads for lunch, tea, dinner or late evening, using every kind of vegetable, meat, fish, fruit, nuts and left-overs. Salads are modern—herbs are old fashioned, but the Browns have a delightful combination in mixing the old with the new. The Browns cover the subject of herbs completely, how to grow them, how to cook them and how to use them in flavoring foods of all types. They tell how the use of herbs in cookery makes the difference between plain cooking and cooking as an art in which all can excel. The book is bound in roxite, a ryroxlin impregnated cloth that is absolutely waterproof. It may easily be washed when soiled. The publishers are J. B. Lippincott Co. Price $1.75.

Appetite Teasers

Fruit, Bran and Ham A Delicious Dish

Mediterranean Ham, a delicious combination with smoked ham, fruit and all-bran as the principal ingredients, is an excellent way to vary the pivotal dish of the meal. The following is a recipe for preparing this dish.

Mediterranean Ham

Combine 2 cups, ¼ inch bread cubes, ½ cup honey, ½ cup raisins, ½ cup crushed pineapple drained, and ½ cup all-bran. Mix well and spread mixture between slices of ham. Stick cloves into fat around edges of ham. Place in a covered baking dish and bake in a slow oven, about 300 degrees, for two hours. If the ovenized, table-ready ham is used, it will be necessary to bake only long enough to cook the other ingredients, approximately one-half hour. Six servings.

Vegetables With Flair

Vegetables can take on a festive flair if a few additions are made to the old familiar ways of serving them. String beans cut into thin slivers, drained sauteed lightly in butter take on sauteed mushroom slices, or crumbled boiled chestnuts with an interesting effect. French dressing is a splendid addition for hot beans, too. Spinach mousse, made in a ring with sauteed mushrooms in the center, is a distinctive and appealing dish.

Goober Special Wins Week's Prize Recipe Award

Lowly Peanut Has Many Food Values

Soup to Sandwich Uses Set Forth In Numerous Suggestions; Fudge, Muffins and Even Ice Cream Included

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Club Editor.

IF PEANUT BUTTER cookery is new to you, the winning recipes of The Post recipe contestants will convince you of the many possibilities this product offers. You will want to keep a supply of peanut butter on hand to try these recipes. Everyone knows what a delicious spread peanut butter is for sandwiches, but far too many cooks limit the use of it to sandwiches alone. Peanut butter can be used in a host of interesting ways, such as fudge, muffins, flavoring for baked beans, salads, pies, cookies, cakes, and in combination with vegetables, bread, salads, puddings and ice crean.

Mrs. Day

Goober Special

Mrs. Albert Day, Auburn avenue, Bethesda, Md., uses peanut butter to enhance a nutritious milk soup, and wins the first award of $3. This is one excellent way of varying the child's daily foods to insure the necessary quota of milk.

Peanut Butter Soup

Melt 1 tablespoon butter in a double boiler. Add 5 tablespoons flour and 5 tablespoons peanut butter and mix well. Add 4½ cups milk gradually and cook stirring constantly until thickened. Add 1 teaspoon paper and sprinkle on the soup when serving. Croutons dredged with salt, few grains pepper. Fry ½ cup wide noodles in 1½ tablespoons butter until brown, stirring frequently. Drain on unglazed paper and sprinkle on the soup when serving. Croutons dredged with grated cheese are also nice to use with peanut butter soup. Serves 4 to 6.

A Luncheon Treat

A nutritious and appealing dish which highlights peanut butter as an ingredient is macaroni with peanut butter and tomato sauce as developed by Mrs. Lucille Lawlor, 1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest, Washington, D. C. Mrs. Lawlor writes that her children are very fond of this dish. A $2 award is given Mrs. Lawlor for this suggestion.

Mrs. Lawlor

Macaroni with Peanut Butter—Tomato Sauce

Parboil ½ package of macaroni for 7 minutes in 2 quarts of boiling water to which ½ teaspoon salt has been added. Drain. Stir 1 cup peanut butter into the macaroni, 1 teaspoon at a time. Cover and set in a warm place until the peanut butter melts and blends in. Add ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon of paprika and 1 tablespoon of minced parsley. Then mix in ½ cup of bread crumbs. Add 1½ tablespoons of flour to 1½ cups of milk, first rubbing to a smooth paste with a small quantity of milk. Pour into the macaroni mixture and blend thoroughly. Pour into a well-greased baking dish, cover top with crumbs and dot with peanut butter. Bake until brown about 20 minutes. Serve the following tomato sauce: For this, cook 2 cups of tomato pulp with 2 slices of chopped onion, 1 bay leaf, 3 cloves for 15 minutes. Rub through a strainer. Melt 3 tablespoons of butter, add 3 tablespoons of flour and cook until smooth, then add the tomato, 1 teaspoon of salt, ¼ teaspoon of pepper and 2 teaspoons of sugar with a small pinch of soda, if tomatoes are very acid. Bring to the boiling point and serve.

Children's Delight

An excellent example of a food which children and grown-ups enjoy the year around is peanut butter cookies. The basic recipe of Mrs. A. D. Stewart, 1341 Twenty-ninth street northeast, Washington, D. C., which wins a $1 award, is one that will make cookies for Halloween, especially when frosted with white, melted chocolate being used to make the head, tails, legs and whiskers of the cat.

Mrs. Stewart

Peanut Butter Cookies

Cream ½ cup butter and ¼ cup of any other kind of fat desired, with 1 cup white sugar and 1 cup brown sugar. Add ½ cup peanut butter and mix well. Add 2 eggs, well beaten, then add 2¾ cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda and ½ teaspoon salt which have been sifted together. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Mix well and shape into balls, using about a heaping teaspoon of cookie dough. Press flat on baking sheet, using a fork to flatten cookie.

For Midnight Snacks

A zestful sandwich that is splendid for many occasions is the sandwich Mrs. Joan Malone makes. It is inexpensive, easily prepared, and excellent for cold weather lunches, picnicking or midnight snacks. For this recipe Mrs. Malone wins a $1 award. Her recipe is:

Mrs. Malone

Peanut Butter Sandwich

To 1 cup peanut butter add ½ cup of butter which has been left out of refrigerator until at room temperature. To this mixture add ½ cup of finely minced onion and 4 slices of minced broiled breakfast bacon. The bacon should be crisp, dry and cold. Spread rather thickly between thinly sliced whole wheat or white bread. These may be made several hours ahead of time needed for serving, by wrapping the sandwiches in a damp napkin, trimming and cutting with a sharp knife into squares or fingers just before serving. Serve on crisp water cress.

Peanut butter soup is so nutritious it is al most a meal in itself. To prove its popularity, serve it to the family in attractive pottery bowls and watch the busy way all at the table ply their spoons

Light and Lucious

Miss Ena A. Shepherd, 1360 Maple View place southeast, Washington, D. C., fashions delicate cakes using peanut butter as the dominant ingredient. These are deliciously crispy and are well worth the effort to make when an extra nice cookie is desired. Miss Shepherd wins a $1 award for her recipe which follows:

Miss Shepherd

Peanut Butteroons

Using 1 cup peanut butter, remove the excess oil from peanut butter by pressing it between towels. Sift into a bowl 2 cups sugar, ½ teaspoon salt and 2-3 cup sifted cake flour. Add the peanut butter and 2 teaspoons lemon rind. Blend until as fine as cornmeal by rubbing ingredients together. When thoroughly mixed, stir in 4 unbeaten-egg whites slowly, mixing well. Shape by forcing through pastry bag onto baking sheets covered with heavy brown paper. Cover lightly and chill in refrigerator for 2 hours. Moisten tops with fingers dipped in cold water. Bake in slow oven, 300 degrees, for 30 to 50 minutes. After taking them from oven, cool slightly, then remove from the paper. This makes 35 to 40 macaroons.

Cheese and Bacon Rolls Go Well With Cauliflower

Luncheons have most important duties to perform, especially when they're intended for school-age youngsters. The main dish for this meal should be substantial, but not heavy, satisfying but not cloying. Such a dish may be inexpensive and easy to prepare, too.

An admirable new luncheon dish, which is a whole meal in itself, stars cheese bacon rolls and cauliflower. Well-balanced, and nourishing, this main dish will prove satisfying to the hungry school child.

Cheese Bacon Rolls, Cauliflower and Hollandaise

Toss together 2 cups soft bread crumbs, ½ cup chopped celery, 2 tablespoons chopped onion, 1 tablespoon chopped green peper, 1 cup grated American cheese and salt and pepper to taste. Add 1 beaten egg and ¼ cup milk. Place a spoonful on the end of each slice of bacon, and roll them up. Fasten ends with toothpicks. Place on rack in moderate oven, 375 degrees, until the bacon is crisp.

Cook the whole cauliflower and drain it well. Place it on a serving plate or platter, and garnish it with 10-minute Hollandaise sauce made with mayonnaise which has been placed in the top of a double boiler over hot water for 10 minutes. Surround the cauliflower with the hot cheese bacon rolls and serve at once.

Deviled Eggs Can Be Served Hot in Winter

Deviled eggs needn't necessarily be served cold. In fact, they have just as much appeal for winter service as for summertime. By adding a flavorful sauce an entree may be made from them.

Prepare hot deviled eggs by first combining the mashed hard-cooked yolks with dry mustard, lemon juice or vinegar, salt, pepper or Worcestershire sauce to taste. Add chopped or sliced ripe olives in proportions to give characteristic flavor, and milk, if needed, to moisten. Fill the halved hard-cooked whites of eggs with the mixture. Place in buttered casserole and cover eggs with white sauce seasoned with more chopped or sliced ripe olives, and minced parsley. Sprinkle with grated cheese and top the cheese with sprinkled paprika. Heat in moderate oven, 350 degrees F., until cheese is melted. Serve on triangular points of crisp toast.

This is the sort of appetizing and simple entree that you'll like for a speedily prepared late supper or unexpected luncheon need. No effort need be put into chopping or slicing ripe olives, for example, since the ready-to-use variety is just the right texture for such uses.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Fallen Women Pay Dearly in Suffering; World Has No Need to Impose Further Penalty, Man Is Told

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The gentleman who stands up so solidly for the old "double standard" (in your column of October 23), is partly wrong and partly right. However, he can take it from one who knows that the girl who lets herself be led astray through weakness, or who goes astray through ignorance, pays dearly enough for her lapse, in loss of self-respect and self-confidence, without the world exacting additional penalty.

I got off on the wrong foot at an early age, partly through ignorance and partly through weakness, and as a result, all through the years of my adolescence, when I should have been having a wholesome good time, I was burdened instead by a crushing sense of guilt, shame and utter inferiority. I felt so ashamed of my past actions that it seemed as if it didn't matter what I did thereafter, as I was so hopelessly soiled already.

In consequence of this unhappy attitude, I got deeper into the mire and became more wretched all the time. God alone must have kept me from utter disaster, for in spite of my "experience," I was almost as ignorant of what it was all about as a little child. Finally, I broke away from such associations, but I was still haunted by a sense of indelible guilt. Not until my marriage did I feel redeemed. With my marriage, I felt as if a great wave had swept over me, washing me clean of all guilt of the past. It was a grand feeling. I could hold up my head again.

Even though that marriage broke up because of hopeless incompatibility, the feeling of restored decency stayed with me. The past ceased to trouble me. Today, I have found a new rock to cling to—the church. It is hard to express what church life means to me; how much it stands for. It has made a new person of me, and for the first time I am beginning to be happy, really happy; for today I have my complete self-respect again; others respect me; and I am living a normal, wholesome life, after years of self doubt and unhappiness . . .

I strongly advise girls to refrain from pre-marital intimacy and undue freedom of conduct, for the sake of their own happiness and self-respect. They go through hell when they fall by the wayside. And yet I believe that the girl who has sinned and has found herself again is possesed of far greater sympathy, understanding and gentleness; of far more tolerance and charity toward other erring human beings, than is the girl who has never known the price that is paid for sin. I am a better person today for what I have suffered than I would have been had I never strayed from the path of right conduct. I can truly say it is worth the price I have paid, to have gained in love and understanding of humanity.

DIVORCEE.

Greatest Battles Fought On Life's Moral Front

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have followed your column for some time, mostly agreeing with your points of view and cheering you silently for having the spunk to tell the truth. But after reading what "Disagreement" had to say about "Kay's" case, I can no longer keep silent!

I, too, am "well up in years," but those years have taught me (what they have not taught "Disagreement," apparently) that when two worthwhile persons love each other, it is their future, and not their past, that counts . . . A man like "Disagreement" does not deserve the love of a fine woman. Judging from what he has said, both on and between the lines, he would not trust his own mother . . .

The greatest battles in life—those that are fought on the moral front—must be fought out alone and nobody—NOBODY—has the right to pry into another's past to measure the degree of his losses and gains. If the union of two responsible human beings is not based on mutual faith and trust, it is not worth entering into . . . Thank you for permitting me to "let off steam," and here's backing you up in nine-tenths of your decisions. Yours very truly, MAN READER.

Foreigner Indorses Advice Given Here

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a foreigner and have only been in America—or should I say, the United States?—a very short time. I do not know enough about the English language to speak or write it fluently, but I do so want to tell you how glad I am that you wrote as you did to "Kay," on October 12. I would never have attempted to send you a line, had I not read in Monday's Post what "Disagreement" had to say to you about it.

I would like to know why he thinks "Kay" should have told the Army officer about her lapse from morality, any more than he should have told her about his misconduct with indiscreet women? . . . I don't see how any man could ever have the temerity to criticize any woman's lapse from chastity, when, according to "Disagreement," they themselves have done like things . . .

DISGUSTED FOREIGNER.

Latin-American Trees

Mexico City, Mexico.—At the urging of a women's organization, the Spanish-American Feminine Union, the Mexican government is developing a plan for obtaining specimens of characteristic trees of each Latin-American country for planting in a park here during the celebration next March of the convention for the protection of Spanish-American natural resources.

Older Woman Should Beware 'Kiddish' Styles, Also Dowdiness, Says Grand Duchess Marie

Sketched at the Mayflower yesterday after her arrival in Washington, the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia was dressed in the unaffected good taste for which she is known. Her braid-bound cape, smart toque and bolero suit were all from her own collection of frocks for the older woman which she sponsored at a local store yesterday, and again today. Her fluted and quilled black felt seemed exactly right for her spruce black crepe suit and blouse of white angelskin, spattered with crescents of sequins

Advises Emphasis On Detail, Color, Fit and Fabric

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE TEMPTATION of clinging desperately to flighty young styles or of dowdily "lying down on the job" are the two worst evils besetting the average woman as the years creep up on her.

Marshall Adams

That is the opinion of the Grand Duchess Marie, cousin of the late Czar of Russia, whose firm belief is that "it's possible to dress like a lady, without looking like an old lady."

An adventurous, courageous survivor of varying fortunes and artistic urges, the slight, eager duchess recently selected a complete wardrobe from the Paris and American openings as her own personally indorsed fashion preferences for the older woman who wants charm, restraint and distinction in dress.

This ability as designer and coordinator shows a new side of the duchess' ambidexterous talents as lecturerer, photographer and author of "The Education Of A Princess." The same constructive common sense and good breeding has gone into her moderately priced clothes collection as went into her lecture on "The Philosophy Of Dress For An Older Woman" which she gave at the local store which is sponsoring her collection exclusively in Washington.

Knows Women's Problems

As a relative of the English family, as last of the lofty Romanoff dynasty, as an extensive traveler, as a friend of social and literary bigwigs as well as of just plain people, and as a simple, friendly observant little woman, the duchess is qualified to understand the problems besetting the mature woman. Over pancakes, and creamed turkey at luncheon yesterday, the duchess pronounced her entire philosophy of dress in this one remark, directed to all older women:

"Not for you the froufrou, the merely pretty, the too-casual or the incidental clothes that the young can cope with, for your whole wardrobe is based on fundamentals of good line, refinement and good taste."

That is the reason why the grand duchess has seen to it that entire ensembles from the ground up be included in her collection. Her belief in fundamentals in dress extends to her insistence that a good corset, with firming bias-band control, be the basis of every matron's wardrobe. Corsets and foundations are included in Marie's collection as well as hostess gowns, robes, simple elegant little bolero daytime frocks, gallant braid-trimmed wool capes and Persian-trimmed coats, distinguished-looking dinner and evening gowns and some really lovely hats.

Is Showing Her Choice of Clothes For This Season

"While the older woman's clothes must be in tune with current style trends," the duchess pointed out" they should be modified to suit individual figure problems and occasions. This is done by modification of high styles and by acclimating of self to maturing figures and viewpoints.

Three General Rules

But how? Here's how, according to the rapid-talking, quick-thinking little Duchess, whose rules below might apply to women of 40 or 70.

FIRST—Physical things are important. The length of a skirt, a sleeve, the width of a shoulder, the height of a neckline or collar must be perfect—not almost right. Good judgment in the essential dress and an expert fitter are aids here. Then seeing that clothes fit the right time and place are vindication of the older woman's good taste.

SECOND—Fabrics must be keyed to the older woman's figure. They must be duller and rougher surfaced with more body—nothing sleek, shiny or obvious. Crepes, woolens and velvets are her forte, not airy flimsy stuffs which youngsters can wear so flippantly.

THIRD—Color must be watched. Too much black (at all times) is dating and tedious. Stormy grays, dull blues, taupes, rich deep plums are handsome chic colors. A streak of brilliant color is to be used sparingly in jewels, a quill, a boutonniere and then only occasionally.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Mr. Van Dossier Opus will give a small dinner tonight for a few old-time friends at which he will present a recital of his widely familiar anecdotes.

Mrs. Jay Featherton Treble entertained with a buffet supper last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew Proser will be at home to a group of friends tonight to present an account of their recent two-week stay at the New York World's Fair. Mr. Proser took extensive notes concerning the educational exhibits at the fair.

With the Notables

A throng of society notables attended the brilliant reception held last night by Mrs. Montmarte Sinbad-Smythe in honor of the opening of her new automobile repair shoppe.

An equally smart group of notables assembled at the cocktail party yesterday afternoon given by Mrs. Buffington Birdhaven to celebrate the opening of the second-hand store that she will operate in the rear of her charming old home in Adamtown.

Local notables are also expected to be out in full force at the tea that Mrs. Felix Gilderlyly will give this afternoon in the Afghanistan Room of the Hotel Snitz to announce that she has taken over the local agency of the widely known patent medicine, Reck's Rejuvenator.

Addenda Everyman's Credo

That the vitamin racket is rapidly spoiling the cuisine in this country and what is more, making men effeminate.

That women generally in discussing the European war are merely repeating propaganda that some smart Anglophile or Nazi has put over on them.

That the midwinter feminine hats will be even worse than the fall ones (and at that he may be right).

That all women will contort themselves and suffer the greatest discomfort this winter to get into corset straitjackets and be in style.

That the antique racket is getting more menacing every day and that every man who knows anything about antiques is a sissy or henpecked.

That the only way he can retain his masculinity at a tea is by demanding several cups of coffee or better still a stiff Scotch and soda.

That his social popularity is due to his own irresistibility and not to the regional scarcity of men.

Powder Blended To Suit Skin

Gone are the days when a woman walks up to a counter and purchases her face powder haphazardly. Now choosing the correct shades of powder that will blend with her skin tones and accent her costume has become an art.

So important are the proper shades of face powder that cosmetic manufacturers and dealers have taken out the guess work. One widely known firm blends the powder to suit the customer at special counters in a local store.

Ballet Russe Members Headed Toward U. S. On 12 Different Ships; N. Y. Season Picks Up

New York, Oct. 26.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Last night I ran into Brother Hurok, the man who books and promotes the popular Ballet Russe throughout our country. He reminded me of a worried mama hen fretting over strayed chicks. It seems that owing to the scrambled shipping conditions, the ballet members are headed our way on no less than 12 different ships, and suppose a few of those belles—the Danilovas, Popvas and so on—get lost on the big ocean? Poor Hurok!

All the lasses and lads have straggled into town for the fall season, and we're full up with good lookers. Mrs. William Paley, wife of the head of CBS, went to an opening night without stockings, reports a cadish spy. Big blond Whitney Bourne turned up with her new husband, Mr. Griffis, looking so beautiful the sight actually shut up the pre-curtain shouters — wearing a rustling black dinner dress that was a knockout with her coloring.

Mrs. Cole Porter, wife of the composer of "Night and Day" and 100 more hits, ran a celeb box party, with Annie Umph Sheridan, Peggy Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Massey and Peggy Fears. But where does all this get us? Does it buy a hunk of pot roast, or a new fur tippet? Let's keep on my side of the New York Central tracks, where the geese go barefoot.

THE SUFFERINGS of poor Baba Hutton are beyond belief. She gets home on the same boat with her little boy, her ex-husband and a possible successor, only to find her papa declining to pay any more bills for her stepmamma. It's a horrid world, and I don't see why Baba has anything to do with the wretched place.

Now that the Fair has only three more days to go, Billy Rose, producer of its one mighty money-maker, the Aquacade, is getting all set to marry its star, pretty Eleanor Holm. Maybe the little rascal is wed already, at that.

Two of the fall's popular games are Contack, a matching trick, and Quick Wit, a quiz with cards.

CHECKING with my storekeeper friends, I learn that right now the most popular furs for coat-trim are Persian lamb and silver fox. Sheared beaver and mink are battling it out for place money, and the rest of the pelts are just storming along in the pack, far off the pace. Sheared beaver, in many forms, is getting a mighty attractive fur it is, too.

Your Figure, Madame!

—By Ida Jean Kain

Arithmetic Held Surest Road to Good Figures; Calories Bear Relation to Pounds

REDUCING is not a mystery. It's mathematics. Suppose you want to lose a pound a week. To do that all you do is subtract 500 calories from your daily requirement. To lose 2 pounds per week, subtract twice that many, 1,000 calories.

To begin with, you must know how many calories you require, but that is easy to figure. You multiply your normal weight (not what you weigh now) by an activity integer. If you are the average person and take light exercise, this will be 16. Most housewives would use 16.

Now, let's take it step by step. We'll say you should weigh 130 pounds. To find your maintenance number of calories, multiply 130 by 16 and the answer is 2,080. That is the number you actually require.

Arithmetic Made Easy

But maybe you weigh 150 pounds, or even 160. Then you weigh from 20 to 30 pounds too many. To reduce, you must take fewer calories than you require. The balanced menus, in which all your arithmetic has been done for you, range from 1,000 to 1,400 calories per day, with 1,200 the average.

If you are normally entitled to 2,080 calories per day, on a 1,200 calorie diet you would draw on your stored fat every day for 880 calories—about 6,160 per week. Since it takes 4,000 calories to make a pound of body fat, you could lose a little more than 1½ pounds per week on the average 1,200 calorie diet. You would lose 30 pounds in four to five months.

On a 1,000 calorie diet you would, of course, lose faster. You would then be drawing on stored fat for 1,080 calories per day, which would amount to 1¾ pounds in a week. You should be down to normal weight in less than four months on that diet.

Exercise Is Needed

But you are going to take special exercise for improved muscle tone and lovelier measurements and it will burn additional calories, which will speed up your reducing.

You will have to walk briskly, at the rate of 1¾ miles in 30 minutes. But if you add that much exercise to the 1,000 calorie diet, you can lose 2¼ pounds per week. On the 1,200 calorie diet, plus the same exercise program, you can lose 1¾ pounds per week. Your diet should never be lower than 1,000 calories per day unless you are under the constant supervision of your physician.

Mrs. Pierson Hostess For Mrs. McAdoo

Arms Embargo Columnists, Lobbyists Discussed at Luncheon, to Virtual Exclusion of Old-Fashioned Topics

By Hope Ridings Miller.

TIME WAS when lunching ladies talked chiefly of fashions, recipes, their husbands, their children and the servant problem. Yesterday when Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, wife of the Export-Import Bank president, entertained in honor of Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo, a minimum amount of time was spent on what's being worn this season and none at all on those other favorite feminine topics.

As well as I can remember, fashion came up for discussion only twice—once when somebody observed that 5 of the 13 women present, including the hostess and her guest of honor, were trimly turned out in green ensembles, ranging from jade to that soft moss shade that's so popular this autumn. Style comments the second time centered around Mme. Emmanual Lombard's stunning alligator accessories—a purse, boutonniere, encased umbrella and glove cuffs all to match, worn with a tailored beige frock and a small brown hat.

Over cocktails in the handsomely furnished Pierson apartment, through luncheon served in the Louis Seize room of the Shoreham, and once more in the apartment for coffee and liquer, talk turned on whether the arms embargo should be lifted, radio and press commentators, and the flock of "pressure boys" (lobbyists) whose activities are spotlighted in Kenneth Crawford's recently published book.

MRS. McADOO, who, with her husband, the former Senator, arrived in Washington last week, left with him yesterday afternoon for New York, where they will spend several days. The Piersons occupy an apartment in which the McAdoos used to live and Mrs. McAdoo said on arriving yesterday that she never felt "more at home" in her life.

Her becoming green ensemble featured a beaver trimmed suit, cut on simple lines and set off with brown accessories. Mrs. Pierson's crepe frock of a deeper shade was accented with a gold belt and blending costume jewelry and a snappy little black hat with a mesh snood. a green feather perched on the side front. Other "green girls" in the company included Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Marshall R. Diggs and Miss Mary V. Johnson, who had another luncheon engagement but came in later for coffee.

Also present were Mrs. Claude Pepper, wearing a smart black frock with a matching hat trimmed in red; Mrs. Ernest Draper, in a black suit and hat; Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, wearing a black frock brightened with a blue and fuchsia sash and a becoming black hat trimmed with a blue bow; Mrs. Henry F. Grady, whose wide-brimmed brown halo hat took my eye and made me almost forget to notice her brown and cream embroidered jacket worn with a brown skirt; Mrs. J. Fred Essary in a black outfit, and Mrs. Bulkley Griffen, wearing a yellow and blue plaid frock beneath a tailored blue coat.

NEWS NOTE: From Mrs. Jackson I learned that it has now been definitely decided that her daughter, Miss Mary Jackson, and Miss Jean Wallace will make their debuts jointly during the Christmas holidays. . . . The date hasn't yet been decided; but with two high-ranking officials' daughters making their bows at the same time, the event will be one of the most important of the season. Miss Wallace, as you know, is the daughter of the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace.

TWO ATTRACTIVE guests of honor, Mrs. Michael Straight and Mrs. Edmond Momilly, shared the spotlight at Mrs. Richard Hogue's luncheon yesterday. Rumors going the rounds have it that Mrs. Edmond England, is one of the most engaging women to visit here in ever so long; and no matter where Mrs. Straight's name is mentioned, you hear equally complimentary reports about her.

Mrs. Romilly, as you've probably heard, is married to Winston Churchill's nephew. During the Spanish war, he signed up with the loyalist forces.

MRS. HOGUE'S luncheon company included Mrs. Jerry Voorhis, wife of Representative Voorhis of California; Mrs. John Summerscale, whose husband is commercial secretary of the British Embassy; Mrs. Clifford Durr, Mrs. Edward Acheson, Mrs. Clark Foreman, Miss Betty Webb, Mrs. Bernard Hearn and Dr. Katheryn McHale.

Also a guest of Mrs. Hogue was Dr. E. C. Lindeman, who spoke just before the luncheon in the Council of Social Agencies series. Several members of Mrs. Hogue's party arrived at the clubhouse in time to attend Dr. Lindeman's lecture.

Passport Curbs Thwart Romance Of Miss Washington and Briton

THE SADDEST hard-luck story we've heard for ages centers about Lee Washington, and proves further that the State Department is continuing to crack down on practically all Americans who want passports to Europe. Miss Washington was all set to sail for England to marry Arthur Norris Kennard, only son of Sir Howard and Lady Kennard, when the powers of the department informed her they didn't consider young romance a sufficient reason for issuing a passport.

In Washington recently to see about the situation, Miss Washington has returned to her summer home in York, Me., to brood over the matter. Since her fiance is of an age to be drafted, he will not be allowed to leave England, and if he should by any chance come over here for the ceremony, as long as she remains an American citizen, Miss Washington probably wouldn't be able to accompany him back.

The couple met a year or so ago at a Washington dinner party and their engagement was announced last month. Miss Washington, a tall, dark and handsome brunette, had a fling at night-club singing several seasons ago. Her future father-in-law was British Ambassador to Poland until war broke out, and Lady Kennard was originally from New York. Sir Howard was attached to the British Embassy here at one time.

FAVORITE PETS of famous people:

Senator and Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry are so devoted to Roan, their cocker spaniel, that Mrs. Gerry had a garden chair made with wrought iron handles carved in his likeness. They have had a series of much beloved cockers, and Mrs. Gerry orders matchfolders for her husband on which are tiny pictures of this kind of dog.

Also a cocker spaniel devotee is Mrs. Creighton Peet, who keeps a beige mother and a coal black puppy son in her house in Georgetown. She fixes their food herself, takes them with her for week-ends, and even personally helped bring into the world a recent litter of six.

Across the street from the Peets lives Klina, the smooth-haired dachshund belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hiss, and named after Mrs. Hiss' sister, who presented them with the dog. Mrs. Hiss takes Klina for a walk every morning.

MR. AND MRS. Barry Brown appropriately christened their Welsh Korgy Taffy, after the well-known nursery rhyme. They ordered him from a catalogue and had him shipped from Canada. Princess Elizabeth of England has several Welsh Korgies.

Debutante Marilynn Himes loves all kinds of animals, but she is the only person her Great Dane, Hugo, seems to have any fondness for. Marilynn also has a honey bear, who is devoted to their houseman. Her brother, Canfield, has a shaggy little Belgian griffon, named Pieface.

Miss Jones, the Jones terrier belonging to Mrs. Dwight Davis, is famous around Washington, as she accompanies her mistress practically everywhere.

Mrs. Edward B. McLean usually has several yapping Pekingese trailing at her heels. Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, who has always owned Boston terriers, has a current one named Jimmy, who likes to drag her guests' gloves under the sofa. The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau have an enormous Great Dane, while Paulina Longworth is the fond mistress of a little Scottie.

Among the most famous of Washington dogs is Twink, the wire-haired terrier belonging to Miss Hazel Edgar and Mrs. Mary MacCracken Jones. When his owners lived next to Kenneth Clark, who was secretary to President Coolidge, and also had a wire-haired, Twink used to receive engraved invitations to parties at the White House.

MRS. COOLIDGE, incidentally, spent some time in Washington this week en route to spend the winter in Tryon, N. C. Since her departure from the limelight Mrs. Coolidge hardly ever revisits the Capital.

MANY DINNER parties will be given before the season's first meeting of the Friday Supper Club tonight at the Sulgrave. Among those entertaining are Mr. and Mrs. Horace Peters, Mr. and Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, Robert Buell and Louise and Graham Claytor.

Two Moncure Sisters Wed In Dual Rites

Marion Is Bride of R. U. Duncan, Virginia Of C. C. Lamond, Jr.

At a double ceremony yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, the Misses Marion Elizabeth and Marguerite Virginia Moncure, daughters of Judge and Mrs. Robinson Moncure, of Seminary Hill, Alexandria, Va., were married in Christ Church in Alexandria. The former was wed to Robert Vernon Harris Duncan, son of Mrs. James Morton Duncan and the late Mr. Duncan, one-time mayor of Alexandria, and her sister became the bride of Clyde Campbell Lamond, jr., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Campbell Lamond, of that city.

Dr. E. Nelson Maconomy officiated in a setting of palms and white chrysanthemums. Miss Marion Moncure was escorted up the aisle by her father, and her sister walked up on the arm of their brother, Thomas Moncure, Judge Moncure gave his daughters in marriage.

The sisters were dressed alike in white slipper satin gowns and long tulle veils attached to tiaras of seed pearls. Miss Marion Moncure carried a prayer book with a shower of lilies of the valley, and Miss Marguerite Moncure carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Matrons of Honor Wear Identical Gowns

Mrs. Harry Lee Smith, sister of Mr. Duncan, and Mrs. Jack Gordon Maize, sister of the brides, served as matrons of honor, wearing identical gowns of peacock blue moire taffeta with tight bosque waists and lace petticoats. They carried nosegays of garden flowers and the same flowers trimmed their pancake hats, which were made of moire taffeta.

The bridesmaids were Miss Ethel Jean Lamond, of Takoma Park, cousin of Mr. Lamond; Miss Marguerite Moncure and Mrs. Beverly Clary, of Richmond, cousins of the brides; Miss Jaquelin Randolph Smith, of Fredericksburg; Miss Elizabeth Lowe Smyth, of Alexandria, the brides' cousin, and the Misses Catherine Delaney and Helena Elizabeth Apperson, of Alexandria. Their frocks, of rose, hyacinth and steel blue taffeta, were made with puffed sleeves and bouffant skirts and they carried nosegays. Their pancake hats were trimmed with the same flowers.

Marilyn Moncure, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Moncure, and Mary Wilson Lamond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Angus Lamond, were flowergirls, dressed in pink taffeta and acrrying baskets of rose petals.

Couples to Live In Alexandria

Angus Slater Lamond was best man for his twin brother and also for Mr. Duncan. The ushers were the latter's brothers, James Morton Duncan, jr., Ebner R. Duncan and Samuel Guy Duncan, all of Alexandria; Angus Lamond and Wallace W. Lamond, jr., of Takoma Park, cousins of Mr. Lamond; Thomas Jefferson Moncure, of Alexandria, cousin of the brides; Joseph S. Blackwell, jr., and Charles F. Sweitman, of Alexandria, and Rowland Kirks, of Washington.

A reception for immediate families and close friends in the Lee room of the George Mason Hotel followed the ceremony. Both couples will make their home in Alexandria after brief honeymoons.

Mrs. Duncan chose as her going away costume a moss green wool ensemble with a jacket trimmed with mink tails, and her sister wore a crepe and wool outfit in a Viking blue shade with matching hat and black accessories.

Church Federation to Honor Mrs. E. V. Pugh At Missionary Lunch On Mt. Vernon Place

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor.

Headed by the convention of the National Pan-Hellenic Association, opening at the Wardman Park Hotel, the list of important club events today makes it one of the busiest days of a crowded week.

The annual Missionary Institute of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches, will close with a luncheon attended by several hundred church women, at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

A feature of the luncheon, in addition to a talk by Mrs. Harper Sibley, of Rochester, N. Y., a former Washington resident, will be the presence of Mrs. Eugene V. Pugh, of Los Angeles, past president of the council. Mrs. Pugh resigned as head of the organization when she left for the West two years ago, and was succeeded by Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, who is now president. Mrs. Pugh will offer the invocation at the luncheon, at which Mrs. Linzel will preside.

Yesterday, at the institute, Mrs. Leslie E. Swain, of New York, prefaced a discussion of the foreign mission study book, "Through Tragedy to Triumph," by Basil Mathews, with a description of her trip through Japan and China, following the meeting of the International Missionary Council in Madras, India, last winter.

The Christian nations in Japan are being led to believe the aggression of their country is justified, she said, and to look upon it as "a holy war," although Christian churches in China have been demolished by bombs.

She found the Chinese surprisingly free from bitterness in their attitude toward the Japanese people and learned that having what they term a long-range view of the conflict, they are not sending the cream of their youth to the battlefields, but are educating them for leadership.

A second committee meeting of the General Gustave Orlicz Dreszer Foundation for Aid to Polish Children will be held this afternoon at the Raleigh Hotel.

Plans for raising funds include a play written by Dr. Noel Kaho, and directed by Countess Guita Barry Orlovo, which will be given during the holidays and a concert which will be presented on December 3 by Mme. Dreszer, widow of Gen. Dreszer, who was Poland's pioneer in aviation. When funds are no longer needed for relief, they will be devoted to scholarships for children of Polish descent.

The Mary Baldwin Alumnae Association willl give a tea this afternoon, honoring Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, and an alumna of the college. It will be at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women.

The American Bicentennial and District of Columbia chapters of American War Mothers, will hold a joint installation of officers at the Raleigh Hotel tonight and the Women of the Moose will observe Founders Day with a special ceremony at Moose Hall.

Mrs. Vann, Vice President of Gray Daughters, Marks Silver Wedding to Mr. Vann

PAST HISTORY of more kinds than one has occupied the attention of Mrs. Livingston Vann this week. As vice president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in the District, she had part in arrangements for the historical evening of the organization, held last night. But more important still, from her point of view, was the observance of her own silver wedding anniversary on Tuesday.

Just 25 years ago, on October 24, Mary Inez Wells became the bride of Livingston Vann, jr., at the Central Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. Dr. James H. Taylor officiating. Theirs was the first wedding to be performed in the new church and it was attended by a large gathering of friends and relatives.

The bride's little sister (now Mrs. Edna W. Mann) was the flower girl, and four other sisters were bridesmaids, among them Mrs. Enoch Jasper Vann, who had been married three years before to the brother of the bridegroom. Mr. Vann was best man, making it a real family affair.

He and his wife were both there on Tuesday as were the others.

Mrs. Swift E. Boykin, of New York; Mrs. Omar Bailey Buchanan, of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Robert Johnston Swingle and Mrs. Mann, of the District. Two other bridesmaids, Mrs. Harry B. Gauss and Miss Louise Moore, also were among the guests. Also there were the two groomsmen, Corwin Newkirk and Fred Boorman, and, of course, Dr. Taylor and Mrs. Adolphus Wilkerson Wells, mother of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Vann, sr., parents of the bridegroom. Also there to help celebrate the anniversary was Livingston Vann 3d, who is just half-past 3 years old.

The reception and buffet supper were held at the Martha Washington Seminary with members of the family and a few other friends of the Vann's comprising the guests. Among them was Mrs. Ralph Stevens Pendexter, who is president of the District U. D. C.

Mrs. Gibson Announces Golden Jubilee Project At Meeting Here

Mrs. Orie E. Gibson, State chairman of approved schools for the District D. A. R., yesterday announced as the golden jubilee project of the committee, a plan to increase funds for scholarships for the D. A. R.-owned and operated schools at Tamassee, N. C., and at Grant, Ala. The meeting was held at Memorial Continental Hall.

These schools are located in mountainous sections of the South where public and other schools are not available so that children would otherwise be deprived of all formal education. Both day and boarding pupils up to the eighth grade are provided for in the two institutions by members of the D. A. R.

The work of this committee in providing for the education of underprivileged children has always been enthusiastically supported by the 60 D. A. R. chapters in the District and Mrs. Gibson is confident that a greater number of scholarships than usual will be forthcoming this year.

Mrs. G. H. Stapp, national vice chairman of the approved schools committee, told the local members of the work being done by the various States toward the education of the underprivileged throughout the Nation, under D. A. R. sponsorship. Among other large projects recently completed was the Indiana model farm, presented to Tamassee School by Indiana Daughters, which is to be dedicated by Mrs. Henry H. Robert, jr., on Monday.

Mrs. Roger Williams, State registrar for the District Daughters, has called a meeting of the chapter registrars today at 11 o'clock in the Louisiana room of Memorial Continental Hall which will be addressed by Mrs. Leon Nason, registrar general.

Cathryn Ann Riggleman, of 5242 Forty-second street northwest, will entertain the Potomac Society of the C. A. R. tomorrow at 2 o'clock. She will be assisted by John and James Riggleman.

The honored guests will be Mrs. Carl H. Gerou, State president of the District C. A. R.; Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, national chairmen of radio of the D. A. C., and Mrs. D. S. Dembry, State chairman of radio for the C. A. R.

Lee; Mrs. Mary T. Lampson, Southern Cross; Mrs. W. T. Everington, Dixie; Mrs. W. O. Owen, Jefferson Davis; Mrs. James Trimble, Hilary A. Herbert; Mrs. M. E. Yates, Richard Stoddard Ewell; Mrs. W. F. Thornhill, Gen. J. E. B. Stuart; Mrs. Adolphus W. Wells, Asha Williams; Miss Agnes Roueche, Confederate Flag.

There was music by a double quartet including Miss Thelma Hardy, Mrs. Ida Wells, Miss Fern Byrd, Mrs. Violet Breeding, Victor Russell, John Hall, George Magdenberger and Larry Zuch, accompanied by Paul Hardesty.

A special guest was Mrs. Carroll L. Stewart, of Los Angeles, a member of the board of veterans appeals and honorary life president of the California U. D. C.

National Unity Urged Against Totalitarianism

Mrs. Sibley Addresses D. C. Round Table of Christians and Jews

If America is to preserve its democracy and point the way to a world community, its diverse groups must work together harmoniously, with respect for the individual and with reliance on religious foundations.

Mrs. Harper Sibley of Rochester, N. Y., expressed that thought yesterday at the first fall luncheon of the Washington Round Table of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Speaking on "The Place of Religion in a Democracy" at a meeting at the Willard Hotel, Mrs. Sibley said religious teachings on the sacredness of human personality and furtherance of the Kingdom of God are fundamental in achieving better economic and industrial life, race and class situations.

Totalitarian Bulwark

Otherwise, she said "we would find ourselves with a totalitarian state and we would deserve it."

Milton W. King, co-chairman of the meeting who introduced Mrs. Sibley, spoke of the "totalitarian state which is sweeping through Europe, debasing personal dignity" and of America's "grave responsibility" as a bulwark against such inroads.

Mrs. Sibley, a leader in women's activities of the Episcopal Church and in Y. W. C. A. work, pointed out that it is a mistake to think of the United States as an Anglo-Saxon country. "The genius of America is that it is made up of so many groups. It is the only country so constituted. It remains to be seen if on that basis, we can point the way to a world community.

"To be American is to be inclusive," she said.

Proposes a Platform

More than 100 representatives of Catholic, Jewish and Protestant faiths at the luncheon heard her propose this platform:

"In those things in which we agree, unity; in those things in which we disagree, liberty; in all things, the purpose and desire that we shall be one."

Cochairmen with King were Joseph P. Tumulty and Dr. Wilson Compton. Among those at the speakers' table were Dr. Norman Gerstenfeld and the Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan.

An Institute of Human Relations on the theme, "Keeping Open the Channels of Inter-Group Relations" will be held at the Willard with tentative dates set for January 16 and 17, it was announced by Donald T. Sheehan, secretary of the Washington Round Table of the Conference.

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Oct. 28.

Tomorrow, F. D. R. will present Roosevelt Medals to Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, retired; Carl Sandburg, poet and Dr. George Washington Carver, Negro agricultural chemist. All worthy of honor for jobs well done. But why not go a step farther? Lots of people don't read poetry, therefore have never read Carl Sandburg. But everyone within riding distance of a moving picture theater has seen a movie. And since Mr. Roosevelt makes this an annual event, why not recognize the important contribution of the picture industry to the patriotic education of the American people by presenting a medal to the producer who makes the greatest single contribution to his fellow countrymen by way of the screen? It will give our boys something to shoot at, and help dramatize the outsanding role this industry plays in swaying public opinion. It will make people think of us in the proper light as a constructive, not destructive, force in the progress of this Nation, rather than just another medium of entertainment and amusement.

HOPPER

If our President were to include Hollywood this year he'd have to consider Frank Capra's "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," our red, white and blue epic. Honorary mention should go to Warner's for "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," nor could you skip the editors of "March of Time." How about Cliff Reid of RKO for the Jack Barrymore picture, proving importance of every man's vote regardless of race, creed, color—"The Great Man Votes." If the White House favors this suggestion the industry could work with the President and the public might vote on which pictures it believes earn the right to a Roosevelt medal. It's something to think about—and now I've thrown in my two cents' worth.

No truth to the rumor that Jean Parker will reconcile with her husband just because she's going East to make a picture. Since Jean's had Yolanda making her clothes she's known as a fashion plate . . . If Wayne Morris' heir arrives per schedule, January 4, Jane Wyman will be godmother—'cause that's her birthday, too. Baby's named already, poor innocent. If a boy, 'twill be Bert DeWaynne Morris the 3d. If a girl, Michaeltorena. If it's twins, names will fill an entire paragraph.

That sore throat epidemic has the town jittery—latest to be stricken is Brod Crawford, who can't talk above a whisper—thus holding up retakes on "City for Sale" . . . Ouida Rathbone—just back from "21" (her idea of New York) brought one of Elizabeth Arden's latest gas masks back. The top was packed with beauty products, including powder. Ironically enough most of the Arden-trained men have new jobs. Instead of making powder for beautifying a pretty face, they're making power for firing on the Western Front. Both extremely dangerous to our men?

Pere Westmore, if he cares to go into another business, can make a fortune in busts. The one he made of Charles Laughton, though it's a far cry from beauty, is made of liquid rubber, so realistic and alive-looking it has more personality than most humans . . . Which reminds me of the dowager who had her face lifted so often the only way they can lift it again is with helium gas! Meow!

The farewell party Doug, jr., gave for Davie Niven reached a new high when four men dressed in the McKinsey tartan came in playing bagpipes, then curtains parted and two dancing girls appeared, in same plaid, but less of it. A little strip tease was thrown in for good measure. Snapshot boys didn't get the dancing girls—they didn't need 'em. Expression on the boys' faces told the story.

Nigel Bruce related one of his priceless stories, boys listened, then gave him a dose of silence, leaving Bruce with his mouth open. The incident was forgotten, until Basil Rathbone did the same thing, with like results. When Bruce turned to Basil and sneered: "Let that be a lesson to you, you city Shakespearan fop." . . . Gathering Mitch Leisen threw together for Mary Parker and Billy Daniels was a high spot, too. If Mitch likes you, he never pulls his punches. He flew on to New York to arrange the dances, costumes and publicity for these kids when they opened at the St. Regis. Now they'll open at the Beverly Wilshire, all because a rich patron of the place, while listening to Cosina Wright, jr., sing said: "This is old stuff to us New Yorkers. Why don't you get the kids who made a sensational success at the St. Regis Roof this summer?" They turned out to be Mary and Billy who left here seven months ago, because Hollywood wouldn't give them a chance, but were the hit of New York all summer. I know—I saw them there three times.

At Willie Wyler's anniversary cocktail party Sam Goldwyn couldn't stop raving about his hostess, the former Margaret Tallichet. "She must get into action at once," he insisted. We seconded the motion . . . Funny seeing Loretta Young, Merle Oberon, Elsa Lanchester all come—and go—stag! But real highlight was the enthusiasm of Willie's first wife, Margaret Sullavan for the second wife's baby! That's the kind of Hollywood I like to write about.

Just after the gang had seen Niven off on the plane to New York, they turned around to help celebrate Andrea Leeds departure for her marriage in Del Monte. She was surrounded by at least 14 men, among them Roland Lee, Reggie Gardiner, Jimmy Bryan and Billy Seymour. They heard the plane's roar and suddenly the pilot came puffing in and shouted: "If you're going to make that wedding, Miss Leeds, you'd better come at once, 'cause Mr. Howard doesn't like to be kept waiting." . . . Reggie Gardiner tells me his part with Chaplin in "The Dictator" is terrific. He'd heard in a round about way that Chaplin wanted him, but nothing was set until he ran into him at a party, and Chaplin said: "Now Reggie, in this scene you'll do so-and-so and I'll do this-and-that. But just take it easy—we won't need you for six weeks." The next day Reggie got the largest guarantee and salary he's had thus far in pictures. And he never knew Charlie until then.

Albertina Rasch, Vienna's Gift To American Ballet, Is Here

Albertina Rasch, Vienna's contribution to the uplift of American ballet, is in town on some fleeting business and offered gratis some of the million-dollar advice she has given most of America's famous dancers.

Miss Rasch, whose name is as well known as ballet, said "take them young" and give them ballet lessons first "because it is the foundation of all dancing—even tap."

And they've got to have it in their blood if they're going to dance places. They've got to have rhythm—they can't do a thing if they haven't got the swing in their systems. Of course, they all can be "developed" but rhythm to some degree must be there. The more rhythm, the more instinctive feel for music, the better.

They've got to have good legs, too. No denying that, said the ballet mistress. And then Miss Rasch took up the subject of these jitterbugs . . . well, of course not everybody is jitterbugging . . . just a few people, and it's not important enough to fill anyone with horror. On the contrary, it even is a lot of fun. Something like football.

"Of course," said Miss Rasch, "it's like football. You know, in football they knock one another down and jump on each other. And the jitterbug . . . those jitterbugs . . . they're like football. Football and jitterbugs are fun . . . it's youth."

And let the girls know: "Swinging your legs in dancing these days doesn't mean much. There is more and more a meaning behind all dances. They must be more of actors now." And the wars and politics, now as all through history, will rule the trends in dancing. The wild hysteria follows wars, reflecting in the dances, she said, recalling the short-skirted cut-ups of the 1920's.

She flew in from Hollywood, arriving here yesterday. A professional dance group needed a few words from her—and a few hits across the stage to show how Miss Rasch would have it—not that there is perfection ever in the ballet.

Oyster Packers Hear State Plans For Conservation

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (AP).—The State Conservation Commission's plans for cooperating with oyster packers during the dredging season that opens Wednesday were outlined today at a meeting of the commission and seafood interests.

Edwin Warfield, jr., chairman of the commission, presided. Part of the discussion was devoted to the proposal for a uniform policy, governing coastal fisheries in Maryland, Virginia and North Carolina.

The commission also outlined new regulations in the oyster industry and explained the State's plans for enforcement of the cull law and compensatory measures designed to balance production.

3 of 4 Fugitives Captured in Va.

Martinsville, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Only one of four men who staged a daring daylight escape from the Henry County Jail here yesterday remained at large today.

He is Lester Clark, 21, who was indicted for participation in the slaying of Charles Turner, for which Mrs. Gertrude Turner was sentenced to 20-year imprisonment.

The other three were nabbed yesterday and last night. They are Oscar Bullins, young textile worker, facing a 20-year sentence for attempted criminal assault; Tommy Edwards and Hugh Angle, young North Carolinians, under five-year sentences for auto theft.

As long as a football is shaped the way it is and can take the crazy bounce native to it, the danger exists that unbeaten Georgetown will be licked by George Washington. The grave concern of Georgetown coaches as tomorrow's game approaches is no affectation. They know how ball games can be won and lost.

POVICH

Georgetown is a deserted favorite, although the odd of 2 to 1 may be too enthusiastic. The Hoyas are unbeaten since 1937 and have developed a habit of winning the tough ball games, even as they scored a field goal in the last minute to beat Temple, 3-2, scored a touchdown in the last 5 minutes to avert defeat by Syracuse, and pushed over a last-quarter touchdown to beat Bucknell, 13-7. George Washington has been licked by Butler and was totally unimpressive in a 13-7 victory over a scrawny little Citadel team last week.

But to persons close to George Washington football a victory over Georgetown tomorrow would not be a stunning upset. There are ways of calculating G. W. as the winner. Their defeat by Butler can be tossed out of consideration, perhaps. They were beaten by Tom Harding, a colored halfback, whom the Midwest rates as a better ball carrier than anybody G. W. will be asked to meet against Georgetown.

At G. W. U., Coach Bill Reinhart is relieved of one source of worry that is troubling Georgetown coaches. Jack Hagerty is too well aware of the fact that he has only five first-line backfield men; that an injury or two will put a terrific burden on his reserve and probably hobble the Hilltop attack seriously. The injury specter is an awesome thing for Georgetown coaches.

Hoyas Boast Two Brilliant Backs

None of George Washington's backs have achieved the brilliance that belongs to Georgetown's Lou Ghecas and Jules Koshlap, but Coach Reinhart has no less than eight capable journeymen in his backfield who, under inspiring circumstances, might surpass themselves.

When Ghecas isn't in the important tailback position for Georgetown, Coach Hagerty's team isn't at peak strength, but Reinhart can send a virtual stream of fresh men to his backfield. What will happen tomorrow may be tantamount to a relay race with Ken Batson, Billy Richardson and Ed Wilamoski carrying on against Ghecas, who may have to go all the way for Georgetown.

The edge in deception will lie with George Washington, however. Ghecas is not highly rated as a kicker or passer and is regarded strictly as a ball carrier, but each of the G. W. tailbacks are qualified in at least two departments. Richardson passes and runs; Wilamoski is truly a triple-threater, and Batson runs and kicks.

It would be pretty futile to attempt to detract from Koshlap's passing ability. The Georgetown lad is pretty close to being the best passer hat ever graced a Washington team, but G. W. U. is not exactly unfortunate in its passing personnel. Young Billy Richardson, a standout among scholastic passers when he was playing for Central High School, would not be shooed off the field by any coach in need of a chucker.

Coaches Don't Know Limits of Players

George Washington folks are nursing the secret suspicion that tomorrow may bring the great awakening of the stocky little Richardson who thus far has failed to justify his scholastic notices. Since being demoted to the second team, Richardson has been displaying more determination than ever marked his play for G. W. U. in previous seasons and he always did have sufficient talent.

At G. W. U. the coaches actually don't know the limits of their football team. Ed Wilamoski is fast, shifty and dynamite in the open field despite his failure to break away against Butler and Citadel. Batson's 60-yard run against Citadel was a terrific eye-opener, and Murphy Booth is the sort of a blocking back who can make a backfield move. Sam Babich is a converted end and, like Booth, a durable and powerful blocker. Reinhart has an idea that by shuttling fresh men into his backfield he can make it go places.

There isn't much doubt about the G. W. U. power. The Colonials have gained 657 yards in rushing to 164 by their opponents, and have rolled up 47 first downs while yielding only 13. They suffered chiefly from poor quarter-backing and generalship against Butler and The Citadel and the team's power was profaned. But Reinhart has taken his quarterbacks aside during the last week and truthfully expects the G. W. power to be harnessed fully against the Hoyas.

Georgetown Line Will Play Important Role

Georgetown's swell line will have a powerful voice in the proceedings tomorrow but the Colonials are not exactly weak in the line. Botchy Koch, the old Baylor Bear, hasn't turned out a poor line in several years at G. W. and as long as he is able to keep his first-string linemen in the game Georgetown will have a battle on its hands.

Georgetown will also have on its hands Bob Nowaskey, the big G. W. end who can knock down a wall of interference, catch a pass, rush the blazes out of kickers and passers, and take the ball places on end-around plays. Jersey No. 66 will be plenty conspicuous once the opening whistle toots. And Georgetown's spread play will not exactly take G. W. by surprise, because it was the Colonials who started the spread play business in Washington and gave it up as a bad job when they discovered there was a defense for the spread play.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 26.—The proposed Pan-American Olympics, which would be held at the New York World's Fair next summer and would be the America's answer to the nations who ruined the 1940 Olympics, could easily become one of the great sports events of our times.

CONSIDINE

Suggested by Damon Runyon, after the American Olympic Committee said there was no hope that the original Olympics could be transferred from Finland, the Pan-American Olympics would draw its competitors from North, South and Central America.

It would be a fine gesture, too, to invite Finland—the country that spent $10,000,000 preparing for the war-blasted 1940 games. The little country is at least American in spirit, even if geographically isolated.

George Marshall held a successful Pan-American Olympics two years ago in Dallas, and anticipated the diplomatic marriage of the Americas by publishing a pamphlet on the good that would come of regular athletic relations between the Western Hemisphere countries. He is a colorful fellow, and has been a promoter since he got promoted from kindergarten to the first grade. He could find the new Pan-American games easier to put on than the first one, for the seeds of his first show stirred up considerable interest in sports from Mexico to Cape Horn, and the industry of sport has made tremendous strides down there since then.

Pan-American Governments Would Jump

Our Olympic committee has enough money to ship a full squad to Helsingfors, in the slim chance that the war will subside in time to hold the regular games. It would need to spend little or none of it to ship its full complement of athletes to New York. The Fair probably would be willing to underwrite the expenses of the American team. The Pan-American governments certainly would leap at the chance of sending teams here, and all certainly would be represented.

There are no stadiums on the fair grounds and no pretentious ones need be built to house even as giant a show as this would be. The court of peace, sodded and with stout temporary stands, might seat 40,000 for track and field events. Bill Rose's Aquacade in the greatest swimming and diving arena ever built and a deal certainly could be made whereby it could be used. Soccer games could be at nearby Randall's Island Stadium, which seats 40,000, and the polo tourney could be down the road at Meadow Brook. The marathon could be run through the grounds, there being 61 miles of roads and paths on the reservation. The boxing could go into the main court of peace arena, and the wrestling weight-lifting and such in the big railroads on parade exhibit, which seats thousands. Runyon's estimate that the Pan American games would draw 1,000,000 spectators in its two-week or ten-day existence isn't rash.

MacPhail's Plan Has Its Points

Something can be said on both sides about Larry MacPhail's suggestion that the big leagues adopt a rule whereby there will be post-season series between the leagues. For instance the second place teams in the American and National Leagues would play a series, and so on down to the Browns and 'Phils. It would be novel and provide the first answer to the debate about the merit of the leagues.

The MacPhail plan will need a complete endorsement to avoid becoming a MacPhallure. We have an idea that both Chicago clubs will object—for they have an annual post-season series which is a money-making fixture. The Yanks will be hard to convince too, for they will be reluctant to share their early October spotlight with, for instance, a Dodger-Indians series and a Giants-Senators meeting.

Alex Morrison, the great golf teacher who is biographed by Granny Rice in this week's Sapost (lost a pupil a few years ago). The pupil's name was Bugs Baer. Bugs had been knocking down trees and digging up divots for nearly an entire round. Finally Morrison, who was playing along, couldn't stand it. In his gruff way he told Bugs exactly how to stand, how to swing, and how to keep his chin pointed back away from the ball's flight. Bugs did as he was directed, keeping his head down, and hit a perfect shot that stopped inches from the cup. Finally he looked up.

"Where did it go?" Bugs demanded.

"Why it's right up there by the cup," Morrison said, with pardonable pride.

"I make the first good shot in my life, and don't see it," Bugs groaned. "To hell with your system!"

Spirited Hoya Pep Rally Startles Georgetown

Hoyas and Colonials Cheer Each Other In Pleasing Show Of Friendly Rival

By Jack Munhall.

Pre-game hysteria for tomorrow's football classic between Georgetown and George Washington Universities, their first in 16 years, was climaxed last night with a wild, but happily, an orderly pep rally by Georgetown students, alumni and followers.

Not at all affected by the spirit of the G. W.'s and the G. U.'s, the local gambling fraternity last night was quoting odds of 2-1 that the Hoyas would lick the Colonials. Loyal G. W. students and alumni avidly seeking the 3-1 odds purportedly being laid against their team found no such easy pickings.

Though the rally, the biggest and noisiest in Hilltop history, started on a sour note when alleged G. W. sabotage resulted in a pre-mature lighting of Georgetown's bonfire, it finished in a stirring salute to George Washington which augurs well for continuance of this long-sought local rivalry.

A Victory Parade

After a rousing demonstration of student spirit at the Hilltop where the Georgetown contingent held a victory parade and heard speeches by outstanding football players and student leaders, an automobile calvacade of about 200 roared down to George Washington.

In front of the Colonials' library on G street between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets the Georgetown men hopped out of their cars and let loose a good-natured torrent of abuse at wtice their unmber of George Washington students and onlookers. But there was no untoward incident. Giant firecrackers were tossed from windows of the G. W. library to explode on the lawn in front of the building and the deafening reports coupled with the flashlights the G. U. played on the scene smacked strongly of an air raid.

Only once did trouble seem imminent. Georgetown students started a rush through the entrance of the G. W. library but were checked at the entrance. In all the jostling and pushing, however, there was no punching and nothing to indicate that the bitter rivalry between the two local colleges goes any deeper than a fierce determination to beat each other on the athletic field.

Sing School Songs

The Georgetown motorized unit lingered on G street fully a half-hour, singing school songs and pausing while G. W. supporters suggested a "Hoya, Hoya, Saxa for George Washington." And it was given with as much spirit as if the Georgetowns were honoring their school. Not to be outdone in courtesy, the George Washingtons then cheered Georgetown. Soon thereafter the Hilltop visitors started back for school, slowing up at the corner of Twenty-first and G to toss out on the G. W. campus an effigy of a George Washington player which by now was a tattered and torn figure in Buff and Blue.

The Georgetown pep rally began

Injuries to Squad Leave Starting Lineup in Doubt For Clemson Tilt

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 26 (AP).—The doctors rather than the football coaches today appeared assured of the major say in picking the Navy team that will oppose Clemson here Saturday.

Continual injury to backs have upset every plan made by Maj. Emery E. (Swede) Larson, head Navy coach, and his assistants, with the result that they will wait until Friday before announcing the starting line-up.

Just for the record the coach picked out a probable starting line-up today, but it was pointed out that the "probable" should be emphasized. The final choices will depend upon the doctor's verdict on a number of players.

Whitehead Shifted

The Navy has been practicing with a backfield consisting of Wes Gebert, Monty Whitehead, Ralph Boyer and Albie Boothe. Whitehead, who usually functions at quarter, was moved to right half yesterday for the first time this season. Boyer has been calling the signals and Gebert has been cast at left half.

Maj. Larson still hopes Big Cliff Lenz will be able to start against the Southerners. Lenz is suffering some scrimmage ills and has been forced to miss practice periods. If he starts Whitehead will take Boothe's place in the backfield. Everett Malcolm, left handed passer, who has been nursing a charley horse all week may be able to get in the game.

Mayo, Rowse Injured

Besides Emmett Wood, star climax runner, and Lenz, other injured Navy backs include Lou Mayo, Earl Rowse and Sherwood Werner. Some of the linemen have been shaken up and shifts have been made in the forward wall.

Only a few of the injuries are serious and most of the regulars are expected to be able to take the field against Clemson.

"We are plenty worried about Clemson and are taking the Southerners as serious as we can take any opponent," Larson said. "They really are bringing a ball club to Annapolis and are going to be mighty tough."

The Clemson players will arrive here Saturday morning and will leave immediately after the game. Thirty-three players will make the trip.

FBI Probing Horse Doping At Jamaica

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 26.—The State Racing Commission and the Federal Bureau of Narcotics are investigating the circumstances surrounding the victory of Slattern in the sixth race at Jamaica last Saturday, as well as the running of two other horses owned and trained by the same men.

Steward Marshall Cassidy announced today the case had been referred to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, but that no ruling will be made until the investigation is complete, probably in a few days. No announcement was made of the results of saliva tests on any of the horses.

In addition to Slattern, a 4-year-old brown filly by Teddy out of Green Girl, the horses are Colored Child, 2-year-old chestnut gelding which ran fourth in the first race on the same program, and Snuggle, a 2-year-old bay filly, which finished eleventh in Jamaica's first race Tuesday. All are owned by J. Craig and trained by J. Peters.

Slattern, ridden by Jockey Mike Caffarella, broke in third place in Saturday's gallop, went out in front almost immediately and won in a common gallop by three lengths over J. V. Tigani's The Queen. The 4-year-old had opened at 13 to 5, second choice in the betting but was backed down to the favorite's role at 8 to 5 in the closing odds.

Two agents from the Federal Narcotics Bureau's office have been assigned to the investigation. In all cases of stimulation of horses, the Federal bureau is interested in determining the source of the narcotics. The local office is headed by Maj. Garland Williams.

GeorgeWashintgon Rally Today Due To Make History

The largest pep rally in history of George Washington University will be held on the Colonial campus this afternoon at 4:45 as the Buff and Blue supporters give the squad a send-off for tomorrow's battle with Georgetown. The G. W. Band, the cheer leaders and the football squad and coaches will be present.

The principal talks will be by Line Coach Botchey Koch, whose address last year was popularly received, and John Daugherty, president of the student council. Coach Bill Reinhart will speak briefly and will introduce Bob Nowaskey, Sam Babich, Murphy Booth and Sunny Jones, key members of the team.

Challedon's Trainer Kicked—'All in Fun'

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 26.—Challedon, the 3-year-old champion and leading candidate for the title, "Horse of the Year," was pronounced rough, tough and ready today to meet all comers in the Pimlico Special, November 1.

He was so tough that he kicked Trainer Lou Schaefer just before he went out on Pimlico's cushiony track to breeze half a mile in 50½ seconds, in his first workout for the $10,000 winner-take-all race.

Schaefer said the kick on his shins was all in fun.

"He's mighty particular who he kicks," Schaefer explained, "but that big mug isn't afraid of anything. He's in fine shape now and we expect to keep him that way."

Working W. L. Brann's muscular bay colt was his regular exercise boy, Clayton Trippy, wiry former jockey who hails from Claremore, Okla. He has been with Challedon since the son of Challenger II and Laura Gal had his first saddle on.

Rain was dripping from the eaves of barn No. 1 and that brought up the question of mud—mud such as that in which Challedon won the Preakness last May.

"The public seems to think that Challedon is strictly a mudder,"

See CHALLEDON, Page 24, Col. 7.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Laurel, Md., Oct. 26.—Eddie Arcaro, veteran jockey and one of the Nation's top "money riders," will have the mount on W. L. Brann's Challedon in the Pimlico Special next Wednesday. Trainer Lou Schaefer made this known to friends today. Arcaro takes over the saddle assignment on the gallant son of Challenger 2d for the first time. He succeeds Jockey Harry Richards, who is recovering from an operation.

Jockey George Woolf, who has ridden Challedon in recent victories, will ride C. S. Howard's Kayak II.

60,000 to See Bucks Battle Big Red Eleven

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 26 (AP).—Cornell's Big Red, 1938 Ivy League champion and undefeated in three games this season, is due to invade the Buckeye capital at 5 a. m. tomorrow for Saturday's grid scrap with Ohio State's Juggernaut.

Buckeye ticket officials estimated that close to 60,000 will see the two clean-record elevens clash at Ohio Stadium.

Both teams are scheduled for short workouts tomorrow afternoon on the stadium turf, and then rest up for the first meeting in history between the Big Red and the Bucks.

Cornell's band will spend half its $6,000 budget for its first trip West and will offer a battle of music with Ohio's famous group of marching horn-tooters.

The Bucks will have a slight edge in weight, but both teams are three-deep with talent at most positions.

The Easterners have racked up 96 points to 13 for the foe in winning three games, while Ohio has scored but 56 while the enemy was getting 20.

Yost Is Host To Michigan's 1901-05 Squad

By the Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 26.—Surviving members of the University of Michigan's famous "point a minute" football teams of 1901-1905 will hold a reunion here Saturday with Fielding H. (Hurry Up) Yost, then their coach and still athletic director, as their host.

Between halves of the Michigan-Yale game the old-timers will form the block "M" on the gridiron while the university band plays "The Victors" in honor of the one-time "champions of the West."

Otherwise the reunion will be entirely informal, with the former players seated together at the game in a special box.

In the 1901-1905 period Yost assembled teams which ran up the amazing total of 2,821 points while their opponents scored only 40. In that first season Michigan scored 550 points while holding its opponents scoreless in 11 games and then went West to beat Stanford 49-0 in what is known as the first Rose Bowl game.

Thereafter the opposition was taken into camp steadily except for Minnesota, which gained a 6-6 tie in 1903. Chicago finally defeated Michigan 2-0 in 1905 after the Wolverines had gone through 56 consecutive games without defeat.

Among the gridiron heroes of thoes days expected to be present for the reunion are Adolph (Germany) Schulz, Detroit, first of the roving centers, and "Wee Willie" Heston, Detroit, a rip-roaring back. These two are among the game's all-time greats.

Tech-Roosevelt Battle Tops High School Football Program

Six Games Scheduled For Today

Rider-TechEncounter Brings Together Two New Coaches in High Championship Series

By Bill Burnett

Between them the football aggregations of McKinley and Roosevelt Highs boast a single 6-point victory in eight games this year, but their clash today at Tech at 3:30 provides the highlight of a full day of scholastic activity. In all, six games involving local and nearby elevens are listed.

The top spot goes to the Rider-Manual Trainer engagement because, despite their records, the two schools have potentially powerful clubs. Roosevelt has sprinkled six scintillating quarters through its four hopeless defeats, and Tech, after playing mop to its first three opponents, owns the only triumph of the pair. It pushed over St. John's last week, the only fly in the ointment being the fact that two Johnnie stars failed to get in the game.

New Coaches Clash

The game also brings together a pair of new coaches, Artie Wondrack picking up the trainer reins where "Rusty" Thompson dropped them, and Artie Boyd handling Roosevelt after two seasons at Eastern. More than they care to admit, hinges on the outcome for the two young teachers, and they may be expected to go the limit for victory.

As the two squads went through final and light drills yesterday, the main development was Wondrack's shakeup of his starting eleven. Instead of the huge backs he's depended on until now, Wondrack will throw four youngsters he calls "the fastest in the series" at the Riders. With a number of new plays as his best weapon, Jack Walsh, 155-pound speedster, takes over the quarterback job of Don Cockrille and his mates will probably be Vic McCampbell, Bill Delestatious and Vern Hollidge.

A newcomer to Tech from Hyattsville High, Carlton Smallwood, has been declared eligible and will be used unless an unforeseen hitch arises. He's 190 pounds of halfback with as much speed and deception as any coach could ask.

Other Games Today

While Roosevelt and Tech try to push each other into the "worst team" category, the western division will see Woodrow Wilson, the underdog defenders, entertain Western's ruthless Raiders.

Georgetown Prep, nursing a smaller edition of the Georgetown University undefeated record—three games—plays Landon in what should be a bang-up game at Bethesda. Two teams, Eastern and Anacostia, take short trips for afternoon games, meeting John Marshall High, of Richmond, and Washington-Lee High in their respective strongholds. And the final hostilities of the day will be at Alexandria at 8 p. m., when Central plays its second night game of the year against George Washington High. Five thousand fans are expected at the latter game, one of the best crowds of the season at the Virginia stadium.

Reds Topped Both Leagues In Attendance

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Oct. 26.—The National League champion Reds played to 1,133,926 fans at home this year, earned $400,000 profit and "definitely are not for sale," President Powel Crosley, jr., reported today as directors met at his hospital bedside.

Declaring the attendance topped that of any team in either major loop, Crosley said the club had reduced its indebtedness by approximately $62,000, paid off arrearage dividends on two classes of preferred paper and that the board had "just declared" a $6.50 payment on common stock.

Crosley, recovering from sprained vertebrae received in a fall from a horse on October 8, said the club had "paid in excess of $162,000 for players' contracts, over and above what we received for sale of players' contracts;" spent more than $115,000 in park improvements; $120,000 more in purchase of the Birmingham (Ala.) Club "and other expenses in connection with the farm system."

To a newsman's comment that he had a "buyer for the club," Crosley laughed:

"Not for the world. I'd want more than any man would be willing to pay."

Home attendance included 934,854 paid admittances and 139,072 "ladies' day" fans. In 1938 the team played to 706,756 at home, and the year before, to about 411,000.

As directors met, the front office announced that Jewel Ens, deposed Pittsburgh Pirate coach, had been offered a job with the club, "but not as coach."

Denying St. Louis reports that Ens was booked to succeed Jimmy Wilson, General Manager Warren C. Giles indicated he might become a scout.

There was denial also of immediately pending "trades."

Giles said Manager Bill McKechnie "just phoned from Pittsburgh today . . . said he had been snowed out of a hunting trip in New Brunswick (Canada).

"'It's funny,' Giles quoted him, 'to get back and find that while I've been gone, all the bleacher coaches have traded my team away . . . hope none of 'em have made a bad deal!'"

Manager Turns Field Goal Artist for Yale

Howie Kaye, 160-pound halfback from Middleburg, Va., is the lad Yale calls on when they need a field goal or a convention now. He broke his ankle as a freshman, refused to say quits, became a manager. Last spring his kicking attracted attention. "Two-Play Kaye" they call him. West Virginians, Gamecocks Clash For First Time

Orangeburg, S. C., Oct. 26 (AP).—South Carolina's Gamecocks and West Virginia's Mountaineers meet on the gridiron here for the first time tomorrow. The kickoff is scheduled for 2 p. m.

The squads held light maneuvers in Columbia this afternoon and will come here tomorrow morning.

Coaches were cautious about any predictions. The Carolinians have defeated only Davidson this year. The Mountaineers have a .500 average, whipping Wesleyan and Cincinnati and losing to Pittsburgh and Washington and Lee.

The Gamecocks' losses were to Wake Forest, Catholic and Villanova.

Ens Offered Job With Cincinnati; May Do Scouting

Cincinnati, Oct. 26 (AP).—General Manager Warren C. Giles of the champion Reds said today Jewel Ens had been offered a place with the team. It was indicted, without confirmation or denial, that Ens would become a scout.

Denying St. Louis reports that Ens would succeed Jimmy Wilson as coach here, Giles said negotiations had not been completed.

"Wilson and (Hank) Gowdy are still our coaches," Giles said, "and there will be no changes in our coaching staff until (Manager) Bill McKechnie decides there should be one."

V. M. I. Seeks Third Upset In Succession

Squad Leaves Today For Saturday Tilt With Columbia's Lions

Special Cable to The Post

Lexington, Va., Oct. 26.—Twenty-nine V. M. I. football players—including almost every member of Coach "Pooley" Hubert's streamlined squad—will leave Lexington tomorrow morning for New York, where the Cadets will meet Lou Little's Columbia Lions Saturday.

With the exception of Harold Tipton, 230-pound star of a line composed of last year's reserves and Sophomores, the Cadets are in the mood to make it three upsets in a row— unless Columbia refuses the cooperation given by Vanderbilt and Virginia. Neil Brown, a 205-pound converted fullback, played the entire Virginia game at tackle after Tipton was injured on the first play, and the stocky former-back is slated for starting service.

Captain Paul Shu, Son Shelby, and the brilliant Sophomore pair, Nelson Catlett and "Bosh" Pritchard, are the backs who have been heaving the ball this week, indicating that the Cadets will test Columbia's pass defense. Scout Russ Cohen has already issued the warning that the Lions will show the Cadets the best defense they have seen this season against a running attack.

While the Fighting Squadron is away from Lexington, three other Cadet teams will meet strong opponents. The varsity cross-country runners, who took five of six first places last week to defeat V. P. I. harriers, will entertain the Virginia runners. V. M. I.'s Freshman runners, who lost a close meet to the V. P. I. youngsters, will race the Virginia Freshmen Friday afternoon just before the varsity meet.

V. M. I.'s Freshman football team will meet the Maryland Freshmen on Alumni Field Saturday. In their first two starts the young Cadets have broken even, winning from the Norfolk Training Station and losing to the Virginia first-year eleven.

Luray High Renews Old Grid Rivalry Today

Special Dispatch to The Post

Luray, Va., Oct. 26.—Luray High School football team will meet its old rivals, the Junior Varsity of Randolph-Macon Academy at Front Royal here Friday in the first home game. A stiff and exciting game is promised.

D. C. Women Close Golfing Season Today

Furs Spur Field of 206 In N. B. C. Invitation Tourney at Army-Navy

The District women golfers will close their busiest season today at Army and Navy Club when a field of 206 will compete in the National Broadcasting Co.'s annual invitation tournament.

First low net prize will be a pair of silver fox skins arranged as a scarf, donated by a local furrier. All contestants with District handicap cards will be eligible.

Nine other prizes will include first and second net and gross awards in the 1 to 15 handicap class, and duplicate prizes in the 16 to 30 group.

Scoring for the affair, which drew the biggest field ever to compete in a women's one-day event in the city, will be handled by the District Women's Golf Association officials, Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president, and Mrs. Frank H. Kramer, tournament chairman.

Allan Burton, host club professional, asks the visiting players to bring caddies for the event.

Barnett Host To Pro-Senior Play Thursday

Tournament to Be Held At Chevy Chase; Champs Expected to Defend

Chevy Chase Professional Bob Barnett will hold the annual pro-senior tournament next Thursday, November 1, at Chevy Chase. The local pros are requested to leave their entries with Barnett by Wednesday night.

Ed Oliver, Hornel, N. Y., pro, and Dr. L. B. T. Johnson are expected to defend their title. The tourney is for the senior members of Barnett's club, with District, Baltimore and several Virginia pros as playing partners. A luncheon will precede the play.

Page Hufty, Chevy Chase Club champion, won the Siamese Cup yesterday, last of the club's match-play tourneys, dropping a 20-foot putt on the eighteenth hole to beat Reeve Lewis, 1 up.

G.W. High Juniors Continue March

Alexandria, Oct. 26. — George Washington High School's junior varsity eleven kept its undefeated, unscored-on record intact here today by drubbing its traditional rival, the Washington and Lee High juniors, 13 to 0. The victory gave the Presidents undisputed possession of the junior crown in the mythical Northern Virginia "Big Three" race, inasmuch as the locals had previously disposed of Fredericksburg High by a 6-0 margin.

On Fishing

ACKERMAN

Even though the thunder squalls that are rampant over much of the Potomac watershed late last week stirred the mud considerably in Goose Creek and the Monocacy until the Potomac below was rolled in many places, bass fishing continued unabated. And has improved throughout this week.

Both Leo Stuppy and Maurice Kaltzel, fishing at Brunswick, had their limit of bass, running in weight to three pounds. George Swank and Kenneth Shrewbridge divided 11 between them. Tops in their creels failed to go over two pounds. Connie Smith, fishing at Swains Lock, creeled a couple close to two pounds last Sunday. Milton Gordon had his limit on Nanjemoy Creek with a high tide, which, as a rule, doesn't produce the best fishing.

We know of several other catches from Nanjemoy that definitely proves the going there is considerably better than good. We recommend it for those who know where to get a boat—the one fly in the ointment, and more than likely the reason why the fishing is good. If there is a boat for hire anywhere on the creek we haven't heard about it.

At Mattawoman, largemouths up to two pounds are hitting in fine form, on trolled lures, which seems to prove beyond doubt those few snappy nights were just what the fish needed to throw off their summer lethargy. Ray Sewell, at Sweden Point, has boats for this section.

There is still another 30 days to go before some lucky angler takes home the big cup in the current fishing contest sponsored by Raymond Lurba. While the number of entries hasn't been extermely large, nevertheless, there has been considerable poundage in them, which after all, in this case is just what the participants want. It is expected the cup will be awarded at a sportsmen's dinner this winter.

The trout, almost non-existent is their usual haunts in upper bay waters, seem to have been found at last. In the schools of rockfish in the mouth of the Patuxent, six pounds appeared to be about average, with several tipping the beam at the 10-pound mark.

The best fishing the Solomon Islanders have had since the summer run of hardheads is reported, with every indication the stripers have reached top form, and that they will continue to take trolled lures far beyond "mitten" weather.

The fleet at Ridge, fishing the area between Point No Point and Point Lookout, also is in the midst of the usual fall run. Capt. Taft Tippet thinks the schools are every bit as thick as they were at this time last year.

Followers of the schools in the neighborhood of Holland Point and Bloody Point are continuing to have their fun in following the feeding periods and hoping every day will be the day. So far the catches have been few and far between, yet there are more rockfish in this area than in any section of the bay.

The first active steps in a planned joint Federal-State program to bring back the Atlantic salmon in Maine rivers got under way this week when the Fish and Game Department seined a number of spawn fish from the Dennys and other rivers for stripping. The eggs will be taken to the United States Bureau of Fisheries hatcheries at Orland for hatching and rearing. This is the first time that salmon stripping has been tried in Maine and officials are watching the results with great interest. While the seining operations have been reasonably successful, still not as many female salmon were taken as was hoped for. Another set will be made in the Dennys this Sunday.

Crisfield oystermen are again urging the repeal of the law banning hand-scraping. Virginia has already legalized the practice in the Potomac, but it is inactive while the Maryland law is in effect, due to the agreement between the commissions of the two States.

This ban has been the target of many unsuccessful attempts on the part of watermen who have urged its repeal through the last three legislatures. They contend its repeal would materially offset the smaller catches resulting from the strict enforcement of the cull law. Its widespread use, however, would eventually deplete the oyster supply, and the prices, not any too good now, would be forced still lower, and finally unemployment for many men would be the result.

Just another example of the shortsightedness of bay people with their fast diminishing natural resources.

Yale Heads West To Meet Favored Wolverine Eleven

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 26 (AP).—The Yale football team, which most critics said would go no place this fall, headed westward tonight for Ann Arbor, not a whit discouraged over its prospects in Saturday's game with the favored University of Michigan Wolverines.

The team, which refused to stay on the scrap heap to which it had been consigned, beat Columbia and Army and lost a close one to Penn, has as much moral support from the students and New Haven citizenry as any Eli eleven in a long time. Rousing send-off demonstrations on the campus and at the railroad station tonight showed that.

Early in the week the Yale News lambasted the team and the coaches editorially for the time-killing tactics displayed in the closing moments of the Army game, but apparently all has been forgiven.

Veteran of 3 Major League Clubs Dies at 55

Camden, N. J., Oct. 26 (AP).—James Edgar (Eggie) Lennox, who played with three major league baseball clubs between 1906 and 1912, died today from a complication of diseases at the age of 55.

Lennox joined the Philadelphia Athletics in 1906 and later played with Brooklyn and the Chicago Cubs. He led the National League third basemen in fielding in 1909 with a .950 average.

He also played two years with Pittsburgh in the outlawed Federal League and with 10 minor league clubs including Kansas City, Louisville, Montreal and Atlanta.

Green Terrors Meet Boston U. In Baltimore

Western Maryland Outweighs Terriers In Night Contest

Western Maryland's Green Terror eleven will seek its first victory of the season tonight under the lights of Baltimore Stadium over a lighter Boston University team.

Hank Hollies, regular guard, out since the opening game, will return to the Terror lineup, and Western Maryland will go into the fray at top strength.

Still slightly abashed over their 66-0 defeat by Wake Forrest last week, the Terrors will have a 187-181 pound advantage in the line and a 3 pound weight lead in the backfield.

Colonial-Hoya Freshman Elevens Meet Today at Stadium

10,000 May See Unbeaten Clubs Clash

Best Hoya Freshman Team in History; Teams Average 195 Pounds on the Line

One of the largest crowds ever to see a football game between frosh teams is expected at Griffith Stadium at 2:30 this afternoon when cubs from Georgetown tackle yearlings from George Washington in a preliminary to tomorrow's varsity classic. A crowd of 10,00 is not unlikely.

The game will bring together what admittedly is Georgetown's best and heaviest frosh squad in history against one which George Washington believes may be its greatest. Each team averages about 195 pounds along the line and about 180 in the backfield—making them considerably larger than the average college eleven.

Sorce Weighs 290

Georgetown will display in Russ Sorce, a Pittsburgh boy, the most massive player on the field. He is a tackle, 6 foot in height and scaling 290 pounds. George Washington's biggest is also a tackle, Bill Slovanic, 265 pounds.

Both teams are undefeated to date. Georgetown has trounced William and Mary, Norfolk Division's varsity, and eked out a 6-0 victory over Temple, while George Washington swamped strong Dickinson Seminary.

Flashy backs will be a dime-a-dozen. Georgetown has Jack Doolan, a halfback and last year the national scholastic spring champion at 60 yards; Mickey Ford, all-Maryland State fullback from Baltimore City College, and John Barrett and Eddie Agnew, both crack blockers and runners. Ford, a 200-pounder, was one of the most sought scholastic gridders in the East last year.

George Washington has a pair of outstanding backs in Don Pinnow, a triple-threater and reportedly the Colonials' best prospect since Tuffy Leemans, and Scott (Slick) Gudmunsen, a shifty running and accurate passing quarterback.

Between the halves of the game Tech High School and Georgetown will jointly honor Elmer (Hap) Hardell, G. U. frosh football coach and a former popular mentor at Tech. Each school will present Hardell with a scroll bearing the names of a majority of their student bodies and football players.

with a gathering before Old North Porch, where George Murtagh, varsity end coach, spoke briefly about the game with George Washington, warning the Hoya eleven that it was in for no easy game but expressing his confidence that Georgetown would win. While Murtagh was speaking a rosy glow in the sky gave evidence that the bnfire which was to be lighted after the meeting at Old North already was ablaze.

No Enemy Signs

The crowd quickly ran down into the hollow, to the intra-mural field where all day G. U. students had taken wood and other flammable material in preparation for the fire. The Georgetowns found no enemy signs and they stayed until the fire cast its dying ember. Then they banded together for their victory march through Georgetown.

Following the 60-piece school band the students afoot and in cars —some of which carried as many as 30 boys—headed out of the campus and down O street to Wisconsin. Turning left, they boisterously followed a special police escort up the avenue and into Volta place.

Thence to Thirty-fifth street, where they stopped to salute the boaders of Georgetown Visitation Convent for Girls with band numbers and cheers which seemed to pack just a little but more gusto than usual. For at the windows of that staid, old-looking red building were the girls that many of the Hoyas date on the week-ends. Flash Flash lights played along the windows and giggling, girlish faces were revealed, bringing forth shouts from the students who displayed banners reading: "George Washington may have the co-eds, but Georgetown has the football team."

There were banners of various lettering. Among them: "George Washington beat Cornwallis, but he couldn't beat Hagerty" (referring to Jack Hagerty, head G. U. grid coach) and "History repeats itself" —G. U., 60; G. W., 0. (the score of a previous game between the schools).

McFadden Is Praised By Coach Hagerty

Hoya Coach Likes 'Inspirational' Play Of Signal-Caller; Teammates Also Rely On 'Copper' for Right Play in the Pinch

What is the most important requisite of a good quarterback? That question if put to any reputable football coach probably would bring the answer:

"Popularity with his team. If the quarterback is not the sort of a fellow who commands the complete respect and confidence of his team, then he cannot be a success. There won't be any coordination in such a team. You'll have 11 men trying to call the plays. It's needless to point out how disastrous is that situation.

Those were precisely the words of Jack Hagerty, head coach of Georgetown, in his reply yesterday to the question. We were speaking of Joe McFadden, the personable little Irishman whose inspirational leadership is no small reason for the Hoyas' unprecedented success during the 1938 and 1939 seasons.

"McFadden," adds Hagerty, who was something more than a good quarterback himself around 1925 and '26, "is the greatest quarterback for firing his team that I ever have seen at Georgetown. He may not be the best mechanical playing quarterback G. U. has had, but he is head and shoulders above any other in inspiring the players."

Such praise coming from Hagerty, who old-time Hilltop fans maintain is the stand-out quarterback of Georgetown history, both as a leader and as a brilliant open-field runner, is enough endorsement for the pug-nosed, trimly-built McFadden whom the kids call "Copper."

Is a Versatile Back

But there are other reasons that McFadden is considered an indispensable cog in the great Georgetown machine which has rolled up eleven victories in two years during which a 13-13 tie with Syracuse is the only blot on its record.

The other Georgetown players, for instance, say McFadden is better-than-average when he comes to carrying the ball and a fine pass receiver. And there isn't one on the varsity squad who doesn't look up to "Cooper as the smartest man of them all. But he won't call his own signal to carry the ball, they tell you, he is too modest.

One of the players, who has been in the thick of Georgetown's march was recalling a play in the Georgetown-West Virginia gamt last season which clearly demonstrates how quickly McFadden thinks; how he gambles and leaves himself open to criticism in order to produce touhhdowns.

The Virginia game, you will recall, was the next-to-last on the Hoyas' 1938 schedule. Georgetown was fresh from a victory over Bucknell, its sixth straight, and looking ahead to the concluding contest with its bitter rival, Maryland. The G. U. players, knowing the Mountaineers' poor record, couldn't get hepped up over the beating a team that had been soundly trounced by Pitt and a couple others.

Supplied the Punch

So it was that the aroused Mountaineers, fired up by the chance to upset the only unbeaten and untied major team in the East and desperate to justify themselves in the eyes of a Homecoming Day crowd, were making it plenty hot for the pepless visitors. With only five minutes left to play the score was 0-0. Georgetown, without McFadden, who was on the bench most of the game with a slight injury, had wasted scoring chances time and again. The noisy crowd was less ties whichO conjuring up risy visions of a scoreless tie which definitely would be a moral victory for West Virginia.

But into the game came McFadden. Simultaneously Georgetown started to move. You could see the difference. Whereas the players had been slipshod in their blocking and slow in taking their positions after the huddle, they now were brimming with life, rarin' to go. McFadden deployed the Hoyas into their spread formation and Joe Mellendeck tore around right end for several long gains but Georgetown still was deep in its own territory. Time was short.

Then it was that McFadden decided to take a 100-1 chance; to call a passing play which, if unsuccessful, would make him a goat, but if successful would reflect glory on two other players. Literally, he double-crossed eight players by hatching up with Mellendeck and Bob Kercher an impromptu play. Only Mellendeck and Kercher were let in on the play because McFadden was afraid one of the others, if told, might give it away.

55-Yard Pass

So back went Mellendeck in his customary tailback position in the spread. He started for the right just as he had on the end runs. But then, with the players blocking for a run, he stopped and shot a diagonal to Kercher, which gained 53 yards and paved the way for the winning touchdown.

The score, which saved Georgetown's spotless record, came shortly thereafter and it was McFadden who made it. He took an 18-yard pass from Mellendeck in the end zone while similating a wire-malker to keep from stepping over the end zone and neullifying the play.

But McFadden wasn't through yet. Less than two minutes later he personally scored Georgetown's second touchdown by anticipating and intercepting a forward pass thrown by the Mountaineers' great back, Charley Hockneberry, and running 53 yards to pay dirt.

Incidentally, McFadden also booted both extra points and Georgetown won, 14-0, simply because of his brilliant "money" exhibition which required but four minutes for execution.

Virginia Line Is Expected to Check Indians

Cavalier Forwards Are Boasting Fine Record As Defensive Unit

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Oct. 26.—The University of Virginia line will stake a good record against William and Mary's high scoring machine Saturday at Norfolk.

Carrying a weight average of not much more than 185 pounds, the men up front have restricted scoring through them to two touchdowns. Both scores were made by Navy backs and one was assisted to the 1-yard line by a penalty. Passes figured in the other three crossings made against the Cavaliers to date.

Of the usual starting line, only Lee McLaughlin is in the position he played regularly last year, at left tackle. Albert Frerotte exchanged the backfield assignment he held as a sophomore last year for a regular job at right tackle, making for good balance there.

Phil Rothar, a junior headed for Phi Beta Kappa honors, is coming into his own at left guard after an injury-ridden season last year, and Jack Sauerbeck, the polished sophomore linesman from Danville, seems to have more than measured up to expectations at right guard.

With both of last year's centers, Roscoe Willett and Jack Haines, crippled at the start, Jack Murden has played much of a lone hand in his first season of varsity competition, but leaving little room for improvement. Willett, however, is ready to start his comeback this week-eno.

The ends shape up around Tabb George and Nick Glanakos, reserves last year, who have exceeded expectations in fitting into the starting line. The second shift is manned by Jim White, whose father played end at Virginia nearly 25 years ago, and Kenneth Rathbun, both up for their first varsity season.

Two veterans who add strength to the Cavalier line are Herbert Winokur, senior guard, and Bucky Morse, junior letterman, who functions at tackle and blocking back. Other leading reserves include Bill Mirman and Walter Jones, tackles; John Waldrop, guard, and George Palmer, center.

St. Mary's Team Favored Over Charlotte Hall

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlotte Hall, Md., Oct. 26.—A sectional football rivalry goes on display here at 3 o'clock today when the Charlotte Hall Military Academy eleven lines up against the warriors of St. Mary's Academy of Leonardtown in their annual clash for gridiron supremacy of southern Maryland.

The Cadets have been drilling all week to stop Poss Sterling, star halfback of the Saints, who was the direct cause of the 13-7 beating St. Mary's hung on Shel Ehringer's charges last season.

The Cadets are still seeking their initial win of the year after defeats at the hands of St. Paul's and Georgetown Prep.

Doug Bentley Signs With Blackhawk Team

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Oct. 26 (AP).—Doug Bentley, second youngest of the five Bentley brothers, has signed a contract with the Chicago Blackhawks of the National Hockey League.

The Saskatoon Quakes received word today from Bentley, who with his brothers played with the Drumheller Miners in the Alberta Senior Amateur League last year, that he had decided to give the pro game a fling.

Albany Releases Maranville Despite Successful Season

'The Rabbit' Takes It Nonchalantly; Eastern Club Seeks Major Tie-Up

By the Associated Press

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 26.—Walter H. (Rabbit) Maranville, who piloted the Albany Club into the Eastern League playoffs last season, was released today.

The Rabbit, for many years the sparkplug of the old Boston Braves before trying his luck as a manager, took the break laconically, saying:

"If that's baseball, that's the way it is. I'll find something else."

Signed last November to pilot the Senators as successor to Bill McCorry, Maranville enjoyed a successful season. The team finished in fourth place, defeated Elmira in the semifinal playoffs, but lost to Scranton in the finals.

President Tom McCaffrey, announcing the club's action, said Maranville had been dismissed to permit the Senators an opportunity to carry on negotiations with a big-league club for a working agreement.

"We released Maranville so we would be in a position to give any major league team with which we might do business next year the right to name the Albany manager if it so desired," McCaffrey said.

Maranville, generally conceded to have been one of the greatest shortstops of all time despite his small stature, spent 24 years as a major league ball player.

He played successively with the Boston Braves, where he achieved his greatest fame, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Brooklyn and St. Louis, all of the National League.

During a part of the 1925 season, Maranville managed the Chicago Cubs, but it was not until 1936 and at the end of his playing days that he became a full-fledged manager.

Before coming to Albany he piloted Elmira in the New York-Penn League, now the Eastern, then went on to Montreal of the International League, resigning during the 1938 season when the club went into a bad slump.

Temple, Bucknell Hoya Victims, Meet 13th Time Tonight

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—With past records indicating little to choose between the two rivals, victory-hungry Temple and Bucknell football teams will renew their gridiron rivalry for the thirteenth consecutive year tomorrow night under the floodlights of Temple Stadium.

Each team has lost three of its four games, both bowing to their only common rival—Georgetown's undefeated Hoyas—by close margins. Temple holds a 4 to 3 edge in the series in which five games ended in ties.

Jack Berrier, a regular for the past two years, will return to Temple's line-up at halfback after missing the first four games this year because of injuries while Bob McCracken is expected to start at quarterback after injuries forced him to miss last week's game.

AFTER we'd perfected our new Havana blend, we wanted to test it—to make sure it had the true Havana taste. That's why we took it all the way to Cuba. For where but Havana itself would smokers know better the true flavor of Havana tobacco? We selected prominent Cubans —real connoisseurs of cigars—gave them some of the new White Owls to smoke. Without exception, they all praised the rich Havana flavor of this new cigar.

It's an old trick to put a mere dash of Havana in a cigar and say it's "Blended-with-Havana." But there is no trick about this cigar. It has a generous helping of Havana—your taste will tell you. It's a really good grade, too. Maybe this sounds unbelievable for a 5¢ cigar. Well, we are America's largest buyers of Havana tobacco, and we know what we are talking about. Fact is, it's the same type Havana tobacco that is used in popular cigars costing 10¢ or more. Try one of these new cigars today.

Dead Heat, Long Shot Winners Mark Day's Laurel Program

Charitable, Ted Briar In Deadlock

Bob Junior Pays Off At 76-1 Odds; Allegro Wins Feature Race; Cravat Runs Third

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 26.—Thrills, chills and long shots and short shots marked the Thursday program here. The show included a sizzling dead heat and a $154.70 winner. For sensational finishes, the rather obscure second race was a standout and provided the judges with the day's chief problem. They gave up and called it a twin victory with W. H. Linscomb's Ted Briar and the Milky Way Farms' Charitable sharing the purse and their backers splitting the win money.

Ted Briar, ridden by Jockey Johnny Gilbert, paid $26.80 while Charitable, driven by Apprentice George Wallace, returned $3.70.

The deadlocked pair fought it out from start to finish with Charitable having a slight lead most of the route. In the stretch, however, Ted Briar came up on the inside and it was a head-and-head struggle from that point to the wire.

From a monetary angle, the sixth race was the standout. Bob Junior, a 3-year-old from the Brandon stable which has been doing very little running of late, elected to show plenty of speed and came home at odds of 76-1 under a brilliant ride by Jockey Joe Renick. The gelding finished two lengths in advance of Connie Plaut, a well-played miss from the E. K. Bryson barn. Adoress was third in this limit field of 12.

The scheduled feature, the Delmar Handicap, proved an exciting affair and a triumph for the favorite players. Allegro, owned by Charles T. Fisher, of the Fisher Body Fishers, flew the colors of the Dixiana Stable to victory by a neck over Bill Farnsworth, with Townsend B. Martin's Cravat third. Cravat, prepping for the Pimlico Special, closed with a brilliant rush and was worked out to a mile in 1.39-2-5.

DR. WHINNY took command at break, drew clear of ROBESPIERRE gradually and held away thereafter. ROBESPIERRE was hard ridden throughout and closed gamely. PHARA BELLE keen forward factor from beginning, came willingly at close. INDOMITABLE raced wide from start.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. The Delmah Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:45. Off 3:46. Winner, Dixiana Stable's ch. g. ALLEGRO, racing on outside, came around leaders to assume command leaving backstretch, drew clear of BILL FARNSWORTH, was hard to be ridden out to stave off closing bid of latter. BILL FARNSWORTH was rushed to thick of contention at once, saved ground, rallied in midstretch, but hung in closing sixteenth. CRAVAT, slow to begin, closed with a brilliant rush to be going fastest at end and was worked out to a mile in 1.39⅘. BE BLUE could not keep up.

BOB JUNIOR, within striking distance from start, came through on inside to improve position approaching stretch, took good lead and held away thereafter. CONNIE PLAUT, sluggish and badly outrun in early stages, came with a bold rush through stretch to be wearing down winner at end. ADORESS, well placed for half, moved up menacingly and then hung. SHOOTING SCOUT was keen forward factor to stretch and tired suddenly.

SNEAKY HENRY, steadied while keen forward factor to backstretch, wore down PETIT JEAN to get to front, opened good lead and held on gamely under good handling. COUNT TETRARCH improved position steadily after a half and was getting to winner gradually at close. CHARMING HEROD, rated while trailing for half, came gamely on outside in closing test. BALAPIN, allowed to race on own courage for half, responded to drive to loom menacingly, but tired in closing sixteenth.

Dear Al:

Challedon worked out over the Pimlico track yesterday morning. The 3-year-old champion went a half in 0:49 3-5 and five-eighths in 1:04. According to Dave Woods, publicity director of Pimlico, Challedon did this in handy fashion. Woods also reports that the advance sales for next Wednesday's Pimlico Special are almost as large as last year, when War Admiral and Seabiscuit matched strides. Jockey C. F. Simpson, suspended here, has had his license revoked by the Maryland Racing Commission. Simpson was set down for an unsatisfactory ride on Crack Favor in the race before the 2-year-old downed Cherry's Child. All I can say is that if Simpson has ridden in an unsatisfactory manner he has had a lot of company at this meeting. Perhaps one of his troubles is that he is Simpson. If you want to start a breeding farm or a race horse stable, you had better go to the Audley Farm at Berryville, Va., today for the sale of the Bernard B. Jones horses. Many Marylanders will go to the sale, and they are expected to bring back some of the best stock. The group includes yearlings, stallions and brood mares. A feature of the auction will be the sale of Quatre Bras II, a good looker and a brother of Sir Gallahad III and Bull Dog. I have tickets now for the annual frolic of the Maryland Racing Writers Association at the Lord Baltimore Hotel on November 9. Good time last year, better time this year. If you want to go write me in care of The Post, and I'll bring the tickets around. All the jockeys, leading trainers and turf officials will be there. Jockey J. E. Oros, who was battling neck and neck with Jockey Don Meade early in the year, arrived here without the fanfare that accompanied him at Bowie last spring. He weighs around 115 pounds now and can do 113. He is looking out for 15 horses owned by his family in the absence of his father, who is ill. Now for the winners.

BILL.

CARMALEENE KRUSE

CLASSES were suspended at the Takoma Park-Silver Spring Junior High School yesterday, and dreams and fairy tales took their place as 700 costumed children celebrated the "Book Fair."

Each with a book or magazine to add to the school's growing library, they paraded through halls furnished with a dozen gaily decorated bookstalls and staged a pageant of "The Seven Joys of Reading," while the gymnasium class danced an interpretation of Alfred Noyes' beloved "Barrel Organ"—"Come Down to Kew in Lilac Time."

The annual book fair was started four years ago, Librarian Miss Julia Collins explained, when the Montgomery-Blair High School seceded from the old Takoma Park-Silver Spring Junior-Senior High, and took most of the books with it. To build up the depleted library, the children decided each to bring a book from home one day each year, and when yesterday's contributions are counted the book total is expected to exceed 3,100.

The children plunder the family bookshelves and ransack their attics, and call on their neighbors and are old and dog-eared, some are old and dusty, some are nearly new and some need repairs. But all go into the library, and when they are counted there will be prizes for the class that brought the most, Miss Collins said.

All the children's favorite characters from the Wizard of Oz to Heidi were represented in their costumes. The pageant, directed by Mrs. Margaret Tepper, English teacher, represented as the seven joys of reading "familiarity, shock, surprise, sympathy, appreciation, expansion and revelation." At the end of the day an athletic meet was held.

Audley Farm Horses on Block Today

Stock of Two of Old Dominion's Foremost Stables Go Under Hammer at Berryville

By Anne Hagner

Berryville, Va., Oct. 26.—Horsemen from all over the East gathered here for dispersal sales today and tomorrow of two foremost Old Dominion stables. They are the show horses of Dr. Lewis M. Allen, which went under the hammer today at Clifton Farms, and the racing stables of B. B. Jones' Audley Farm, which will be auctioned tomorrow.

Dr. Allen's sale, a colorful preview to the event tomorrow, attracted several hundred breeders and fanciers who paid fair prices for Clifton's hunter and show prospects. Top bid of the day was Mrs. Felix DuPont's purchase of Clifton's Fairy, which brought $2,500. Mrs. DuPont, of Philadelphia and Orange County, Va., also purchased several other hunters.

Tomorrow's sale at Audley will include a quartet of high-ranking stallions, including the imported Quatre Bras II, Trace Call, Strolling Player and Gallant Mac.

Also to be auctioned are 54 broodmares, most of them in foal to Audley stallions, and 73 yearlings and weanlings, many of them by the well-known sire, Bright Knight, which recently died.

The sale will be conducted by the same firm, Fasig-Tipton, which handles the Saratoga sales. A special bus will leave Fourteenth street and New York avenue at 7:30 a. m., go direct to the sales ring at Audley, and will return to Washington after the sale.

Bidders are expected from all the Nation's leading racing establishments and prices should range well into the thousands, according to experts. The sale begins at 10:30.

Oklahoma Collects Data on Indians

Norman, Okla. (AP).—To keep the Indian languages from disappearing, Oklahoma University plans to offer courses in Indian culture and customs.

Miss Della Brunsteter, assistant professor of French, gathered material this summer at the Qualla, North Carolina, Cherokee reservation, for a foundation course.

She made phonographic recordings of ceremonial songs and dances and obtained natural color movies of Cherokee community life.

She also is filing and indexing words of the Indian languages and plans to compile a dictionary and grammar.

She said many Indian children now receiving their education in white schools cannot write their native language and some cannot speak it.

There are 40,000 Cherokees in Oklahoma and the Indian classes will be open to both Indian and whites.

Fleet Murphy Terps' Hope Against 'Gators

JOE MURPHY

Southern Conference Sprint Champion Set For Best Performance

The University of Maryland gridders, writhing under two successive defeats, are looking to the flying feet of Joe Murphy, junior halfback and Southern Conference 100 and 220 sprint champion, to carry them to victory tomorrow in their homecoming game at College Park.

Murphy, almost equally adept at passing and kicking, reeled off several huge gains in a losing battle with Rutgers last week, and appears ready for the outstanding performance of his career.

With the 'Gators having concentrated their defense at halting the forward passing of Maryland's gifted halfback, Pershing Mondorff, Murphy will go into the Florida game untouted and comparatively free to shake his heels.
kperforfietotheishrdluetaoincmfwmr

The Terps' running attack will be strengthened by the return to lineup of Bob Brown, big, smart-blocking tackle, who missed his team's last two games owing to injury.

Frank Dobson's Old Line squad divided yesterday's practice session between defense and offense, drilling its line against Florida plays which were used by the second team.

The Florida gridders, the 'Gator Pep Club of 35 and their 60-piece school band, are due here today. They plan workouts this afternoon, the football players limbering up muscles, and the band and rooters exercising their vocals in preparation for lusty cheering and musical support.

A cross-country run between Maryland and North Carolina, a tug-o-war between Terp sophomores and freshmen and a float parade will enliven activities between halves of the football game.

Unbeaten C. U. Eleven Rules Heavy Choice To Beat Hurricane

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Oct. 26.—Catholic University's undefeated and untied football team rolled into town today and hustled through a final workout for tomorrow night's intersectional game with the University of Miami.

The Washington, D. C., team, in peak condition, will go into the game a heavy favorite over Miami's Hurricanes, who have won two intrastate games after losing 33-0 to Wake Forest in the season opener.

Miami, with little hope of penetrating Catholic's strong line consistently, is expected to rely considerably on passes, with Bill Steiner doing much of the tossing.

Ray Flaherty Is Confident Of Victory

Special Dispatch to The Post

Milwaukee, Oct. 26.—Red-headed Ray Flaherty, coach of the Washington Redskins and ordinarily a conservative citizen, concedes no edge to the Green Bay Packers despite the fact that the Packers will take the field on Sunday as favorites at odds ranging from 7 to 5 to 8 to 5.

"We can win Sunday's ball game if we play the kind of football we played against the Giants and the Dodgers," said Flaherty. "I think we've got a game in our system that will beat the Packers, but it will have to be one of our best games.

"They've been beaten before, you know," added Flaherty slyly, referring to the Packers' defeat earlier in the season by the lightly regarded Cleveland Rams. "But that fact has only made the Packers tough. They've been a great ball team since that day."

The favoritism in which the Packers are held despite the fact that the Redskins are unbeaten is a tribute to the passing attack of the Green Bay club which last week buried the Detroit Lions under three touchdowns. Arnold Herber and Cecil Isbell are reckoned as the greatest team of passers in the league, not excepting Sammy Baugh and Frank Filchock, and Green Bay's Don Hutson is acknowledged to be the finest pass-receiving end among the pros.

Official figures show the two teams to be remarkably evenly matched. The Redskins have the better average in yards gained rushing, total yards gained, forward passing, pass interceptions, punt runbacks, opponents gains, pass defense and opponents' points. The Packers can show a better average in yards gained passing, punting, penalties, fumbles, points and touchdown and field goals. The two clubs are even in first downs and scoring.

Sammy Baugh, who will celebrate his return to the Redskins on Sunday, probably will be withheld from the starting lineup, but he will play the entire last half if his passes are necessary to the Redskins' attack. Flaherty's starting backfield is expected to comprise Filcock, Pinckert, Moore, and German.

Entries Mount For Campbell Sweepstakes

Lucky Strike Event May Carry Top Prize Of $300 for Pinmen

Entries for the Howard Campbell Sweepstakes, oldest and richest of the city's bowling tournaments, are coming in rapidly and top prize of more than $300 may be realized for the 15-game event here Sunday.

The first block of five games will be rolled at Georgetown, the second at Lucky Strike and the final and payoff games will start around 8:30 p. m. at Convention Hall. The Campbell sweeps is one event that hangs out the S. R. O. sign on the hall grandstand.

With the earliest date in history, the three sets packed into one day and open to outside bowlers for the second year, the Sweepstakes is expected to draw a field of 30 or more bowlers, despite the stiff $28 entrance fee.

Twenty-five of the $28 goes to the winners' purse, while the alley managers turn their share back for a diamond medal to the winner. George Isemann, National Duckpin Bowling Congress executive secretary, picked up several entries in a recent trip through the Southern pin centers, with Hank Mowbray and Nova Hamilton expected to lead a Baltimore delegation.

Ed Blakeney is defending champion, but the favorite will be the four-time national champion, now in the midst of a red-hot scoring streak, Astor Clarke.

The third annual Halloween Handicap sweepstakes starts tomorrow at Charles Olive's Takoma Park Alleys, and continues through Sunday.

Guaranteed prizes of $50 for first, $25 second, $15 third and $10 fourth will be awarded. The handicap allowance will be the difference between last year's average and 120.

Clover Comes in Big Sizes These Days

Richmond, Va. (AP).—The chamber of commerce here wouldn't be greatly surprised if it received a six-leaf clover from one of California's native sons.

There was a good-natured gibe in presenting to Charles E. French, of Huntington Park, Calif., who is collecting four-leaf clovers from the 48 States, a five as well as four-leaf clover from Virginia. Miss Mary Miller, of Emory and Henry College, found the five-digit member of the clover family.

Evans Wins Over Hader On Mat Card

Wintergreen Cries Rent Air at Turner's Arena; Riot Insipid

Cries of "wintergreen" rent the fetid atmosphere at Turner's Arena last night as Jack Hader, villain plenipotentiary of the local wristling emporium, was disqualified on the deciding fall of his match with Don Evans, blond Texan, by Referee Casey Berger in the first best 2-out-of-3 fall bout staged here in six years.

Hader won the first fall in 27 minutes with a neat series of jaw locks which left Evans' bridgework displayed to one and all, rested five minutes and then came back to lose the second fall in nine minutes to the Texas groan artist by way of an overhead body slam. Hader's ungentlemanly tactics finally resulted in his denouement. The usual ringside brawl staged by the fans hit a new low, lasting but 8 minutes .07 seconds.

In the supporting polkas, Hans Kampfer subjugated Frank Brunowicz in 18 minutes. John Katan defeated Raoul Lopez in 14½ minutes. Ralph Garibaldi was given the verdict when Stanley Pinto was disqualified after 16 minutes, and Abie Coleman took a decision over Eddie Newman in 22 minutes.

Referee Casey Berger, after searching the person of "Hate-Man" Hader, ruled him out on the grounds that he had soaked his trunks with wintergreen oil. Berger insisted that Hader rubber same into the eyes of Evans and consequent deserved no consideration.

They'd Get at Root Of the Trouble

Sharpsburg, Md. (AP).—Stubborn stuff, this marijuana.

A farmer found a patch of the weed in his pasture when he noticed his horses acted queerly after eating it. Federal agents were called to destroy it, under a Federal statute forbidding sale or possession of the plant, sometimes smoked in illegal cigarettes.

But the plants kept coming up and the agents kept coming back. After cutting the shoots were dried and burned—in bonfires, not cigarettes. Now the agents are trying to figure out a way to kill the roots.

Shoe-Month Deep Snow

They phrase things different in the Smokey Mountains of North Carolina. "Snow is shoe-mouth deep in the cove," they say, when it's knee-deep in the mountains.

Best-Dressed President

Chester Arthur is said to have been the best dressed President of the United States. They called him "Prince Arthur." Among other impediments, he had 100 pairs of trousers.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

STARS A-COMING. Mayfair. Gwen Gary, the blonde toast of Manhattan's Fifth Avenue Hotel, will arrive in Mayfair on Monday, according to an enthusiastic wire from Jimmy Byrd, Mayfair's promotion manager. Jimmy, who cares nothing for telegraph tolls, goes on to say that Gwen "sings a beautiful ballad, plays a sweet piano and before her engagement at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, played for six months solid at the Hotel New Yorker." Since young Mr. Byrd doesn't enthuse easily, it's sure that Gwen is one of the finest, easy on the eyes and delightful to the ears.

Shoreham. Dancer Emily Van Losen, who recently appeared at a command performance before King Farouk of Egypt, will whirl in the Blue Room come Monday. Her numbers will include a French can-can which, we presume and hope, is the same one that delighted King Farouk. After her Washington engagement, Emily will board an Australia-bound liner for a winter of theatrical engagements "down under."

FATAL SENSAYUMA. If he wasn't such a good trumpeter, Jim Awad, of the King's Jesters (Metronome Room) might have been out of a job last summer account of his idea of what's funny. When the King's Jesters went horseback riding out in Denver, Jim thought it would be comical to slap the other fellow's mounts across the rear with his reins. Since most of the Jesters had never been on a horse before, the bridle path soon resembled the debacle of a rodeo. "My sense of humor ran away with me, I guess," says Jimmy, "but I didn't think the horses would do it, too."

HALLOWEEN BULLETINS. Neptune Room. "Deep sea devilry" will be a-roam in Neptune on Halloween according to gifted Press Agent Pell who also promises "gobs of goblins, aquatic spooks and spirits" and that the party will be "titanic, oceanic, a panic." But the Pell sentences that leave us breathless are "Bert Granoff has uncorked a bevy of nautical numbers to reel off," and "Eddie Daniels has promised to play in a skelton key." Pell-mell Pell! He must have poured one of Neptune's "Zombie" cocktails into his typewriter before he started going!

Cafe Caprice. A triple-play Halloween party, this one! It'll celebrate Halloween, Caprice's first anniversary and the birthday of Manager Daniel Wathey of the Roger Smith Hotel. There'll be a big cake, witching music by the Swing Sophisticates, bewitching songs by Adele Van, beautiful Halloween decorations.

Mayflower Lounge. Dick Koons has arranged a combination of the tunes from the "Wizard of Oz" for singing by the Mayflower Glee Club on Halloween. Muriel Sherman, Mayflower's tiny "good witch" will also warble special All Hallows songs.

Lounge Riviera. Double celebration is due in Riviera next Tuesday, both for Halloween and Peter Macias' birthday. Pete says he's decided to be 25 on every birthday from now on. "That's the ideal age," he says. "You're too old to take wooden nickels, too young to get engaged."

Hi Hat. Both a Halloween celebration and a farewell party to Angie Rodante are in order. Angie's off to Florida in a couple of days. The Halloween preparations are stupendous, including triple-size floor entertainment in the Hit Hat and Ambassador Room, two bands.

Fat Boy. Something tremendous is brewing in the way of a Halloween fiesta at the Fat Boy. Can't give you details until next Monday, but understand that the party will combine the best features of Fourth of July and New Year's.

CARLTON CELEBS. Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia enjoying a luncheon especially prepared by Chef Fisson . . . Ditto for Lady Bradford Leslie . . . Glamour lads Hank Gibbons, Lyle O'Rourke and Bill McAvoy dancing in Shar-Zad . . . Ditto for glamour lasses Ruth Dove and Patsy Parker . . . The town's star musical lady, Evalyn Tyner, ringsiding with husband, Ford Minnick, manager of Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street . . . Don Dickerman, of the Pirates' Den, whom we didn't recognize at first since he was wearing tweeds instead of his velvet pirate regalia, heavy jewelry and buckled shoes. He'd even discarded his earrings!

A POPULAR GIRL MAKES A POPULAR SONG. That's the idea of the star parade number of Lotus' Lindsay Revue. And it's a beauty. Along with the right tunes, you see those lovelies of past seasons, "Lady of the Evening," "Rio Rita," the "Pink Lady" and many others . . . The Spanish stepping of Rosita and Romero is both polished and daring . . . Frieda Sullivan of the Galway Sullivans is too smart to do an Irish jig, instead turns loose some rapid-fire acrowhirling . . . A "Swing Wedding" winds up this swing-y show.

MONTMARTRE NOCTAMBULE is open again. This is Washington's distinctive "night spot for the intelligentsia." Ad lib entertaining and beautiful pianistics by Felian Garzia, who's also the proprietor.

OPERATIVES REPORTS. Anchor Room, Matt Windsor, of the Anchor Room, is the only night spot entertainer here who speaks Polish. He's a Russian, but his mother was Polish. Matt can also converse with you in five other languages.

Club 16. The music making of Jerry Holston and Norman Brooks is said to be full of verve, to give just the right added color to the new cocktail lounge in the Lafayette Hotel.

Pall Mall Room. Emcee-dancer Bob Driscoll, we hear, was head of the entertainment program at the Indian Beach Club at Rehoboth Beach all last summer.

Rainbow Room. That wistful touch that Lew Berman and Parlay Eaton are giving to the Rainbow orchestra dance music isn't due to their musical sensibility, according to operative 33, who says that Lew and Parlay are just sad because some low person lifted their new overcoats when they went roving after Rainbow closed for the night.

PRETTIEST SEERESS in these parts is Lucille, of El Morocco. She's blonde, bright eyed, so lovely to look at that folks are always taking her for a singer or dancer instead of a palmist.

MELODY IN HIGH GEAR. King Cole Room. Arthur Todd is singing "There's a Halo 'Round the Moon," composed by Mrs. Josephine Crister McCormick, of Washington. He's also made a transcription of it for New York publishers.

Madrillon. That "Pom! Pom!" tune that Adelita and Juanito sing in Spanish is a bit naughty, we're told. (So that's why all the Latin-Americans laugh so.) Adelita has promised to translate the lyrics for us.

Troika. Anatol Groscheff's version of "The Flea" is a constant delight to those who know their Russian music. Also to those who don't.

ROOM TO DANCE! No less than 400 swing-steppers can do their stuff on the big floor at the Knotty Pine Tavern, says Proprietor "Chuck" Snyder. The sharp music of Jay Shreiner's band is designed to please the liveliest jitter-bugs.

ATMOSPHERE PLUS FINE FOOD. That's Hall's. As you step across the threshold, you are transported into the atmosphere of 40 or 50 years ago. But your seafood dinner will include fish and shellfish that were wandering around Chesapeake Bay only yesterday.

Emily Van Loren, who'll arrive in the Shoreham Blue Room Monday

Dividend Rate Boosted to $1 By Bethlehem

Unfilled Orders at Peace-time High of $263,857,017

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 26.—Directors of Bethlehem Steel Corporation today boosted the dividend rate to $1 a share on the common stock. The previous dividend was 50 cents paid September 15.

At the same time, Eugene G. Grace, president, revealed orders on hand September 30, totaling $263,857,017, were a peace-time record for the company. On last June 30, orders were $184,921,081 and on September 30, 1938, they were $101,529,356.

Net profit for the quarter ended September 30 rose to $5,377,470, compared with $3,622,927 in the June quarter this year and $446,-866 in the third quarter last year. Latest earnings are equal to $1.10 a common share.

Profits Increase

The dividend declared today was, with the exception of the September payment, the first since December, 1937. It is payable December 1 to holders of record November 10.

Bethlehem's earnings for the first nine months of this year were equivalent to $1.49 a share on the 7 per cent preferred and 21 cents a share on the 5 per cent preferred.

The indicated net profit for the nine months was $11,809,456 compared with $1,592,079 in the like 1938 period.

Preferred Dividend

The directors today also declared the regular quarterly dividends of 2½ cents on the 5 per cent preferred and $1.75 on the 7 per cent preferred, both payable January 2 to holders of record December 8.

Bruce thought Bethlehem's export business had been stimulated by the war but he declared:

"I would like to see the war stop today. Bethlehem Corporation would be better off if it did."

Commenting on the orders Bethlehem has received for guns, projectiles and other war implements for the U. S. Government, the executive said:

"I wish that was not necessary. I would rather see the expenditure going into normal domestic channels."

Touching steel's place in war, in connection with the prevailing controversy over offensive and defensive weapons, Grace asserted that "if we were called on to make guns and projectiles we could not stamp them for defense as contrasted with offense."

Wheat Supplies Drop 81,041,000 Bushels in Year

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that stocks of wheat in interior mills, elevators, warehouses and on farms, October 1, totaled 494,755,000 bushels.

Similar stocks on the same date last year totaled 575,796,000 bushels.

The stocks in the interior mills, elevators and warehouses on October 1 were reported to be 162,-542,000 bushels compared with 174,-385,000 bushels a year ago.

Excess Reserves Hit New Record

Lendable excess reserves of banks increased $20,000,000 to another new high of $5,530,000,000 in the week ended October 25.

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday the increase was due to a temporary decrease in money in circulation and to Treasury deficit spending and gold purchases, which were slightly offset by $50,-000,000 worth of Treasury borrowing on 91-day discount bills.

As in several preceding weeks the 12 Federal Reserve banks failed to replace maturing Treasury bills they owned and their investments in Government securities accordingly declined $12,000,000 to $2,736,000,000.

Loft, Inc., to Split Into Two Companies

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 26 (AP).—Loft, Inc., yesterday became a holding company for its shares in the Pepsi-Cola Co., and for a new company to be set up as operator of the candy company's stores and business. The reorganization plan was presented by the board of directors to stockholders representing 65 per cent of the outstanding shares of Loft, Inc. Provisions of the reorganization plan included:

Change of Loft's authorized stock from no-par value to a par value of $1 a share. Increase of Loft's authorized common stock from 1,-500,000 shares to 3,000,000. The meeting today was adjourned and no date set for further consideration of the proposed new company.

Receiver Sought For Majestic Radio

Chicago, Oct. 26 (AP).—Appointment of a receiver for the Majestic Radio & Television Corporation was asked in Federal court yesterday by Attorney Norman Nachman, who said he represented creditors.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Interests closely identified with Majestic Radio & Television Corporation, were responsible for the heavy selling of the company's stock just before trading was suspended Tuesday by the New York Curb Exchange, an investigation by State Attorney General John J. Bennett, jr., disclosed.

Brokers' Loans Rise $37,000,000 in Week

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $467,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $37,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $571,000,000.

Serious Drought Near End, Prices Sell Off a Cent

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 26.—A slight hint of possible breaking up of the Southwestern wheat belt's serious drought drew enough selling into the grain pit today to lower wheat prices a cent a bushel.

Rains scattered through some sections of the winter wheat belt, where the 1940 crop is in the first stages of cultivation, and continued unsettled weather with probable showers was in prospect.

Wheat was weak throughout the session, rallying only fractionally at times and closing ¾@1⅛ cents lower than yesterday, December 84⅛@84, May 83@83⅝. Corn finished unchanged to ⅜ down, December 49¾, May 52⅛@52⅝; oats ⅜@½ off; rye ⅛@⅝ down; soy beans ½@¾ lower and lard 2 to 5 lower.

Frequent rallies in the wheat pit were associated with mill buying, shipping sales of 66,000 bushels and fair export business in Canadian wheat to Europe.

Trade Boom Seen Solving Rail Problem

October Net May Near 100 Million, Best in 9 Years

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 26.—The business boom may remove from Uncle Sam's doorstep one of the biggest depression problems—the railroads.

Industrial expansion is helping the industry the way it wanted to be helped. Traffic has increased to the highest figures in nine years and some roads for the first time since 1937 are operating in the black again.

Week's Loadings Up 22%

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended October 21 totaled 861,198 cars, the highest for any week since 1930, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 155,914 cars or 22.1 per cent above the corresponding week in 1938 and an increase of 91,042 cars or 11.8 per cent above the same week in 1937.

Wall Street rail statisticians estimated today net operating income of the class 1 carriers for October would approach $100,000,000 to make the best showing for the month since 1930.

Traffic Soars

The September-October rise in freight movement, it was said, has been one of the most rapid in the history of the industry. Usually peak traffic of the year is reached about the middle of October.

Providing no more than the usual year-end let-down succeeds the autumn upturn, some analysts figured, the class 1 roads should earn enough in the final three months to offset losses earlier in the year and emerge from 1939 with a modest margin of income over expenses and fixed charges.

Many roads are taking advantage of this improvement in revenues to buy new equipment, repair old and carry out deferred maintenance expenditures on tracks and other property. This extra spending by the railroads, with the biggest capital investment of any industry, has been felt far and wide by suppliers of materials, manufacturers of equipment and by men who have returned to pay rolls.

Chastened Optimism

Rail leaders have been taking the revival of fortune with chastened optimism. They are waiting to see if it will last before they conclude the industry definitely is on its way back to profits.

If the improvement holds next year, some analysts calculated, the industry may well earn more than $300,000,000 net income after nearly a decade of profitless operations.

Once back in the profit money, many debt-ridden roads are expected to start paying off loans from banks and the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Wall Street circles also are looking for speedier settlement of creditor claims to permit reorganization of companies in receivership. About one-third of the Nation's rail mileage is in the hands of receivers or trustees.

Reasons for Pick Up

Accounting largely for the autumn pick up in freight are:

1. Greater movement of ore and coal to meet needs of the reviving heavy industries, particularly steel and machine-making plants.

2. Larger shipments of miscellaneous commodities to seaboard and consuming centers.

3. Step-up in handling of manufactured goods and raw materials as result of the war rush to accumulate inventories.

4. The usual seasonal increase in farm products going to market and to storage.

Echoing the steel boom, ore shipments have been running twice as large as a year ago.

Security Prices Drop Back Again After Threatening to Pass 1939 Highs Established in Trading of September 21

New York, Oct. 26.—Security markets dropped back once more today after threatening to pass the 1939 highs, established September 21.

Utilities and selected industrials, including motors, were in demand at rising prices in an active opening. The forward movement, however, bogged down on weakness of steels, realizing sales in the aircraft section and recurrence of reports that foreign holders were continuing to liquidate United States stocks in local markets.

Trading jogged along in steadier fashion in midsession until relieved by a brief flurry in rails, motivated by announcement that carloadings were at a nine-year peak. In the last hour selling broke out on a more general scale and final prices were at, or only, fractionally above the lows of the day.

Domestic industries were firm in the bond section, where other liens were inclined to ease, including Treasuries. The latter dipped when Wall Street heard that Secretary Morgenthau is planning to raise $250,000,000 in new money on Reconstruction Finance Corporation notes to reimburse the Treasury for recent advances.

Foreign Liens Sink

Foreign liens sank on appearance of new complication in the European war panorama. Sterling, French and Belgian francs and the Norwegian and Swiss monetary units were lower in dollar terms. Britain lowered the bank rate as a preliminary to war-time financing on a major scale.

In commodity sections speculative incentive lay dormant. Cotton advanced early, but reached to close 2 to 6 points down. Wheat lost ¾ to 1⅛ on news of rain in the winter wheat belt.

The delay in Congress over positive action on neutrality hampered forces on the long side of securities. Backers continued to insist that the business recovery has outrun the stock market, but admitted presence of quite a large percentage of traders willing to take short, quick profits. Foreign liquidation, meanwhile, was estimated to be continuing in orderly fashion but in sufficient volume to prevent extension of rallies such as occurred Wednesday.

G. M. Holds Part of Rise

There were some active openings. General Motors coming out on 6,000 shares at 56⅞, up ⅜ and a new high and held a small part of the rise at the finish. U. S. Steel opened on 3,000 shares; New York Central on 4,500; International Paper on 2,500; Wheeling Steel on 1,100, and Bendix on 3,200. The latter two recorded new tops. It was at this stage of trading that tickers ran a bit late.

In other groups, new highs were recorded by Celanese, Columbia Carbon, Electric Auto Lite, International Paper preferred, McCrory Stores, McKellar Stores, Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck. All reacted later. Losses of a point or more appeared at the close in American Smelting, Bethlehem and U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Westinghouse, United Aircraft and International Harvester.

Belgian Railways preferred plunged 13¾ points to a new low at 56 on one transaction. A few sales sent Interstate Department Stores soaring 9¾ points to 85. Curtiss Wright once more led the active list, ending unchanged. Other actives including North American Aviation, Yellow Truck, International Nickel, Pennsylvania Railroad and American Radiator all were ranged behind minus signs despite strength in early stages of the session. Consolidated Edison ended ⅝ higher in a utility section that was the only firm spot in the list.

Steel Dividend Doubted

Some of the day's most important industrial and financial news came after the close of trading. Bethlehem reported substantial earnings for the third quarter on an operating rate averaging more than 20 points under the current schedule of the company's plants. Directors authorized $1 a share on common stock following resumption of dividends, at 50 cents, in the preceding quarter. Mr. Grace, the president, said that orders on Bethlehem's books are currently larger than at any time since the World War.

Reports from two important companies gave traders valuable information on situations which have been discussed copiously in recent weeks—whether the war will have an adverse effect on the business machines industry and if taxes and the rise in leaf tobacco prices will shorten profits of the cigarette manufacturers.

In the first instance, International Business Machines net for the nine months ended September 30 was substantially ahead of the like 1938 period without allowance for blocked foreign profits. Philip Morris, the first of the large tobacco companies to report for the first half of its fiscal year ended September 30, showed earnings 20 per cent ahead of the comparable 1938 months.

Federal, Foreign Bonds Slip

Irregular conditions prevailed today in the listed bond market, with United States Treasury and foreign dollar loans inclined to seek lower levels, while speculative domestic securities showed gains and losses in about equal numbers. The Treasury announcement of new money financing for the RFC sent the market for high-grade investment issues lower. Foreigns were down on indications that the European war soon may result in bitter fighting. Our own speculative list failed to display any definite tendency. Turnover was $9,290,000.

The Treasury intimation of an early $250,000,000 new money flotation took the market by surprise, for there was no expectation of another loan so soon after the CCC and Treasury note operations. Both short and long Treasury obligations slumped heavily, the losses ranging from 1-32 to 25-32 point. Guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations also were marked lower. Telephone bonds were fractionally lower, in the corporate section, and minor changes were registered in best utility, railroad and industrial bonds.

Speculative carrier issues were churned about, but the changes were almost entirely fractional and gains and losses were equally prominent at the end. Local traction bonds lost some of their recent gains, owing mainly to unsettlement in New York City and other high grade bonds. Holding company and convertible issues developed some uncertainty, as did other special groups.

Foreign dollar bonds reflected apprehensions of developing hostilities between the major powers of Europe, and the repercussions such fighting might entail for others. German bonds dipped, while losses of 1 to 2 points appeared in Australian and Canadian issues. Scandinavian, Belgian and Italian bonds were shrply lower. Latin-American dollar obligations were dull and mostly lower.

Late Liquidation Wipes Out Gains In Cotton Prices

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—A late flurry of selling in cotton futures wiped out early gains today and left the market 1 to 6 points lower.

Selling was given momentum when traders observed the downward drift in security prices and other staples.

The Columbia Federal Savings & Loan Association, formerly the Columbia Building Association, was presented its charter yesterday by James Towhy, govenor of the Federal Home Loan Bank System. Clarence E. Kefauver, secretary, accepted it for the shareholders.

Decision to federalize was approved by the shareholders on October 12 and under the new provisions the association is now empowered to make loans on homes in the suburban communities of Maryland and Virginia.

Following delivery of the charter, directors met and reappointed officers. John B. Harrell will continue as president, C. Gay Harrell, vice-president and treasurer; Clarence E. Kefauver, secretary and William E. Poulton, assistant secretary. Total assets of the Columbia Federal are estimated to be in excess of $5,135,000.

Building Awards Rise 11% in Week

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Increased activity on the part of private capital lifted engineering construction awards for the week ended Tuesday to $54,263,000, higher by 11 per cent than the previous week and 20 per cent above a year ago, Engineering News-Record reported today.

Private awards, which were 94 per cent larger than the week before and 156 per cent greater than the corresponding week last year, exceeded public construction for the second time in three weeks. Until two weeks ago, private buildings had not exceeded public construction since April, 1938, when Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. started a large-scale housing development.

Chinese Buy Downtown Church Site

Dr. Hung Plans to Spend $20,000 on New Religious Project

Purchase of a downtown site for a proposed parish hall and church edifice was announced last night by officials of the Chinese Community Church, now worshiping at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

DR. HUNG

Comprising the brick dwelling at 1011 L street northwest, and the adjoining lot, the project will involve an expenditure of about $20,000, covering the sale price and the cost of remodeling the structure into a parish hall, and also living quarters for Dr. C. C. Hung, the pastor, and his family.

Faces Gompers Statue

Ideally located—being just a few blocks from Washington's Chinatown—the property faces the statue of Samuel Gompers in the triangle at L and Eleventh street and Massachusetts avenue, and has a 45-foot frontage and 120-foot depth.

The basement of the L street building will be converted into recreational and religious educational rooms for the congregation's young people, said Dr. Hung, expressing the hope that erection of the church edifice will come within five years.

On the first floor will be an assembly hall for lectures, prayer meetings and students' club gatherings; a reception room, library, kitchen and other facilities, while the top floor will be used by Chinese students for living rooms. Dr. Hung and his family will occupy the second floor.

Thompson Heads Drive

Eliot Thompson, of the Washington Loan and Trust Co., and Col. William O. Tufts, prominent layman of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church, are chairman and vice chairman, respectively, of the building committee for the project, which marks the second major step in the congregation's attempt to secure a permanent place of worship.

The parish hall is expected to be ready for occupancy about December 1.

The Chinese Community Church was formally organized in May, 1933, and incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia.

Dr. Hung came to the local church in 1935 from Detroit, where he was in charge of the Chinese work at the Central Methodist Church. Previously, he served as pastor of the Chinese Congregational Church in San Diego, Calif., and was once Y. M. C. A. secretary in Honolulu.

Midnight Stargazers to See 99.2% Eclipse of Moon Here

Phenomenon Will Begin at 11:54 Tonight; Observatories Mostly Apathetic, and Naval One Will Be Closed to Public

A partial eclipse of the moon—99.2 per cent—is scheduled to start at 11:54:30 p. m. tonight, and reach its peak at 1:36:12 a. m. tomorrow. Full moon is due at 1:42 a. m. tomorrow.

The beginning of the eclipse will be visible from Europe, the western part of Africa, and North and South America, and the ending from North and South America, the eastern part of Australia and northeastern Asia. It will all be over at 3:18:12 a. m. tomorrow.

Though amateur moon-gazers in the District and elsewhere are expected to view the phenomenon in large numbers without telescopes, a Georgetown University astronomer last night said the lunar eclipse would attract little or no attention at observatories.

Eclipses of the sun are an opportunity for astronomers to study features of the fiery body that cannot normally be seen, he said, but an eclipse of the moon yields no such revelations. Experts at Georgetown will check to make sure the eclipse begins and ends on schedule, but will make no other observations, he added.

Although the eight-week rule closing the Naval Observatory to visitors will be relaxed today for the Navy Day, the "open house" will be over before the eclipse begins.

Mrs. Newlands Dies; Widow Of Senator

Her Husband Was One Of the Founders Of Chevy Chase

Mrs. Edith McAllister Newlands, 79, widow of Senator Francis G. Newlands (Democrat), of Nevada, died yesterday at her home, 2326 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Born in San Francisco, Mrs. Newlands lived in Washington for the last 46 years. Mr. Newlands served in five succeeding Congresses as a Representative and from 1903 to his death in 1917 as a Senator. Six years ago this month, his friends and admirers dedicated a fountain in Chevy Chase Circle to his memory. He was one of the founders of Chevy Chase.

The daughter of Judge Hall McAllister, Mrs. Newlands was educated in France. She was married in San Francisco in 1888 and moved to Nevada. Five years later he was elected to Congress.

Surviving are her sister, Mrs. Henry Pritchett, who is on her way here from her California home; Mrs. Edith Newlands Johnston, of 1609 Twenty-second street northwest, and Mrs. William Johnston, of Reno, Nev., both daughters of the late Senator by a previous marriage; and a niece, Mrs. Charles C. Glover, of 4200 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Private services will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at her home. She will be buried beside the Senator in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Belgian, German Get Nobel Prizes In Medicine

Stockholm, Oct. 26 (AP).—Prof. Corneille Heymans, of Ghent, Belgium, and Prof. Gerhart Domagk, of Germany, today received the Nobel awards for 1938 and 1939, respectively, in physiological medicine.

Prof. Heymans was given the award for his work on respiratory ills and Domagk for his studies on the use of sulfanilamide compounds, important in the treatment of pneumonia and infectious diseases.

Prof. Domagk made important discoveries on the chemo-therapeutical effect of tontosil, sulphur and compounds preceding sulfanilamide.

Berlin, Oct. 26 (DNB)—Prof. Gerhard Domagk cannot, under present law, accept the Nobel Prize of $40,000 awarded to him today in Stockholm, but it was reported tonight that his superiors would appeal to Chancellor Hitler for an exception in his case.

Hitler banned Nobel prizes to Germans following the award of the peace prize of 1935 to Carl von Ossietzky, pacifist writer, then in the concentration camp at Papenburg.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Harold Sharpsteen, Atlanta expert, tells how today's hand was played by an all-too-hurried declarer. Had South taken time to consider his problem he would not have lost his contract. Here is the way he bungled it:

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

	♠ K J 2 ♡ K 7 ◇ 8 6 5 ♣ J 9 8 6 4
♠ 10 8 4 ♡ Q J 6 3 ◇ Q 7 4 3 ♣ Q 5	WEST / EAST	♠ Q 9 6 3 ♡ 8 2 ◇ J 10 2 ♣ A 7 3 2
	♠ A 7 5 ♡ A 10 9 5 4 ◇ A K 9 ♣ K 10

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT.	Pass	2 NT.	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

The opening lead: 3 ◇

West led his fourth best diamond, which declarer took with the king. East having put up his ten. He scanned his hand, saw that his longest suit was hearts, and banged down a low heart to the king. He came back with the heart seven, finessed the nine losing to West's jack. West continued the diamond suit and declarer's ace was forced out. He now tried to clear the heart suit, but when East showed out as he played the ace he conceded defeat.

He was set one trick, losing two hearts, two diamonds and a club.

"But had you been South's partner," comments Sharpsteen, "you would not have been satisfied with his alibi about the heart suit failing to break.

"With the opening lead and dummy's spread before him, South only needed to apply a bit of simple arithmetic to make his contract. In the combined hands there are two certain spade tricks, two sure diamond tricks, six positive winners in all.

"South needs three more tricks to insure his contract. With ample entry cards in both hands, he can afford to give two club tricks to the missing ace and queen and then make three clubs for his contract.

"He must lose the lead twice to accomplish his purpose but there is no problem in this connection, as he holds a double stopper in the other three suits."

Declarer wins three no trump, giving up two diamonds and two clubs.

Seasoned Timber

By Dorothy Canfield

Chapter 3

TIMOTHY turned away and opened the door to the cellar stairs. "Hey, Uncle Tim!" shouted Canby from the upper landing. "Leave that furnace alone! That's my job!" He came racing down the stairs four at a stride.

Timothy stood back to let him pass, saying, "Thanks. That's very good of you, Canby. Better not close the draughts too tightly. When I looked at the thermometer just now I saw it stands at 17 below."

He felt nothing. Almost nothing, that is. No more than the inconsiderable prick from the point of a hypodermic needle as it slides under the skin.

Up through the register came the rattle of grate-bars in the cellar, the swish of coal shoveled with energy on the fire. The furnace door clanged shut. Canby was doing the job with his usual vehemence.

Timothy was annoyed by the clatter. "What's the matter with the boy? There's no need to knock things around like that," he thought disapprovingly. "If he'd put some of that slam-bang energy of his into sticking at what he undertakes . . ."

Without waiting for Canby to reappear, he called down the register, "Well, good night, I'm off to bed," and went upstairs rather rapidly.

AFTER HE was in his own room with the door closed, he found that he was desperately tired. Odd that he should be so much more tired tonight after a quiet day indoors, than last night after that wild expedition in the cold and snow. Was that only last night? Had only one single day gone by since he had seen Susan? It was not to be believed? The 24 hours without her seemed longer than the two happy months that had slid so quickly between his fingers. He undressed quickly, opened the window, turned out the light, went to bed. But he was too tired now to see her in the darkness. Or was he still too much stirred up by the memories and ideas he had been talking about? What had possessed him to say all that—to talk so intimately about the Academy with Canby? It was because he had thought he would never see the boy again. And after all, he was staying on. A foolish notion that was! There was nothing in Clifford for him. But he was so fitful that by tomorrow morning he would probably have another notion.

Turning restlessly in bed, Timothy kept thinking of points he had meant to make, of objections latent in Canby's mind that he could have raised and met, of phrases that would have expressed his ideas more accurately. His ideas! They were probably no more than his personal dislike for crowds—and that was probably a form of vanity. Were "ideas" ever anything but dressed-up personal likes and dislikes and vanity? He thought again of the anonymous mass in that hellish din on Fourteenth street—he thought of the brutally crowded and bewildered children in the big city school as he had seen it, years ago, had described it to him—but was there anything better in the desperate economies by which alone the lame pinched life of the academy could be kept going? Or in the irrevocable poverty barring the way of the factory workers' children at the depot, or among the back-roads farmers? Wasn't it watery Longfellow sentimentality to claim that the mere isolation of their lives gave them dignity? Weren't his theories merely a defense of his own inglorious role in life? Were anybody's theories more than self-defense and special pleading? His heart sank as though such doubts were new instead of being dismally familiar. He tried to remind himself that when he felt this universal gloom about the human race it generally came from nothing more elevated than indigestion.

THE TALL OLD clock downstairs struck 12. And then half past. He dropped off, sleeping he did not know how long, till he woke himself by a loud "No! Oh, no!" The sound of his voice in the dark was startling. What could he have been dreaming. It was still dead black night. He got up and looked out of the open window. Above the long bulk of The Wall, the winter stars sparkled in cold malice. They frightened him. "Oh, Susan, darling Susan, why did you go away?" he thought longingly, and, his teeth chattering, got back between his chilled sheets in a misery of loneliness and apprehension. "Perhaps I'm not entirely waked up from a bad dream," he thought. He tried his formula for relaxation, put his arms up and clasped his hands behind his head. But his room was now intensely cold. He began to sneeze, took them down and burrowed forlornly under the covers.

In the morning he thought, as he shaved, "What an idiot a person is to let those night glooms get him down . . . even for an instant. When we know perfectly well they are nothing more than slow circulation of the blood. They always disappear when you get up in the morning and begin to stir around."

It was Sunday. Was it possible that it was only on Friday night that Susan had gone and Canby had come?

SOMETHING SAID at the breakfast table made Canby cry out incredulously, "You're not going to church!"

"Don't you remember I always go to church?"

"Tim's a vestryman. So was his father. And his grandfather. We Coultons were church people, too. Would you have had us Dissenters? That ivory-headed cane that Timothy carries, it was given to . . ."

lack of respect for inherited family ideas. "If it's to stay with me you're not going to church you'd better go," she told him. "I'm not feeling in the least sociable."

"Never fear," said Canby rudely, "with six inches of powder snow on crust and the spring thaw almost here I don't feel any more sociable than you do."

But after breakfast he said wonderingly, watching Timothy get into his overcoat, "Really, Uncle Tim, how can you? Don't tell me you believe in the Articles of Faith and what-not?"

"I won't bother you by telling you anything about it, Canby, except that I like the service. I like the rector, too."

Canby said tolerantly, "Well, of course, religion hasn't enough pep now to hurt anything. I suppose there's no great need to rear back against it any more."

Aunt Lavinia snorted in amusement. Canby looked first surprised at her laugh and then nettled. Ignoring it and her, he asked Timothy, "Is the rector still that man with the big dark-crimson birthmark on his face? I sort of liked him too. Well, under the circumstances I guess I'll let you go."

"Very obliging of you, I'm sure," said Timothy, reaching for his stick and letting himself out of the front door.

Walking soberly to church, he thought of a reason for going he had not told Canby—that church was now the only place left where he sometimes saw his mother, his young mother sitting between her two sons. The murmur of her beautiful voice came and went through the familiar prayers. "Almighty and most merciful Father, we have erred and strayed from thy ways like lost sheep. We have followed too much the devices and desires of our own hearts . . ." They were not only admirably chosen words, arranged in a magnificent rhythm, for him they were a charm, a spell, a magic formula which sometimes loosed him from the barren complexities and responsibilities of his adult life, and let him breathe once more for an instant the untroubled faith-in-life of his boyhood.

But this was not one of the good Sundays. He did not find his mother in church, only the usual dusty elderly people and wriggling children—and, vaguely disquieting to him, the assiduous young Bowen, who had now taken to very High Church genuflections.

When after the service he went back up Academy Hill, Canby in his new ski-clothes, well powdered now with snow, was showing six or seven tall academy boys how to double-stem, choosing as terrain the steep slope of the Lundy Brook Hollow down which nobody had ever before dreamed of venturing on skis. Timothy stood for a moment watching their long legs, grotesquely knock-kneed in imitation of Canby's, disappearing over the rim for a short run, sidestepping back up to try it again. They were exhilarated by the new triumph. They shouted loudly back and forth, "Hey you, Ed!" and, "Keep your heels out!" Their breath was frosty in the still bright air. From time to time they bowed themselves between their poles, yelling with laughter at those who fell.

Canby saw the vestryman standing on the front walk with his Sunday overcoat, hat, gloves, and walking stick, and came poling himself back with a rhythmical sway. "Say, Uncle Tim, we're going across the valley to Hemlock, and up the lumber road to Hawley Pond and see if we can ski back down Dowling Hollow." His ugly face with its undershot jaw was ruddy with the cold, with the winter sun, with the exercise. Vitality blazed in him like a bonfire. To look at him was like hearing a shout.

"How about lunch?"

"We're going to eat on the way. I made myself some sandwiches and took a couple of apples."

He bent his knees, shot up in the air, flexed his body, came down facing the Hollow, and, thrusting his poles in with energy, slid forward with a swoon.

"You'll never do all that and get back before dark!" Timothy called after him warningly.

"Got flashlights!" Canby shouted over his shoulder and was gone.

My part in that exchange, thought Timothy walking up the steps, and opening the front door, was that of an elderly conscientious nusemaid.

"Just let me get you on skates!" he said.

"What's that?" asked Aunt Lavinia, coming down the stairs.

Timothy was taken aback. "I didn't know I said anything!"

"It's a sign of age coming on to be talking to yourself," said Aunt Lavinia helpfully. "I do it all the time lately, I notice." She added, "Melville has just been over to say that the water pipes in the domestic science room froze last night."

"The devil you say!" cried Timothy, dashing his hat down on a chair. "That means he didn't turn the water off when I told him to!" He was in a rage, foreseeing a plumber's bill with not a cent in the Academy repair fund to pay it.

"It's quite becoming to you to be angry," remarked Aunt Lavinia with interest. "Your color's better. You should do it oftener." She moved away into the living room. A faint odor of decay hung in her wake. She had forgotten again to take her bath.

THE FROZEN water pipes occupied all the rest of the day, for Timothy was determined not to have a plumber called in. He snatched a sandwich, got into some old clothes and with the old janitor, and later with Mr. Dewey, wrestled with hot cloths and a blow-torch, took unions apart painfully, and put them together again, crawled in from the basement under the floor at the back where the trouble usually came, only to find this time it was somewhere else, kept the furnace at top heat, all the time pushing and pulling against the dead weight of old Melville's conviction that each attempt could not but be futile. By 4 o'clock they had by laborious elimination found where the frozen place was; by 5 o'clock it was thawed; by half past the wet rags, pails, wrenches, blow-torch, gasoline can, and general clutter had been cleared away and Melville set at cleaning the floor. Timothy, drenched in perspiration and shivering with the cold, had just time to rush back to the house, bathe, dress, and take Aunt Lavinia down in the Ford to Miss Peck's for supper, where old Mrs. Washburn took and kept the center of the conversation with reminiscences of what her husband had done when the water pipes froze, or rather a long account of the wise, penetrating, and unanswerably right things she had always said to him on the subject.

No sign of Canby. He did not come back to the house till long after 9, cold, limping, stiff, starving, happy. They had skied all the way down Dowling Hollow and from there across the Searles Shelf road, and straight down over the side of the roof-steep slope of the valley, he told them ecstatically, drinking glass after glass of milk and eating bread and butter like an ogre. "It was great! The stars were just coming out when we scooted into that open field at the lower end of the Hollow. And were they blazing by the time we struck the Rollins upper pasture! It was swell! Skating's all right, but, Uncle Tim, you just ought to ski!" he said, stretching prodigiously and beginning to yawn. "Golly, it was certainly swell up there. That's a swell bunch of kids too. We're going off again tomorrow."

Timothy thought, "The adolescence of the boys has rubbed off on him. He's gone back to talking like a high school freshman." Canby began to yawn as terrifically as he had eaten. He could scarcely hold his eyes open long enough to finish his sixth glass of milk. "It's about time I got on a paying basis!" he said, tipping the big pitcher bottom-side up for the last drop.

They were all in bed by ten.

"Why, this is only Sunday night Only two days gone!" thought Timothy. It seemed two weeks. "That's because I don't feel well." He was shivering and yet hot. He wondered if he were coming down with a cold. As with an on-coming influenza he was oppressed by a low-spirited general apprension of nothing in particular. "It's having to fight old Melville's defeatism," he thought.

It took a day more of steady but vague physical discomfort, not to be explained by any physical cause, to make him perceive that from Canby's first mention of his plan to stay on, his body had been desperately trying to give a danger-signal to his stupidly self-important mind, witlessly dependent as it was on logic and evidence and other intellectual playthings.

To Be Continued.

The Federal Diary:

It's True, What They Say About Government

Factual Fancies Prove Anything's Possible To Your Uncle

By Alfred Friendly

The Federal Government, like the State of Texas, is so big that you can't tell a lie about it. Somewhere, the thing has happened.

Here are some true Federal whoppers:

The Office of Education has issued a vocational bulletin, telling grocery store owners how to operate their business. It advises them that when a customer asks for "a can of tomahtoes," stressing the "ah," the salesman should not repeat, "a can of tomatoes," since the buyer would take it as an implied correction.

The Department of Commerce offers courses in French, Spanish and German for employes, as does the Agriculture Department Graduate School. Yet a retired chief linguist for the State Department, who died a few days ago, was discovered to have worked for a salary at no time exceeding $3,000. He had a fluent command of 30 languages.

Less than 24 hours after its publication by the Dies Committee, the list of Federal employes associated with the League for Peace and Democracy had been seized upon by insurance and savings plan salesmen, and drummers of other commodities, as a sucker list.

Despite the fact that pressure for more and greater relief appropriations comes from every corner of the country, The Indian Service anticipates difficulties in spending an allotment made Wednesday of $25,000 to feed starving Navajo Indians. Some of the old braves, dying of famine in their isolated hogans, refuse to come to town to get assistance. The problem is for relief investigators to go out and find them.

The Civilian Conservation Corps yesterday announced authorization of a $5,000,000 order of clothing for the CCC camps, including 1,214,718 shoelaces and 2,558,126 pairs of sox.

An employe of the Government Printing Office a few days ago got his first pay raise in 21 years.

The Government conducts the most extensive and complete newspaper clipping bureau in the country, used by about 40 Senators and an undetermined number of Congressmen. On request, they are supplied with clips mentioning them or their pet projects, culled from about 400 daily American papers. The clipping bureau is, of course, the Press Intelligence Service, whose main work is for the executive branch. One of its most satisfied customers is none other than a professional advocate of Government economy, Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia.

An etching printed from plates engraved by James MacNeil Whistler can be bought for a few cents from the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

A personal investigator interviewing a Government lawyer concerning an applicant for a vacancy in the lawyer's office last week suddenly broke down and confessed that he, too, had a law degree and begged for the job.

The National Federation of Federal employes reports visits last week of Government employes stationed in Cuba, Paris and Athens who are nonetheless staunch union members.

The Bureau of Fisheries, in the Commerce Building, is in the establishment of the Secretary of Interior, whose North Building houses the offices of the Administrator of the Federal Works Agency, one of whose organizations, the Bureau of Public Roads, is located in an office building on Fourteenth street, and another, the Public Buildings Branch, is in the Treasury Department's Procurement Division warehouse.

Entries Sought For Halloween Parade Tuesday

Additional entries are needed in the Halloween parade, central feature of the civic celebration Tuesday night.

The parade, to be held on Constitution avenue, with attendant features, will be one of the greatest attractions in Washington in several years," said John J. Hasley, committee chairman, yesterday, adding that "in order to have a super-celebration we need more entries." There is still time, he said.

The floats and other entries, however, are already in record number over past years, it was stated. Twenty-one large inflated figures will be sponsored by department stores. There will be a record number of bands.

Rabbi Breslau to Speak At B'nai Israel Tonight

Rabbi Isadore Breslau, president of the local Zionist district, will speak at weekly Sabbath services tonight in B'nai Israel Synagogue, Fourteenth and Emerson streets northwest. An open forum discussion of the subject, "Palestine's Future in the Light of Present Day Events," will be conducted afterward.

Keneipp Talks Tonight To Anacostia Citizens

George E. Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, will address the Anacostia Citizens Association tonight on pedestrian protection. He is a member of the "flying squadron" of citizens sponsored by the department of vehicles and traffic.

Dr. Sullivan to Open White Memorial Series

The fall series of William Alanson White memorial lectures will be opened in the Interior Department auditorium at 8:30 p. m. today with Dr. Harry Stack Sullivan speaking on "Conceptions of Modern Psychiatry."

Dr. Sullivan is president of the William Alanson White Psychiatric Foundation and professor of psychiatry at Georgetown University Medical School.

Rift in Jolson-Keeler Union Shock to Comedian's Family

Al Jolson blames his separation from Ruby Keeler upon "family troubles." Al and Ruby, his dancing protege, who made Hollywood's most quoted "perfect" marriage, are shown with their adopted son, Al, jr., 4, before "those gray skies" fogged their romance

Al's Mother and Brother, Residing in Capital, Express Surprise and Regret at Separation of Actor and Dancer

Rumors of a rift in the Al Jolson-Ruby Keeler household shocked and surprised the mammy singer's family here yesterday, but they could offer no explanation of what caused it or whether it was likely to be permanent.

"It came as a shock to me when I read about it in the paper this morning," said Al's brother George, proprietor of a drug store at 5000 First street northwest. "I had a letter from him just the other day and he said nothing about any trouble. I thought everything was fine. And then three or four months ago I saw him in New York, and he came down here too, and used to call up Ruby every night.

"I hope they get back together again," he said. "It's really all a shock to me."

Mother Baffled

Al's mother, Mrs. M. R. Yoelson, of 1787 Lanier place northwest, was equally baffled. "We just don't know anything about it," she said.

The famous singer was born in Washington, May 26, 1886, the son of Rabbi Yoelson. Given the name of Asa, he changed it to Al Jolson when he went on the stage. He married Ruby Keeler, Canadian-born dancer, in New York on September 21, 1928. They have one adopted son, Al, jr. They added him to the family on May 7, 1935, as a baby of seven weeks.

Hope Dies Hard

Ruby and the boy were in seclusion yesterday at the Toluca Lake home of her parents, the Associated Press reported from Hollywood. Jolson meanwhile was staying at his 15-room Encino show place until his wife "made up her mind once and for all."

Family troubles the singer had not considered important enough to cause divorce brought about the separation, he was quoted as saying. In discussing the separation he had offered his Catholic wife $400 a week for life and a $50,000 settlement in the event she remarried, with a $100,000 trust fund for the child. Miss Keeler rejected the offer as insufficient, he added.

Played Together Once

Jolson appeared in several pictures in the last year, after four years of retirement, and is now working on "Swanee River," based on the life of the song writer, Stephen Collins Foster. The couple appeared together in one film, "Go Into Your Dance."

Peace Hope Dims In Chrysler Strike

Detroit, Oct. 26 (AP).—James F. Dewey, Labor Department conciliator, reported "no possibility of an immediate settlement" late today in negotiations on a union dispute in Chrysler Corporation plants which has made close to 100,000 automotive, rubber and glass workers idle.

Secret sessions conducted by Dewey were abandoned today and executives who had participated in them joined with other negotiators in a general conference.

Former WPA Head In Missouri Held As Tax Evader

Kansas City, Oct. 26 (AP).—Matthew S. Murray, former WPA administrator for Missouri, and Otto P. Higgins, former Kansas City police director, were indicted by a Federal grand jury today on charges of income tax evasion.

Murray resigned the WPA post several days ago. Higgins quit as police director last spring after Mayor Bryce B. Smith took control of the city hall and demanded a cleanup.

Both Murray and Higgins were lieutenants of Democratic Political Boss Tom Pendergast, imprisoned for dodging Federal income taxes.

Legion Party Tomorrow

Fort Stevens Post, No. 32, American Legion, will hold a Hallowe'en party in Stansbury Hall, Georgia and Concord avenues northwest, at 9 p. m. tomorrow. There will be an entertainment program an.. dancing.

Invitations have been extended to the Commissioners, members of House and Senate sub-committees on District appropriations, and officials of the Public Roads Administration. The party will leave the District Building in Capital Transit Co. buses at 1 p. m.

The Miami University Alumni Club of Washington will hold a "homecoming day" luncheon meeting in National Zoological Park at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow. Dr. William M. Mann, Zoo director, will address the group. The 130-year-old university at Oxford, Ohio, is not to be confused with the University of Miami at Coral Gables, Fla.

Union Mission to Hold Banquet Tomorrow

Washingtonians donated some 10,000 pieces of clothing to the Central Union Mission this year for distribution to needy men, women and children, the mission announced yesterday. The organization will hold its annual banquet at the Hotel Mayflower at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow.
